Lehman Bows To Roosevelt; To Run Again For Governor

New Yorker Will Seek Re-election on New Deal Planks.

Republicans Jeer; Farley Confident

Liberty League Denies Any Party Ties; Challenges Charges.

By Robert C. Albright.

Yielding to strong party pressure and a written entreaty by the President, Gov. Lehman of New York, announced yesterday he will seek re-election for a third term as Governor on New Deal planks of "equal opportunity and social security."

Conflicting views of the stroke were taken immediately by spokesmen for the two major parties. Jeering at the unusual "draft" procedure, Chairman John Hamilton, of the Republican National Committee, said:

"It doesn't make any difference whom they get to run for Governor in Republican States, they still can't put Roosevelt over.

In Atlantic City, Chairman James A. Farley of the Democratic National Committee said it meant Lehman and President Roosevelt would "carry New York State by greater majorities this year than they did in 1932."

League Denies Charges.

Meanwhile, in a defensive statement, the executive committee of the American Liberty League, meeting in New York, denied any party affiliations, and challenged Farley to produce concrete evidence in support of his Philadelphia Convention statement that the league had financed any "undercover agency that has disgraced American politics with appeals to race prejudice or religious intolerance."

Following a meeting of leaders of the league, including Alfred E. Smith, Irene de Pont, Jouett Shouse and others, a statement was issued which read in part:

"The American Liberty League was created as a non-partisan organization to defend our traditional constitutional system of government against the many attacks being made upon it. By a campaign of education and by factual analyses of legislative proposals the league has endeavored to bring clearly before the people the efforts that are being made to substitute unsuccessful and discredited experiments for our accepted form of government."

President Makes Plea.

Lehman's decision to run again, after announcing scarcely more than a month ago he would not be a candidate for re-election, was made public almost simultaneously at the Governor's New York offices and at the White House.

It followed a letter from the President addressed to "Dear Herbert," stressing joint views of Lehman and Roosevelt on social legislation, and asserting that "the next two years, I think, will be very critical ones, and what takes place in New York will have an outstanding effect all over the Nation."

In Washington, President Roosevelt called reporters in to tell them what he called the "good news." He had just talked to Lehman on the telephone.

"The Governor's decision not only pleases me, but it also makes very happy millions of people all over the United States," said the President. "It will be a good influence for the carrying of our program of social legislation in the broadest sense."

"Deeply Touched."

Gov. Lehman told reporters in New York that when he said on May 20 he would not run again, because of private considerations, he considered his decision final.

"Since then I have been deeply touched and stirred by the many expressions of confidence and friendship that have come to me from all parts of the country," he said. "I shall always be grateful for them.

"Regardless of personal considerations, however compelling, I feel that I can no longer resist the pleas of my party both in the State and in the Nation or of those with whom I have worked in closest association for many years and with whom I have waged the fight for equal opportunity and social security.

"Therefore if my party in this State chooses to nominate me again and if the people of the State again call on me for service I shall proudly accept the call and will during the coming two years devote myself wholeheartedly to the interest of the people of the State."

G. O. P. Scores Maneuver.

While New Dealers rejoiced at a decision they hoped would convey New York into the Democratic column in November, Republicans everywhere assailed the maneuver. From Syracuse, State Republican Chairman Melvin C. Eaton said the announcement was made "at the command of President Roosevelt."

"The Governor's vacillation during the past six weeks and his final surrender despite his protests certainly have not left him in a favorable light," said Eaton.

Eaton declared the Republicans "will enter the campaign with strengthened confidence in his defeat as well as the defeat of President Roosevelt."

Hamilton, youthful Republican National Committee chairman, ridiculed the Democratic strategy in an interview before leaving for Co-

COUNTESS COVADONGA.

Cuban Wife of Alfonso's Son To Divorce Him as Incompatible

Countess Covadonga Plans to File Suit in Day or Two; Wants Freedom, No Alimony, She Says; Denies Intent to Remarry.

By the United Press.

Havana, Cuba, June 30.—Countess Covadonga, Cuban wife of the former heir to the Spanish throne, will begin suit for divorce "within a day or two" on a charge of incompatibility, she told the United Press tonight.

The count is at present in New York, where he is employed by the British Motors, Ltd. He lives at the St. Moritz Hotel.

"I want only complete freedom and will not seek alimony," she said. Later I may seek annulment of my marriage at the Vatican."

Asked whether she contemplated remarrying, the countess replied emphatically: "I should say not."

The pair was married June 21, 1933, at Lausanne, Switzerland, the count renouncing the title of Prince of Asturias and his rights to the nonexistent throne of Spain in order to wed the pretty Cuban commoner.

They had met in the summer of 1932 at a Lausanne sanitarium where both were undergoing treatment. Covadonga was urged by members of Spanish royalty to abandon the idea of marriage to a girl not of royal blood, but his mind was set and he wed the girl of his choice although it provoked a break with his father, former King Alfonso XIII of Spain.

J. P. Morgan Ill; Is Sped to Home In Special Car

Suffering From Neuritis, Financier Put Aboard Train on Stretcher.

By the United Press.

Boston, June 30.—Suffering from neuritis, J. Pierpont Morgan, the financier, was being sped to his Glen Cove (Long Island) home late tonight aboard a special car attached to the Quaker Express.

Morgan was taken ill two weeks ago at the West Manchester estate of his sister, Mrs. Stephen V. R. Crosby.

Under the utmost secrecy, he was taken to Prides Crossing railroad station near Manchester in a town ambulance early tonight and lifted aboard the special car in a stretcher carried by a policeman and a fireman. The car, chartered in the name of "J. M. Von Glahn," was attached to a Boston-bound train.

Arriving here, the car was transferred to the New York, New Haven & Hartford lines and attached to the Quaker Express, which left South Station at 9:35 p. m. (Eastern standard time), en route to New York via Providence, R. I., and New Haven, Conn.

At Manchester Dr. George P. Denny, who has been treating the banker, said Morgan's condition was not serious. He said his patient was suffering from an attack of neuritis which affected both arms and legs.

The physician said Morgan was borne on a stretcher "to spare him the pain of walking. He's improving and should be all right in about two or three weeks."

Zioncheck Fails To Get Passage Aboard Plane

Plans of Representative Marion A. Zioncheck to fly to his home in Seattle, Wash., from Chicago, were thwarted last night when the Northwest Airlines, on which he had booked passage, declined to take him as a passenger.

The Pudget Sound Representative and Capitol Policeman George Bishop, who is accompanying him on his homeward journey, were hustled from the plane just before it took off on its overnight flight across the continent.

They had taken their seats in the craft and the propellers already were warming up, when the airline reached the decision to lighten the load.

An attendant opened the door, thrust his head inside, and said that all reservations had been sold out from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Seattle.

After a brief and subdued argument, Zioncheck left the plane with Bishop. He had given an attendant $150 passage money, and this was returned at the offices of the airline.

Apparently convinced that nothing could be done, the Seattle lawmaker accepted the services of a police squad, and was driven to a railroad station in the Loop.

Boy, 9, Drowns in Potomac; Baker Dies in Channel Plunge

A boy was drowned in the Potomac yesterday, a man committed suicide by leaping into Washington Channel, the river yielded the body of a George Washington University student, who lost his life last Sunday when his canoe upset, and last night Harbor Police were dragging the waters of Eastern Branch beneath Benning Bridge for an unidentified man who was seen to disappear down a manhole.

Trapped in the eddies of the Potomac at the mouth of Dead Run, where he had gone with his older brother and another boy to snare minnows yesterday, Stanley Lee Smith, 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Stanley Smith, of Ingleside Va., was drowned.

His brother, J. Lloyd Smith, and a companion, William Triplett, both 10, heard Stanley, who had told them he was going to take a swim, shout for help.

They scrambled to the top of a ledge and saw his body being washed downstream. They summoned aid, but it was too late. Stanley's body had not been recovered late last night.

John Henry Edinger, 34-year-old baker, of 920 Seventh street southwest, calmly piled his clothes on a wharf at I and Water streets last night, told Paul Caspa, 13, a bystander, that he was going to stay under the water until he was dead, and then leaped into Washington Channel.

"This will be a good joke on all of them," he called as he jumped.

Caspa became alarmed and called police. Some time late Edinger's body was recovered in 10 feet of water, 10 feet from the wharf.

Police learned that Edinger has a wife, Emma, in an asylum at

States to Get $350,000,000 Relief Grant

Hopkins Hopes to Aid 3,000,000; Political Factors Denied.

D. C. Gets $1,032,500; $4,389,875 Goes to Kansas.

Finding funds on hand insufficient, the Works Progress Administration yesterday dipped into the new $1,425,000,000 relief appropriation and scattered $350,000,000 of it into every State "on the basis of need for jobs—not because of Democrats or Republicans." The money will keep 3,000,000 men employed through the summer at the wage prevailing in local communities.

Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia were allocated a total of $6,725,250. The District gets $1,032,500, Maryland gets $2,448,250 and Virginia gets $3,244,500.

Kansas, home State of Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee, received $4,389,875, as compared to a State by State average of about $7,000,000.

"The allotment to Kansas has nothing to do with Gov. Landon or politics," it was announced. "The money was allocated on the basis of need for jobs."

Funds allocated yesterday by Adminstrator Harry L. Hopkins do not actually become available to his organization until today, the beginning of the new fiscal year, but the Treasury sought the immediate financing of the program.

Approved by McCarl.

Retiring Comptroller General J. R. McCarl approved the necessary Treasury warrants early yesterday, and WPA announced its allocations immediately thereafter.

The new money made a total of $3,446,000,000 actually available for work relief during the next 12 months. Approximately $1,100,000 remains unspent from the relief appropriation in 1935, but this is divided among several relief agencies.

The new funds, from which yesterday's allocations were made, were carried in the deficiency and relief bill approved by Congress only the day before adjournment. President Roosevelt signed the bill June 22.

Administrator Hopkins, anticipating the new fiscal year, and because Congress has ordered that prevailing wages be paid, yesterday increased the $19 per month wage in Southern rural areas to $21. The increase, according to Hopkins' announcement, will be effective in communities of less than 5,000 population in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee.

At the same time, Hopkins sent orders to State administrators in the Midwestern drought section that all laborers in drought relief are to be paid the prevailing wage.

Meanwhile, in another Government relief agency, Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes revealed that the PWA revolving fund for loans and grants is now between $6,000,000,000 and $7,000,000,000. The fund was accumulated by the sale of PWA bonds by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and by Congressional appropriation. Ickes said he would confer with President Roosevelt before the end of the week to map a program for additional allotments. Permanent projects estimated to cost $3,000,000,000 already have received PWA approval, and these projects will get the preferece in allocations, although the door is not closed to new projects, Ickes said.

The Public Works Administration definitely has shelved the Passamoquoddy Tidal power project on the Bay of Fundy, Administrator Ickes declared, in answer to a question. "We never have approved 'Quoddy," he said, "and in view of

Divorce, Wedding Record Is Broken In City for June

Dan Cupid and his well-known adversary, Divorce, both established records in the District during June, it was shown yesterday when a tabulation of the marriage licenses issued during the month and the number of divorces granted was made public.

Mrs. Maude Rynex, clerk of the Marriage License Bureau, issued 950 marriage licenses during the month. At the same time, it was estimated, 196 divorces had been granted, most of them based on the Districts recently modified divorce law.

The number of licenses exceeds by 178 those issued in June, 1935. The number of divorces granted has no comparative figure since the law has been in effect less than a year.

Capital Man Dies In Traffic Mishap

Las Vegas, N. Mex., June 30 (AP).—William H. Stribling, 49, of Washington, D. C., was killed tonight when the automobile he was driving left the transcontinental highway near here.

Mrs. Stribling, slightly injured, said her husband was a first cousin of William L. (Young) Stribling, heavyweight boxer who met death at the peak of his career in a highway accident. An inquest was ordered.

The city directory lists a William H. Stribling living at 2111 Eighteenth street northwest. Efforts this morning to reach relatives there were fruitless.

U. S. to Ignore Cost in Fight On Drought

Government Prepared to Take Every Necessary Step, Says Hopkins.

83,000 Families Already Suffering, Officials of 5 States Declare.

By Sidney Olson.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace yesterday set a drought deadline—a tentative date from 10 days to three weeks hence—as the point at which the present serious drought will become a major disaster in the class of the crop-killing drought of 1934 if no alleviating rainfalls occur.

President Roosevelt, at his press conference yesterday, following a long luncheon conference with Wallace and Chester C. Davis, farm member of the Federal Reserve Board, described the drought situation as extremely serious.

He pointed out that the affected areas not only include withered crop regions in the North Central States, but large sections of Oklahoma and Arkansas and considerable territory in Tennessee and Kentucky.

Total Crop Failure Feared.

The President expressed fear that many crops in the Dakotas, eastern Montana and Wyoming would be total failures.

He said the Federal drought committee had as yet no estimates of the amount of funds necessary for drought relief. He said money would be available from the relief fund and also through the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation.

The latter funds would be for the purchase of cattle in affected areas, and for their processing and distribution to needy families.

Earlier Secretary Wallace had stated that the commodity corporation had the necessary powers for such action but no funds.

Cost to Be Ignored.

Meanwhile, in St. Paul, WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins, according to Associated Press dispatches, told a five-State conference of Governors and regional WPA administrators that the Government was prepared to do "all that needs to be done" without regard to cost.

Hopkins said he was prepared to put a drought relief program into operation within a few days. Officials of the five drought-stricken States of North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Wyoming and Montana met with him to outline a comprehensive aid program. They told Hopkins about 83,000 families already were suffering or were faced with imminent disaster.

Hopkins said:

"We want to give employment to persons whose incomes have been destroyed by the drought. We have made no estimates and have set no limits on the amount of money to be allotted."

He suggested immediate remedy by WPA projects, such as water conservation, road construction and rural school developments.

Subject to Qualifications.

Although conditions at present are generally held to be the same as when in late May, 1934, Secretary Wallace obtained a $500,000,000 drought relief appropriation, the present drought is subject to numerous qualifications, it appeared yesterday.

For instance, Secretary Wallace said that if enough rain came during the next few weeks to tide the corn crop over the hot weather, the crop would be one of the best on record.

Further, Kansas reported a potential wheat yield under the five-year average, but still much greater than last season's. Wheat futures sagged in Chicago on this report. Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and lower Michigan had "fair to good" rains in the last 24 hours, and Iowa reported moderate showers.

Secretary Wallace, before entraining late yesterday for Chicago, said he would confer with "certain persons" there, intimating the subject would be the possible need for a Government cattle-purchasing program similar to the one under which the Government bought 10,-

Storm Cools Off Suffering City; Bolt Hits Trolley

A thunderstorm accompanied by .80 of an inch of rain brought Washington's warm weather to an abrupt halt yesterday. Moderate temperatures and generally fair skies are forecast for today.

The weather man last night said he saw no hot weather in sight for the next few days, but added that the temperature probably will be climbing again by Saturday, the Fourth of July.

The mercury reached 85 degrees at 2:15 p. m. yesterday, but by 4 o'clock it had slid down to 70. Dark clouds which blotted out the sun drove the temperature down to 81 at 3 p. m. Within an hour it dropped another 9 degrees.

Lightning struck a car of the Arlington Fairfax Railroad, crippling it. Passengers and crew were unhurt. Damage to the car was estimated at $50. Another bolt struck the roof of the home of George M. Green in Lyon Village, Va. Damage was slight.

While Washington's temperature never soared above 85 degrees, most of Virginia sweltered. Richmond had an all-time June high with 102 degrees, reported at 2 p. m. Petersburg had 104 degrees and at noon Lynchburg thermometers registered 99.

Selassie's Plea Starts Riot at League Session; Italians Are Arrested

Long Quits as Envoy to Italy; Phillips Is Likely Successor

Ambassador Is Ailing; Veteran May Be Given Rome Post.

President Roosevelt yesterday announced he had received the resignation of Breckenridge Long, American Ambassador to Italy, and that he would accept it soon.

Reports were current immediately that the ace negotiator of the State Department — Undersecretary of State William Phillips—would be sent to the difficult diplomatic sector to iron out the delicate relations caused by the acquisition of Ethiopia by Italy.

President Roosevelt did not confirm this report. The State Department denied Phillips was being considered, and said the report Phillips already was on a ship bound for Rome was "like Mark Twain's death, greatly exaggerated, as Mr. Phillips is now at his desk."

Long was Assistant Secretary of State during the Wilson administration and twice a candidate for the United States Senate from Missouri. He has suffered from ill health, and his resignation will be accepted with regret.

Many sources were certain Phillips would be the appointee, and held it was only a matter of days before his assignment to Rome would be announced. He is a State Department veteran of 33 years, a former Ambassador to Belgium, and former Minister to Canada, and is generally regarded as an outstanding example of the highest type of career diplomat.

UNDER SECRETARY OF STATE WILLIAM PHILLIPS.

The problem of Italo-American relations, while eased considerably by the President's recent rescinding of the warning to Americans not to travel on Italian ships, and the lift-

Police Restore Order After Booes, Curses Greet Negus.

'You Deserted Us,' Emperor Asserts

Blamed for Incident, Fascist Journalists to Be Barred.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, June 30.—Riotous scenes of cursing and fighting in the galleries shattered the dignity of the League of Nations Assembly tonight when black-robed little Emperor Haile Selassie told the world's peace makers, "You deserted us to Italy."

Police were called in to restore order after a chorus of heckling booes and curses greeted the Emperor without an empire when he rose to make a final, dramatic plea for aid.

It was almost ten minutes before police restored order and the erstwhile ruler of Africa's last empire was allowed to resume and bitterly tell the league members:

"God and history will remember your judgment!"

Persons alleged to be Fascists started the tumult, shouting curses at the Negus in Italian, French and Spanish. Fighting broke out when League attaches tried to restore order. Only when police came and ousted the hecklers was calm restored.

Will Bar Italians.

Officials of the League of Nations announced late tonight they would cancel press cards of Italians as a result of the demonstration against the Emperor.

The standing committee of the International Association of Newspapermen accredited to the League adopted a resolution, "deploring and condemning the conduct of a group of Italian journalists."

The political atmosphere was tense as a group of Italians arrested in the galleries was still held by political police on charges of disorderly conduct and rioting. Authorities said they were all newspapermen.

The Swiss government was trying to decide whether the Fascists could be punished under the criminal code.

Italy May Withdraw.

There were unconfirmed reports Premier Mussolini angered at the privilege of speech and courtesies extended to the Negus, might withdraw Italy from the League.

When the demonstration in the galleries was squelched by police Haile Selassie said what he had to say, calmly and fully.

"I could not believe that 52 nations—among them the most powerful in the world—could be defeated by a single aggressor," he said sorrowfully.

The Emperor warned smaller members: "In this struggle I have been fighting the cause of all small countries against the greed of a powerful invader."

It was his first appearance before the League, which set out last fall in a futile effort to save his country from a nation it branded as an "aggressor."

Demonstrators in the galleries were hustled away to jail in taxicabs. They will be held, pending investigation of the startling manifestation.

Rumanian Leader Shouts.

A veteran leader of the League, Foreign Minister Nicolas Titulescu of Rumania, furious at the outraging of League dignity, stood in his seat and turning toward the rioters, shouted.

"Cease these barberous and uncivilized methods!" but only those at his elbow could hear.

At the close of his long speech Haile Selassie was heartily applauded and he received an ovation from the crowd outside the new $10,000,000 League palace as he left. The same crowd had booed the hecklers when they were carried out by police.

Premier Mussolini also communicated his views to the assembly through a memorandum describing Italy's action as "a sacred mission of civilization," in "the spirit of the League Covenant."

He suggested, however, the League "requires adequate reform" and asserted that Italy was willing to aid. The note was read by Premier Paul Van Zeeland of Belgium, president of the Assembly, elected to that of-

Auto Kills Man Crossing Street; Toll Now Is 45

Frederick Buchholz's Car Fells Aged Pedestrian; Woman Injured.

As the first half of the year ended at midnight, the city's traffic death toll for the period was 45.

One person was added to the list yesterday—John F. Oertel, 79, of Vienna, Va., who was killed at Nineteenth street and Constitution avenue by an automobile driven by Fred Buchholz, proprietor of the Occidental Hotel.

Oertel lay for hours in the District Morgue, unidentified. Late last night his son, John L. Oertel, of 3331 N street northwest, and his daughter, Miss Harrison Oertel, identified the body.

The 45 dead for the first six months of the year represented a substantial reduction of the number for the same period last year, 56.

Day's Traffic Happenings.

Other traffic happenings of the day were:

Jones Abney, 48, colored WPA worker, was exonerated of blame in the death of 6-year-old Eva Mae Combs, of 425 Second street northwest, by a coroner's jury. She was killed near her home by Abney's car. Two children, Josephine Gillespie and Georgia Spiridopoulos, friends of the dead girl, testified that she ran in front of the machine.

Judge John P. McMahon, of Police Court, issued a bench warrant for the arrest of Thomas Lee Lechlider, 19, of 614 Kenyon street northwest, when he failed to appear in court to answer a fifth offense speeding charge. Policeman E. G. Comingore told the court that he had paced the youth's car which he said was traveling 65 miles an hour on Rock Creek Church road.

Three Permits Revoked.

The Keystone Automobile Club announced an active campaign for strict regulation of parking lots in the District, charging that certain lots as being operated "negligently and irresponsibly."

The revocation of three persons operator's permits and the suspension of permits of 32 others was announced by the revocation board.

Officials Doubt Boy's Story of Mother's Death

Discrepancies Are Found in Account of Slaying of Club Hostess.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 30.—A complete recheck of all possibilities in the hotel-room slaying of comely Mrs. Florence Thompson Castle, 24, night club hostess, was ordered tonight as Police Capt. William O'Brien announced he was not overlooking the chance that even her 7-year-old son, "Jimmy" Thompson, might have perpetrated the mystifying crime.

"It's a terrible thing to say," the captain said, "but it's more than possible." He surmised that the lad might have "wanted to shoot firecrackers on the Fourth of July" over maternal opposition.

Meanwhile, police continued to investigate the life and acquaintances of the young woman, found dead in the bed she occupied with her son. The questioning of Sid Schaps, who admitted being in Mrs. Castle's room Sunday night, a few hours before her slaying continued and a hunt for James D. Britt, furrier, of Stevens Point, Wis., who had entertained the woman and a friend early this month, was pursued.

Investigators Skeptical.

Police investigators said they were skeptical of many parts of "Jimmy's" account of his mother's death. The boy had told a weird story of watching and talking to a "huge black man" who he said beat his mother over the head and choked her as she lay asleep.

Forcing delay of a coroner's inquest by refusing to let the boy testify until he was questioned further, the captain explained:

"The lad was too cool and collected for a child who had just seen his mother murdered.

"How could the boy go back to sleep after seeing his mother slugged like that?

"And then he said he woke up and saw his mother lying in a pool of blood beside him. But he took time to wash and dress before go-

Five Dead as D. C.-Bound Bus Crashes Near Natural Bridge

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va. (Wednesday), July 1.—A heavy bus, bound from Roanoke to Washington, rolled over five times atop the famous Natural Bridge, near here today, killing five of its passengers.

At least 15 other persons were injured. None could be identified immediately. Lexington Police Officer J. L. Williams said State police were at the scene attempting to extricate dead and wounded persons from the wrecked vehicle.

Eight victims, one dead, were brought to the Jackson Hospital here. The bridge, known to thousands of tourists, is some 30 miles from here.

Williams said the heavy machine skidded, and it rolled over and over but it did not plunge from the bridge.

Roosevelt Rule Ruining Nation, Mills Asserts

Ex-Treasury Head Assails Plank Seeking Change in Constitution.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 30.—A double-barreled blast was fired in a speech by Ogden L. Mills tonight against President Roosevelt and the platform on which he stands for re-election.

Mills, who was Secretary of the Treasury in the Hoover Administration, assailed President Roosevelt's fiscal policies as "sweeping the Nation headlong to inflation, bankruptcy and ruin."

His attack on the Democratic platform was centered on the plank that calls for a constitutional amendment which, Mills said, would "mean the end of State's rights, and ultimately of the individual liberty we have rightly regarded as our most priceless possession."

The former Treasury chief, in an address prepared for delivery before the Women's National Republican Club, called this a "revolutionary proposal.

Governmental Intervention.

"The question at issue," he said, "is the transfer to the Federal Government of all of the power hitherto reserved to the States, and an enormous extension of governmental intervention in the life of the people, all in furtherance of the establishment of a totally un-American system of paternalism.

"The truth is that the philosophy of the New Deal is much more closely related to Mussolini's declaration of 'everything within the State, nothing without the State * * *.'"

The New Deal was characterized by Mills as a "new party" which has repudiated the traditional principles of Democracy. Its platform, as adopted at Philadelphia, he called a "charter of personal centralized government."

The Republican platform, on the other hand, was described as a "declaration of faith in free government, free men and free enterprise."

Balancing of Budget.

"The Republicans pledge themselves to stop the folly of uncontrolled expenditures and thereby to balance the budget," he said.

"Budget balancing will become possible when, and only when, Mr. Roosevelt is out of the White House.

"The man who loosed the flood gates of uncontrolled expenditure, who created this all-consuming bureaucracy, who built up these immense vested interests in Government spending, even if he will it—and he won't—can never arrest the torrent that is sweeping the Nation headlong to inflation, bankruptcy and ruin.

"A new captain can and will. His name is Landon; he comes from Kansas, and he's everything Roosevelt isn't."

Family Sails for Sweden In 40-Foot Fishing Ship

Louisburg, Nova Scotia, June 30 (AP).—An adventurous young Swedish couple and their three-month-old daughter set sail tonight across the Atlantic Ocean for their homeland in a 40-foot swordfishing vessel.

Mr. and Mrs. Torsten O'Delmark took lessons in navigation for two months while living in Montreal. Then they came to this port, purchased the fishing boat, the H. L. Fleet, made their own alterations and left full of confidence they could steer the craft safely across the Atlantic.

Politics and People

Lehman Persuaded to Run Again in N. Y. Because Roosevelt Needs Him.

By Franklyn Waltman

One of the most remarkable aspects of the current political campaign is the extensive and serious efforts, now crowned by success, made to persuade Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York to seek re-election after he had decided to retire to private life.

WALTMAN.

After the unprecedented appeal made to Gov. Lehman at the Democratic National Convention last week it was clear that he must accede to the demands of his party that he stand for re-election. No man could resist the pressure placed on the Governor of New York.

No man could rest in peace after being told by party leaders that on his decision might rest the outcome of the Presidential election this year and the future of progressive social legislation in the United States.

Democratic Chairman James A. Farley and President Roosevelt told Gov. Lehman these things. To make their appeal more effective they inspired an unprecedented demonstration in the national convention as a tribute and as a further plea to Gov. Lehman. He has responded as would any other man placed in a like position by his friends.

But why did President Roosevelt and Chairman Farley go to such extremities to persuade Gov. Lehman to run again this year? The answer obviously is that they believe they need him on the ticket in order to carry New York and they realize the possibility that New York's 45 electoral votes might be decisive in this year's campaign.

Their exaggerated insistence that Gov. Lehman seek re-election constituted on the part of the Roosevelt leaders a confession of weakness—a confession they would not have made six months ago. Then they were confident that despite who ran or did not run with the President, he was certain of overwhelming victory this year.

But that feeling of cockiness, so evident in March and April, has now disappeared. Instead of Chairman Farley telling his cohorts that nothing under heaven can stop their forward march, he now admonishes them to avoid over-confidence and instructs them to go to work with sleeves rolled up and shirt necks open.

Instead of Mr. Roosevelt's presence on the ticket being a boon and a help to any candidate seeking State office, Mr. Farley gives the impression that the President must rely on local figures to pull him through. He seeks to have Frank Murphy run for Governor of Michigan. He makes an effort to have the Democrats indorse Senator James Couzens for the Senate. He is ready to ditch the loyal Democratic organization in Minnesota and Wisconsin in order to win the favor of the Farmer-Laborites and the Progressives.

At the convention Mr. Farley made supreme efforts to get popular local figures in the party to say a good word for Mr. Roosevelt in the form of seconding speeches. Senator Vic Donahey, of Ohio, in order to avoid such pressure, abruptly left the convention. Senator Millard E. Tydings, of Maryland, at the last minute succumbed to the pressure, but made a brief speech which damned the President—not with faint praise—but without praise at all.

And so great was the rejoicing in the White House over the decision of Gov. Lehman to run that the President could not restrain his joy until his regularly scheduled afternoon press conference, but had to summon the correspondents before him in the morning to express his pleasure.

If these actions are not indicative of fright and alarm within the New Deal high political command, they constitute queer and unorthodox pieces of strategy which baffle interpretation. The Lehman incident alone is without precedent in American political history.

It is true that in 1928 Al Smith made an unusual and great effort to persuade Franklin D. Roosevelt he run for the governorship of New York, cajoling him from a sick-bed, figuratively speaking, to take that step which catapulted him into the White House four years later.

Although Al Smith argued with Mr. Roosevelt that the latter's presence on the ticket might be necessary for a Democratic victory in New York, he did not mobilize a national convention in that plea, nor did he place Mr. Roosevelt in the difficult position in which the latter placed Gov. Lehman.

The truth of the New York situation is that the Roosevelt strategists insisted on Gov. Lehman's candidacy chiefly because the latter is a Jew and Jews constitute a formidable voting bloc in New York City. Normally the bulk of this Jewish vote goes Republican in national elections, even though it is Democratic in local contests.

But the Jews this year are an anxious and mentally distressed people everywhere. They have become alarmed over the persecution of their coreligionists abroad and fear that anti-Semitism may get a foothold in this country. They feel kindly toward anyone advocating one of their number for high place, for that, if successful, serves as a safeguard for them against persecution.

Of less importance is the fact that Gov. Lehman has made a good record and has retained the respect of the business community of New York, while at the same time winning the admiration of those interested in social work for his endeavors along that line. And his decision to run eliminates the possibility of a sharp primary fight over the gubernatorial nomination, in which the President would find it difficult to abstain, with injury to him no matter how he turned.

But in the end the strategy of persuading Gov. Lehman to seek re-election may be no more successful than was the Smith plan to have Mr. Roosevelt as his running mate in 1928. In the latter year Mr. Roosevelt won, Mr. Smith lost. In 1932 Mr. Lehman ran 250,000 votes ahead of Mr. Roosevelt. New York usually has a Democratic Governor. It has given Democratic candidates for President pluralities but twice in 40 years.

Supreme Court Draws Rebuke From Wallace

Book Pictures Tribunal as Upholding States' Rights 'at Any Cost.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 30.—The Administration's sharpest critic of the Supreme Court, in a book to be published tomorrow, groups that body with the Republican Party and the Liberty League as upholders—"at least part of the time"—of the doctrine of States' rights "at any cost."

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, in "Whose Constitution," likewise calls for establishment of a cooperative commonwealth.

It was Wallace who publicly asserted several months ago that the court's return to processors of taxes collected under the defunct AAA permitted a "legalized steal."

Balancing a major part of the book's philosophy on the thesis that this was intended to be a "union of people instead of States," the Secretary asserted:

"The doctrine of States' rights, now invoked by the Supreme Court, was a barrier to progress even in 1787, and was the cause of terrible conflict in 1861. Today, the States mark no economic boundaries that make sense * * *."

He went on:

"Only the large corporations, the Republican Party, New England, the Liberty League and most of the newspapers of the country are apparently for States' rights today at any cost.

Supreme Court Added.

"To these sections, interests and groups, however, must be added one other body, at least part of the time. The Supreme Court has disagreed in a number of instances with the position taken by the Administration on the matter of Federal powers.

"In the case of NRA, it held that the commerce clause of the Constitution did not give the Federal Government the powers it had assumed to set up rules for business. In the case of AAA, it held that its regulation, whether or not in the interests of the general welfare, is a power not granted to the Federal Government * * *

"* * * I do not doubt that through the multiplicity of legal precedents available to the Supreme Court it is possible to take a narrow view of the Constitution which virtually limits the scope of granted Federal powers to those which would have seemed useful under the conditions of 1787 * * *."

"* * * were agriculture truly a local matter in 1936, as the Supreme Court says it is, half of the people of the United States would quickly starve."

Constitution Held Cue.

The Secretary, who said it "might be contended" that the constitutional convention of 1787 was "packed by the propertied classes," remarked, nevertheless, that the "cue for solution of our present problems" lay in the Constitution itself.

But, he went on, to set up the Constitution "as a sacred and changeless authority on charging material conditions is to deny the kernel and worship the husk."

Saying the people must "become actively imbued with the idea of a co-operative society," Wallace added he believed the majority already was "receptive to the general purposes and possibilities of a co-operative commonwealth."

At the close of his book, he said: "We * * * should eventually be prepared if necessary to work out in the spirit of Madison a mechanism which would embody the spirit of the age as successfully as the Constitution of 1787 mirrored the philosophy of the eighteenth century. We may hope that such action can be taken bloodlessly as the Constitution was enacted. * * * This will undoubtedly be possible if a spirit of commonsense prevails—and if we use our Constitution as Hamilton anticipated it should be used, such action may not be necessary at all."

Strikers Paralyze Idaho Timber Camps

Spokane, Wash., June 30 (AP).—Strikes paralyzed lumber camp operations throughout the north central Idaho timber country today.

Nearly 2,000 workers walked off their jobs and declared logging operations of the Potlatch Forests, Inc., a Weyerhauser concern, would be halted by tonight. Other than to confirm reports that the men had struck, Potlatch officials declined to comment.

Hundreds of idle workers were moving to towns and cities of the area, their leaders declaring they would stay away from their jobs until their demands are met. These included a 25 per cent wage increase.

000,000 head of cattle in 1934. If this program should be necessary, Wallace said it would require from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000.

He told reporters that all the 24 leading crop States had less June rainfall than normal, with Tennessee and Kentucky the two driest States.

The Interstate Commerce Commission moved to aid drought sufferers by extending its emergency freight rate reductions to the Dakotas, Montana and Wyoming, with rates of 85 per cent prevailing for outboard shipments of live stock from arid areas to other feeding points. The same animals may be returned later for 15 per cent of the regular rates, allowing a round-trip for the price of one shipment.

The inter-departmental drought committee, composed of Secretary Wallace, Acting Director of the Budget Daniel W. Bell, Resettlement Administrator Rexford G. Tugwell and Aubrey Williams, representing the Works Progress Administration, will function as the advisory agency to the President during the drought.

To See Army Engineers.

The President, at his conference, announced in connection with the projects designed for soil conservation that he would confer today with Army engineers and other officials on the flood control program provided for by the $320,000,000 flood control act passed this year by Congress.

Referring to the 217 projects provided for in the acts, which carried no appropriation, the President said it had seemed to him to provide for every creek in the United States, it was so detailed.

He has discretion over what projects shall be started first.

Officers of soil erosion, reforestation and reclamation agencies will attend the conference. Surveys will be started, but no actual work on the projects will be begun, since there is no appropriation for them.

Holiday Group Studies Plight Of Arid Farms

Reports That Low Relief Payments Are Planned Draw Protest.

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, June 30.—Political matters and farm foreclosure problems were pushed to the background today as the convention of the National Farm Holiday Association concerned itself primarily with the plight of the Northwest's drought-stricken farmers.

The question of supporting the Presidential candidacy of Representative William Lemke on the Union Party ticket was slated for consideration, but discussions at a drought conference here attended by representatives of State and national governments claimed the delegates' attention.

Low Relief Payments Scored.

The association decided to ask drought conference members to attend the farm meeting following reports that low relief payments to farm families were being considered.

Robert Miller, Underwood, N. Dak., president of the North Dakota Farmers Co-operative Union, said the drought conferees were considering allowing "only $16 a month" to stricken area farmers.

Asserting city families are getting "up to $85 monthly," Miller told the association he suggested to the drought conferees that farmers be allowed at least $30.

Foreclosures Problem.

John Bosch, president of the association, in sketching the convention program, asserted the foreclosure problem "is as pressing today as it ever was."

"When there was no farm income, there was no advantage in foreclosing," Bosch said. "There was a crop in 1935 and farm values are gradually increasing now, and, as a result, every creditor is trying to grab all he can."

Approximately 2,509 delegates were in attendance from 25 States.

Troops Guard Algiers Against Arab Outbreak

Algiers, Algeria, June 30 (AP).—French troops stood watchful guard in Jewish quarters of Algeria tonight against a threatened Arab outbreak.

Soldiers and mobile guards moved on patrol through the streets of Oran and Constantine, scene both of Arab demonstrations against Jews and of Rightist-Leftist clashes.

One man was slain and others wounded before Oran's city hall last night, when Algerians allegedly affiliated with Miliant Croix de Feu, banned in France, resisted leftist attempts to break up a rally.

Explorer's Ship Is Reported Safe

Oslo, Norway, June 30 (AP).—Sir Hubert Wilkins' Polar exploration motor ship Wyatt Earp, for which a search was ordered last night by President Roosevelt, today was reported safe.

The ship, unreported for 12 days on a voyage from New York to Norway, was said by the Norwegian liner Stavangerfjord to have given her position as 46 degrees North Latitude, 40 degrees West Longitude.

The Wyatt Earp had been delayed, Sir Hubert told the Stavangerfjord's master, but he expected to arrive in Norway about mid-July.

The Coast Guard communications office in New York said the Wyatt Earp's position was approximately 1,600 miles Northeast of New York and about 550 miles East of Cape Race, Newfoundland.

Blum Regime Wins Vote of Confidence

Paris, June 30 (AP).—France's new, leftist people's front government won another vote of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies tonight after hours of bitter debate in which rightists and leftists exchanged threats and charges.

The cabinet of Premier Leon Blum was upheld, 375 to 192, on the question of its dissolution of the so-called Fascist Rightist leagues.

Club-Wielder Slays Couple, Hurts 2 Others

Dead Pair's Son-in-Law, Accused by His Wife, Hunted by Police.

By the Associated Press.

Ogden, Utah, June 30.—A merciless clubber attacked an entire household today—killing a middle-aged couple and gravely injuring two women relatives.

Tonight some authorities voiced belief a man sought in the killings may have comitted suicide.

Dead were Adam Snyder, 62, and his wife, 52. In a hospital attendants held scant hope for Mrs. Snyder's 80-year-old mother, Mrs. Emma Scott Rose. Mrs. Grace Mortensen, 25, daughter of the Snyders, was injured less severely.

Only curly-haired Betty Becker, 8-year-old deaf mute, daughter of Mrs. Mortensen by a former marriage, escaped the slayer's pick-handle. Dazed and frightened, she could give investigators little aid.

But Police Sergeant L. M. Hilton said the child's mother flatly accused her tall, blond husband—37-year-old George Mortensen of Salt Lake City—who Mrs. Mortensen said she left because he "drank too much."

"He did it!" the sergeant said the woman told him repeatedly in the brief questioning her condition permitted.

Adam S. Snyder, jr., said he "wouldn't be surprised" if Mortensen had killed himself as a manhunt extended up and down the verdant valley along Great Salt Lake between Ogden and Salt Lake City.

A taxi driver, Farrel Rushton, supplied the first "clew" in the search for Mortensen—6-foot 3-inch cosmetics salesman. Rushton said he picked up a "wildly excited" man about 8 a. m., letting him out near a railroad.

This was an hour after the deaf-mute child ran tearfully into a neighborhood grocery near the Snyder bungalow. A clerk called police.

Officers said they were "dumfounded" at what they found—Mrs. Snyder dead in bed, her face battered; Snyder on a floor in an adjoining room; Mrs. Rose on a bed near Snyder; Mrs. Mortensen moaning on a front room couch.

Sergt. Hilton said Mrs. Mortensen told him her husband followed her to her parents' home. They quarreled last night, but finally went to bed in the crowded little Snyder home.

Boy Drowns

Sykesville, Md., and a 5-year-old son, John, whose whereabouts were not immediately determined.

As though to make complete its tragic record for the day, the Potomac River yielded the body of John Hayes Didlebaugh, 21-year-old George Washington University student, who was drowned when his canoe overturned above Chain Bridge last Sunday.

Didlebaugh's body came to the surface late yesterday near Fletcher's boathouse.

The body was taken to the District Morgue, where it was identified by B. H. Curry, of 900 Lamont street northwest, a friend of the family.

Alvin Carroll, of 629 North Caroline avenue southeast, and Irving Cohen, 3219 M street northwest, called police last night to the Benning Bridge, where, they said, they saw a shabbily dressed man crawl down into a manhole and disappear.

The manhole leads to the Anacostia River. Harbor police immediately began dragging the water for his body.

"He wiggled into the manhole and didn't come back up," Carroll told Policeman John Sirpla, who had hastened to the scene.

The manhole leads to a ladder, which descends 25 feet to the catacombs inside the bridge.

Either the man leaped into the water or lowered himself to the bank. Police said there were no footprints to indicate he had taken the latter course.

Gerald B. Norris, of 810 Otis place northwest, was rescued from Chesapeake Bay at Seaside Park by Mattie Coates, colored attendant, who pulled him from the water when he saw him floating unconscious.

Apparently he had gone for a swim and been seized by cramps. Dr. Hugh Ward, of Owings, Md., revived Norris, and said his condition was not serious.

Superintendent Kane said he had a strong odor of liquor on his breath.

Dawson Quits Maryland Post; Jones Is Named

Secretary of State Gives Private Business Demands as Reason.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 30.—Gov. Harry W. Nice accepted today the resignation of Thomas L. Dawson, of Rockville, as secretary of State. The resignation was announced less than 24 hours after Dawson was acquitted on charges of driving while drunk and convicted of reckless driving.

Gov. Nice said he had appointed E. Ray Jones, Garrett County attorney, as secretary of State. He also announced the appointment of Dr. Charles S. Warner, commissioner of labor and statistics, as a member of the State industrial accident commission. Henry Lay Duer, secretary of the defunct milk control board, was appointed to succeed Dr. Warner.

The Governor's formal statement of the changes did not mention the charges against Dawson, but said the Montgomery County man was resigning because of the pressure of business. The statement also lauded the standing of Jones. The paragraph dealing with the secretary's post said:

"I have appointed Mr. E. Ray Jones, one of the leading members of the Garrett County bar, as secretary of state, vice Mr. Thomas L. Dawson, whose resignation I have reluctantly accepted, but whose private practice has become sufficiently pressing as to necessitate his abandonment of official duties incident to the office of secretary of state. Mr. Jones is not only a lawyer, but he is a gentleman whose standing in western Maryland is of such a nature as to make his appointment a decided asset to my administration."

Dr. Warner will take the place on the accident commission left vacant by the death of Daniel R. Randall. Of Dr. Warner's work as commissioner of labor and statistics in the last 18 months, the Governor said:

"He has performed his duties to the entire satisfaction of the public and his attitude as arbiter in labor disputes has been generally acceptable to both ebployers and employe. Through his efferots during the past year ten major labor disputes have been settled and harmony between employer and employe estabished.

Duer was formerly connected with the banking firm of W. W. Lanahan & Co., of Baltimore. Later, he was appointed secretary of the milk board, which went out of existence when the court of appeals ruled that the law establishing it was unconstitutional. Duer is a brother of Robert F. Duer, chairman of the conservation commission.

Duer and Dr. Warner take over their office tomorrow. Jones will be sworn in in Annapolis on Thursday.

Boy's Story

ing downstairs and telling about it.

"That is not normal."

Then, Capt. O'Brien said, "there were other things."

There was no light in the room except the dim slanting rays from a bath, yet "Jimmy" repeatedly fixed the exact time of the attack on his mother at 1:30 a. m.

The boy said the "black man" choked his mother, but there were no marks on her throat.

The brick that fractured the woman's skull was "wrapped up" the boy said. No wrapping was found, and the brick itself was bloody.

There was no blood on the boy or his clothing.

The lip-sticked words on a bureau mirror—"Black Legon Game" which the boy said the "black man" wrote—were in a feminine hand.

"The boy's coming to Chicago to spend two months with his mother (she was twice a divorcee) was not to his liking at all," the captain replied. "He wanted to shoot fireworks on the Fourth of July. And he didn't think he would be able to do it here. He wanted to go back to his grandmother in Wilkes-Barre."

The boy was not under arrest, however, the police captain said: Merely held for questioning. He was in custody of a police matron in a Chicago hotel.

Funeral services for Mrs. Castle will be held Friday afternoon. Burial will be in Oak Hills Cemetery at Hammond, Ind.

Flogged Youth Begged to Die, Inquiry Is Told

Boys at Tennessee School Tortured, Ex-Matron Says; 5 Indicted.

By the Associated Press.

Nashville, Tenn., June 30.—The story of a flogging so severe that a reform school inmate "prayed to die" came to the grand jury from a former dormitory matron today at the conclusion of an investigation into conditions at the institution.

Indictments charging five guards with assault and battery as the result of alleged beatings were returned. Another guard was indicted last week on a similar charge. A final report will be made tomorrow.

Mrs. Mollie D. Stone, appearing at an open hearing of the grand jury, testified that while she had not been permitted to witness any whippings, she stood outside a storeroom on one occasion and heard 95 lashes applied to a boy and listened to him beg for death.

Beaten Severely.

She said the next morning she found that this boy, whose name she remembered only as "Bill," had been cut so severely that the bed linens stuck to wounds on his back.

The witness testified that Superintendent G. Newt Choate, whom the grand jury termed "unfit" for his office, frequently witnessed whippings and urged guards to "give them a good one." She quoted Choate as saying, "You've got to whip them in order to make them behave."

"I have two sons and I would rather see them in their graves than have them go to the State Training School under its present administration," she told the jury.

12 Cases of Whisky.

Asked if she had seen any evidence of drinking at the school, Mrs. Stone replied, "I saw 12 cases of whisky pass my door to some of the other offices, and later Mr. Choate became angry when I refused to take a drink."

The former matron said Choate and school guards frequently met for beer parties in a near-by woodland. A number of the school inmates testified they were beaten by drunken guards, sometimes with a wagon-wheel spoke.

Farmers living near the school told the grand jury of witnessing whippings administered to boys as they worked in the fields. One said he had seen a long line of boys lashed as they bent over their hoes.

Japanese Reply 'Satisfies' U. S.

By the Associated Press.

The State Department announced receipt yesterday of a "satisfactory reply" from the Japanese Embassy in regard to protests by American citizens in China involving Japanese military forces on June 21 and June 23.

Capt. H. S. Jernigan, military attache for this country, reported he was menaced by the bayonet of a Japanese sentry during a street demonstration.

An American woman, whose name was not disclosed, reported a similar incident and a third memorandum asserted that Japanese soldiers entered the property of the American Embassy at Sankwanmiao.

The State Department declined to reveal contents of the Japanese reply to a memoranda which American representatives handed the Japanese Embassy on June 25 regarding the incident.

'Diamond Lil' Is Near Death; Once Was Toast of Klondike

Now Is Patient in Seattle Insane Asylum; Police Seek Relatives in Connection With Her Real Estate Holdings.

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, June 30.—"Diamond Tooth Lil," once the toast of the roaring Dawson gold rush, lay near death in Washington State Insane Asylum tonight while authorities sought in vain for relatives or friends of her glittering past.

Officials were trying to locate a sister who, they believe, now lives in Montana.

Sourdoughs recalled "Diamond Tooth Lil" as the black-haired beauty who became the toast of the rough, free-spending gold hunters in the Dawson country just before the turn of the century.

But nearly four decades have changed the woman who gained her Far North name by having diamonds set in her teeth.

The diamonds are gone now, leaving only telltale cavities. But Detective Capt. Marshall Scrafford indicated "Diamond Tooth Lil" still was not penniless.

"Somewhere in Seattle she has property—an apartment house or two," he said. "No one knows how much money she has or where it is.

"She is unable to tell us. We must find her relatives."

"Her folks were supposed to be very wealthy when she came to Dawson in '98 or '99," recalled Charles Beam, a former gambling house operator in Alaska.

"She was there three or four years. She had black hair and was about medium height. Folks thought she was very good looking."

Scrafford said "Diamond Tooth Lil" put on a big demonstration, "throwing money around right and left," at a Klondikers' parade when she came to Seattle, around 1908.

She is known as the widow of George Miller, of Seattle, and to have been the former Lillian Orinstein, daughter of a Jewish family. She inherited $150,000 from her mother, Mrs. A. Orinstein, who died in Los Angeles in 1928, shortly before she divorced Miller.

Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad. He is due in Seattle Friday morning.

Explaining his difficulties at the station, Zioncheck said:

"We were in the plane. The motors were running when an attendant opened the door and said, 'We're very sorry, but all the reservations are sold out.'

"I wanted to know why they should cancel ours. The attendant replied, 'I don't know. I got my orders from above. There's nothing else to do but get off.'"

F. J. Bixler, division traffic manager for the airline, said the inconvenience to Zioncheck was caused purely by the problem of excess weight in the ship, according to the Associated Press.

Bixler said the plane load weighed 2,013 pounds, but was limited by regulations to 1,995. Draining of a quantity of gasoline did not cut down the margin, Bixler said.

"Didn't Leave Room."

Because of the volume of mail and baggage, Bixler said, it was found necessary to assign one seat in the ship to "operations."

"We had to give away one seat, and that didn't leave room for Mr. Zioncheck," Bixler said.

A crowd of 500, who had heard of his exploits in the Nation's Capital, was on hand at Chicago Municipal Airport to see Zioncheck off.

Although a police escort of 12 plain clothes men had been assigned to protect him from curiosity seekers, Zioncheck seemed in a fairly happy and responsive mood.

He cheerfully signed autograph books, and smiled occasionally.

"I am fully confident I will be reelected," he said. "There isn't any hurry about my starting my campaign, though. The primaries aren't until September."

Zioncheck arrived in Chicago, en route to his Puget Sound home, at 6:10 p. m. (E. S. T.) on the Baltimore & Ohio express train that left Washington Monday at 11:59 a. m.

As the train pulled into the station in Chicago it was met by a dozen policemen and plainclothesmen, who escorted Zioncheck to an automobile, fending off questioners.

One of these was Mrs. J. H. Wlodygia, who claimed her husband was Zioncheck's uncle. She had a letter from his sister in Seattle, she said, asking her to meet him.

When Zioncheck apparently did not recognize her, detectives shooed her away.

"He's perfectly sane," snapped Mrs. Wlodygia. "It's a disgrace to civilization the way they have pestered him."

The Chicago Police Department had maintained an outward calm yesterday as the train bearing Zioncheck hastened westward.

Offices of the commissioner, head of the uniformed division, and the detective bureau disclaimed any knowledge of a reported request from Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of District police, for "protection" of the legislator. Furthermore, they showed little interest in the case.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad offices also were characterized by a lack of excitement. Officials there said they did not know, except for having read in the newspapers, that Zioncheck was on their train.

At Northwest Airlines offices, however, the calm was interrupted when the attention of authorities was called to reservations on a night plane for Seattle for "Romney and Bishop."

Snake Murder Trial Hears 2d Wife Was Slain

Witnesses Brought From Colorado Tell of Car Accident in 1932.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, June 30.—Robert S. James, charged with murdering his seventh wife for $20,000 insurance, was accused by the State today of having killed an earlier wife for the same reason.

James is on trial charged with drowning Mary James last August after trying to kill her with rattlesnake venom.

Prosecutors said they would attempt to show that James murdered both Mary and a previous wife, Winona.

"For the death of Winona four years ago in a Manitou, Colo., cabin, James received $14,000 insurance," declared Deputy District Attorney John Barnes.

Submerged in Tub.

"For the death of Mary in their honeymoon cottage he sought $20,000 insurance. Winona was found submerged in a tub of water, curiously enough with a grocery boy as witness, and Mary was found drowned in the fishpond of their home, also in the presence of a witness."

J. A. Rogers, one of five witnesses brought from Colorado to testify concerning the death of Winona, was questioned—over defense protests—about an automobile accident September 21, 1932, in which Winona was seriously injured.

James Uninjured.

Deputy District Attorney Eugene Williams declared James was not injured in the accident. The prosecutors said they would attempt to show James slugged Winona before driving the automobile over a cliff on the Pike's Peak highway.

Samuel Silverman, attorney for James, announced his client would probably testify next week, indicating the defense might abandon its announced plan of trying to save James from the gallows on insanity grounds. The testimony of an insane person is not admissible.

TO THE PUBLIC AND THE EMPLOYEES in the
STEEL INDUSTRY

A CAMPAIGN to unionize the employees of the Steel Industry has been announced.

In order that the employees and the public may know the position of the Steel Industry in the face of the threatened drive, the Industry makes this statement through the American Iron and Steel Institute.

Persons and organizations not connected with the Industry have taken charge of the campaign.

There are many disturbing indications that the promoters of the campaign will employ coercion and intimidation of the employees in the Industry and foment strikes.

The objective of the campaign is the "closed shop," which prohibits the employment of anyone not a union member. The Steel Industry will oppose any attempt to compel its employees to join a union or to pay tribute for the right to work.

No employee in the steel industry has to join any organization to get or hold a job. Employment in the Industry does not depend upon membership or non-membership in any organization. Advancement depends on individual merit and effort. These are fundamental American principles to which the Industry will steadfastly adhere.

The Steel Industry believes in the principles of collective bargaining, and it is in effect throughout the Industry.

The overwhelming majority of the employees in the Steel Industry recently participated in annual elections under their own representation plans and elected their representatives for collective bargaining. The elections were conducted by the employees themselves by secret ballot. One of the purposes of the announced campaign is to overthrow those plans and the representatives so elected.

The Steel Industry is recovering from six years of depression and huge losses, and the employees are now beginning to receive the benefits of increased operations. Any interruption of the forward movement will seriously injure the employees and their families and all businesses dependent upon the Industry, and will endanger the welfare of the country.

The announced drive, with its accompanying agitation for industrial strife, threatens such interruption.

The Steel Industry will use its resources to the best of its ability to protect its employees and their families from intimidation, coercion and violence and to aid them in maintaining collective bargaining free from interference from any source.

Rep. Jacobsen, Iowa Democrat, Dies in Hospital

Was Member of District Sub-committee; Rites to Be in West.

District Commissioners expressed regret yesterday upon learning of the death of Representative B. M. Jacobsen (Democrat), of Iowa, a member of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, in a hospital at Rochester, Minn. He was 74 years old.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, president of the board, expressed the view of the Commissioners when he said:

"He was one of the most genial men I ever knew."

Jacobsen's death removes him as a possibility for chairmanship of the District sub-committee should Representative Thomas L. Blanton elect to take the chairmanship of the War Department appropriations sub-committee.

The Iowan was the ranking member of the District sub-committee and was fond of the assignment despite the fact he had a reputation for seldom if ever saying anything during executive hearings. Next in line is Representative Johnson (Democrat), of West Virginia.

The District Sub-Committee next year probably will get two new Democrats to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Jacobsen and to replace Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, because of his occupation with the chairmanship of the sub-committee on agricultural appropriations.

Jacobsen, who was taken ill during the closing days of Congress, died with his family at his side. Kenneth Romney, sergeant at arms of the House, said a delegation of House members will be named to attend the funeral to be held in Clinton, Iowa, his home town.

A German immigrant, Jacobsen frequently cited his own career as proof that an immigrant had a chance to succeed in America. He was a banker and a merchant, having worked his way through a brickyard, sawmill and store. From 1914 to 1920 he was postmaster at Clinton under appointment by President Wilson.

Elected to Congress in November, 1930, by defeating F. Dickinson Letts, he served three terms and had just won renomination at his party's primary for a fourth term in June.

He is survived by his wife and five children—two sons, William S. and Marvin Jacobsen, of Clinton, and three daughters, Mrs. C. L. Callender, Indianapolis; Mrs. Paul Soenksen, Harvey, Ill., and Mrs. John Hammond, Washington, D. C.

Her husband departed Saturday for Georgia when her condition became worse. Representative Ramspeck and his wife left here last night for the funeral.

Besides her husband and mother, Mrs. Ramspeck is survived by two sisters. One, Mrs. Hattie V. Wilson, lives at the Connecticut avenue address.

35,000 More to Get Ohio Pay Benefits

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, June 30.—Ohio, defying claims of unconstitutionality, will put 35,000 more women and minors—employes of hotels and restaurants—under the protection of its minimum wage law tomorrow.

Ora B. Chapman, State director of industrial relations, said application of the law will result automatically in wage increases averaging 40 per cent. The board also is rushing arrangements to guarantee 60,000 employes of retail stores minimum wages.

Ruling is expected after August 1 on suits to block enforcement of the law. The New York minimum wage law, almost identical to Ohio's statute, was declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court on the ground it deprives workers of the right to make contracts.

Set-Back Dealt To Labor Board In Court Fight

Right of U. S. to Regulate Employer-Employe Relations Denied.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, June 30.—The sixth United States Circuit Court of Appeals today held that Congress had no authority to regulate relations between an employer engaged in manufacture and his employes unless those relations directly affected interstate commerce.

The court set aside an order issued by the National Labor Relations Board to the Fruehauf Trailer Co., of Detroit. It held that the manufacture of trailers, which subsequently entered interstate commerce, did not come within the jurisdiction of Congress or of the board it created.

In Washington, the board announced it would study the decision with similar opinions of other courts before determining whether to appeal to the United States Supreme Court. The board has 90 days in which to serve notice of an appeal.

The three appellate judges who sat in the Fruehauf case—Charles Moorman, Xen Hicks and C. C. Simons—gave a unanimous decision dismissing the board's request for enforcement of the order seeking to compel the Freuhauf Co. to reinstate certain employes and to refrain from discharging or threatening to discharge other employes for activity in the United Automobile Workers Federal Labor Union No. 19375.

In appealing the order, the Freuhauf company attacked the constitutionality of the National Labor Relations Board. That challenge brought Solicitor General Stanley Reed to Cincinnati for the hearing June 2. He contended the act was valid under congressional authority to seek to remove the causes of strikes.

The brief opinion commented that authority for the act was "claimed under the commerce clause of the constitution."

It then concluded:

"Since the order is directed to the control and regulation of the relations between the Trailer company and its employes in respect to their activities in the manufacture and production of trailers and does not affect any phase of any interstate commerce in which the Trailer company may be engaged . . . the Congress has no authority or power to regulate or control such relations between the Trailer company and its employes. The National Labor Relations Board was without authority to issue the order."

John D., Jr., Given Medal of Legion

Versailles, June 30 (AP).—John D. Rockefeller, jr., whose millions helped restore the historic Versailles and Trianon palaces, of France, tonight received the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor from President Albert Lebrun.

In addition, Versailles municipal authorities decided to name the Place d'Armes—the great square in front of Versailles Palace—for him.

Rockefeller, speaking briefly at the unveiling of a tablet of appreciation at the Chateau of Versailles, expressed hope the monuments would prove an inspiration to coming generations and "lead humanity toward a new era of peace and good will."

The Rockefeller donations for post-World War restorations were estimated at 53,000,000 francs (about $3,710,000) for work on the Reims Cathedral and the Versailles and Fontainebleau chateaux.

Baltimore, June 30 (AP).—Maryland's trout season ended at midnight, except in Garrett Country, and the bass season opened. Garrett County has special regulations because the water there is cooler and it took the fish longer to become active and self-protecting.

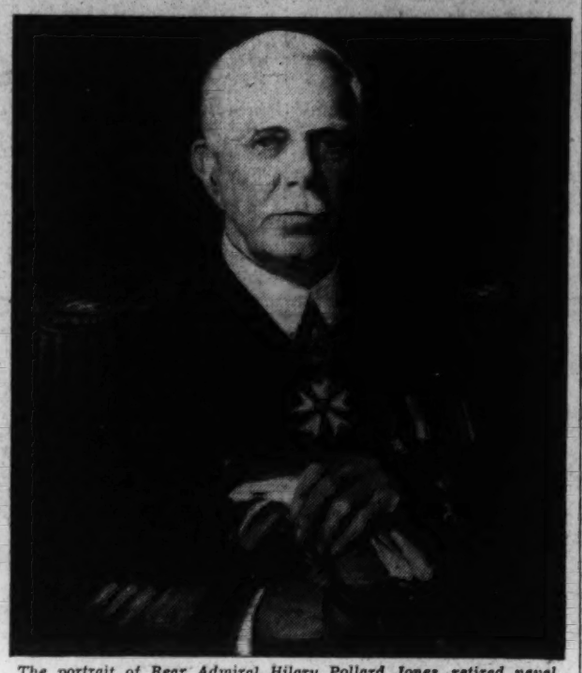
Portrait of Admiral Unveiled



The portrait of Rear Admiral Hilary Pollard Jones, retired naval officer, which was presented to Hanover County, Va., yesterday at ceremonies in Hanover Courthouse at Ashland. Admiral Jones, now a resident of Washington, is a native of Hanover County. His portrait, painted by Bjorn Egeli, will hang in the courthouse beside portraits of Patrick Henry and Henry Clay.

Admiral Jones' Portrait Given To Va. County

Retired Navy Officer Paid Honor in Ceremony Held at Ashland.

A portrait of Rear Admiral Hilary Pollard Jones, of this city, was presented to Hanover County, Va., yesterday at ceremonies held in the Hanover County Courthouse, at Ashland, Va.

Admiral Jones, who retired from the United States Navy in 1928 after almost half a century of service, is a native of Hanover County. He and Mrs. Jones still maintain a home near Doswell.

Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, in making the presentation of the portrait, sketched Admiral Jones' career from his graduation from the Naval Academy in 1884 to his work as American representative at the disarmament conferences in 1927 and 1930.

Andrews praised the retired admiral for "bringing to every detail sound common sense, unflagging energy and an acquisitive, vigorous mind."

"No officer of our generation has rendered more effective and able service to his country and to his people," said Andrews. "In addition to his great professional reputation, he now well deserves the title of elder statesman."

Eleanor Gamble James, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Jules James, of the United States Naval Academy, unveiled the portrait. She is a god-daughter of Admiral Jones.

The portrait, the work of Bjorn Egeli, Norwegian artist, of Washington and New York, will hang on the wall of the 200-year-old courthouse beside portraits of Henry Clay, Patrick Henry, and other distinguished citizens of the county.

Rosewell Page, Oakland author who was a childhood companion of Admiral Jones, accepted the gift on behalf of the county. Other speakers at the ceremonies were Capt. Chester Wells, chairman of the portrait committee, and J. Walton Hall, superintendent of schools at Hanover, who presided.

The invocation was offered by Capt. Bower N. Patrick, retired Navy chaplain, and the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Thompson Southall, of the Ashland Presbyterian Church.

Buck Creek, Tex., June 30 (AP).—Hugh Pogue, 13-year-old farm boy, was released unharmed today near Reed, Okla., by two Texas prison fugitives who kidnaped him near here last night.

The men were identified by officers from descriptions as Luke Trammel and Forest Gibson, who killed a guard during a break at the prison farm 11 days ago. Young Pogue was freed when the fugitives stole a car faster than the one he was driving.

V. F. W. Attacks Ruling Veteran Must Pay Debt

Test Case May Be Made of Order Against Bonus Recipient.

By the United Press.

Boston, June 30.—Officials of the Massachusetts Department, Veterans of Foreign Wars, threatened tonight to make a United States Supreme Court test case of a district judge's order that a soldiers' bonus recipient pay an outstanding debt before Friday.

The order was issued against Herbert Mahar, of Adams, June 19, by Judge Henry L. Harrington, of Adams District Court.

It was believed the first case of its kind since passage of the bonus act.

With court costs added, Mahar, who received a $792 bonus for serving overseas with the 104th Infantry, owes the estate of the late Dr. A. K. Boom $318. Mahar said he had cashed $200 of his bonus bonds and all but $16 of that amount would be used to pay back bills on groceries, fuel and "other necessaries."

Offer Rejected.

He said his offer to pay $2 monthly on the $318 judgment was rejected by Judge Harrington in the following order issued June 19:

"It is ordered that he, the debtor, has in his possession the amount of said bonus, but that he has no other property not exempt from execution; he is therefore ordered to pay the amount of said judgment; that is to say, within two weeks from this date."

Decision to battle the order was made after State Commander Joel Miller of the V. F. W. conferred with Massachusetts Department attorneys on whether the order violates the intent of the Federal law designed to protect bonus recipients against attachment and other legal encumbrances of their bonds.

Would Press Case.

"If necessary," Miller said, "we will take this case to the Supreme Court of the United States."

Miller said neither he nor the veterans believed bonus recipients should decline to pay debts. He explained, however, that Mahar had been ill for nine months and "will need what is left of the bonus for family expenses."

"The man's motives are honest and trustworthy," he added, "and for this reason the entire strength of the V. F. W. will be thrown into the fight to see that he and all other veterans of the same class obtain protection, as was intended under the law, in relation to the disposition of their bonds."

Fire Near D. C. Stables Threatens 35 Horses

Thirty-five frightened horses were led from the Our Riding School stables at 2510 G street northwest yesterday afternoon when fire in a hay shed threatened to spread to other buildings on the grounds.

Engine companies from the Second Batallion, directed by Chief Edward O'Connor, managed to confine the blaze to the shed. Damage was estimated at about $40 by Norman Corbin, one of the proprietors of the establishment.

Perjury Is Laid To Manager Of Hangar Club

Bernard Levy Is Accused After Waiters Testify on Liquor Sales.

Bernard Levy, 1523 Park road northwest, manager of the Hangar Club, was charged with perjury by Commonwealth's Attorney Laurence W. Douglas of Arlington County. He was released in $1,500 bail.

The night club manager had just finished noting an appeal of a $200 fine imposed by Judge Clarence R. Ahalt in Arlington County Court for maintaining a nuisance and violating the A. B. C. laws when informed he was named in a warrant charging perjury. He gave $200 bond pending his appeal from the fine.

Levy testified he had no interest in liquor selling at his club. Two of his former waiters—Nick Ledas and Paul George—testified they sold the liquor for Levy and paid him $2 a pint.

In view of their testimony, Douglas swore out a warrant and set a hearing for October 5.

The club was raided several weeks ago by Arlington County policemen and members of the A. B. C. board. Several of Levy's waiters, including Ledas and George, were arrested and charged with abetting in maintaining a nuisance. Ledas and George pleaded guilty and were fined $10. Charges against the others were nolle prossed.

U. S. Is Denied Right to Collect Rail Wage Tax

Justice Bailey Signs Decree Giving Permission to Pay Pensions.

Clarifying his decision of last Friday in which he held the Administration's second railroad retirement law unconstitutional, Justice Jennings Bailey, of the United States District Court, yesterday signed a formal decree giving the Government permission to pay railroad pensions.

Following a protracted conference with counsel representing the Federal Government and railroads, Justice Bailey signed an injunction which forbids collection of taxes on both pay rolls and employes' wages. The levy is 3½ per cent in each case. More than 1,000,000 railway workers are affected.

The writ also enjoins the Railroad Retirement Board from requiring railroads to furnish personnel records at their own expense, adding that the board must stand the cost of acquiring such data.

Under the clarifying decree, $46,000,000 in pensions may be paid from general revenue funds, said Murray W. Latimer, chairman of the retirement board. Conferences among Treasury officials will be necessary before a decision is reached, however, Latimer added.

Justice Bailey's decision held unconstitutional the tax measure which was to finance the pensions and which would have raised $120,000,000. The 1935 railroad retirement plan is embraced in two acts, one imposing the tax on pay rolls and wages and the other providing for pension payments out of general revenue funds.

If the Treasury chooses, it may pay the pensions from income tax, customs and Government bond receipts.

HOW'S THIS FOR BALANCE?
Perfectly balanced gin flavor is insured by Hiram Walker's exclusive Controlled Condensation process—during which nearly a dozen different flavor ingredients are distilled together.
HERE'S SOME IDEA OF THE DIFFERENCE — between old-fashioned and modern methods of distilling — and between various brands of gin. You certainly can taste the finer flavor in Hiram Walker's Gin, the only gin in the world distilled by the Controlled Condensation process.
FROM THE LAND OF CAMEL CARAVANS and from four continents Hiram Walker gathers gin ingredients. Hiram Walker makes it a point to distill its gin from the actual fruits, herbs and berries—together with 100% grain spirits.

NO LARGER THAN A VIOLIN is the miniature gin still which Hiram Walker uses for a test run before distilling each run of gin. The double-check by test run in the "pilot" still insures the flavor being right.
TOM COLLINS, '35 AND TOM COLLINS, '36 will taste precisely the same, if they're made from Hiram Walker's Gin. That's because the Controlled Condensation process measures and compensates in each formula for variations in the flavor strength of gin ingredients.

$118,500 a Year Held Too Little For Oil Heiress

Col. Rogers' Widow Unable to Keep Up Mansion, Hearing Is Told.

By the Associated Press.

Riverhead, N. Y., June 29.—A hearing on the court action of the widow of Col. H. H. Rogers 2d, to regain a dower right in the huge oil fortune he inherited, disclosed today an estimate of her net income at $118,500 a year.

With this amount, her attorney said, she could not afford to pay the taxes and upkeep of the $525,000 Rogers mansion at Southampton, Long Island, which bears the name, "Port of Missing Men."

Testimony in today's hearing before a surrogate brought out that Col. Rogers, who died July 25, 1935, left an estate which before allowance for taxes was estimated at $26,000,000, part of which was in a trust fund left by his father.

Signed Waiver to Rights.

Mrs. Rogers, it was shown, signed in 1934 a waiver of her dower rights, and agreed instead to accept the income from $100,000, and a third of the trust fund, and a third of the other millions which were in her husband's own name. They were married August 28, 1933.

The will also provided that she could have the "Port of Missing Men" and its adjacent shooting preserve, by giving notice within 180 days after the will was probated, and that otherwise, these properties would revert to a grandson, Peter Salm, who is the son of Millicent Rogers Balcom by her first husband.

Harold Donegan, attorney for the executors, said today Mrs. Rogers did file notice, but said she would not take immediate physical possession. Later, however, the executors received a letter from the guardian of Peter Salm, saying the notice Mrs. Rogers gave was insufficient.

Asks Instructions.

Donegan asked the surrogate to tell the executors what to do.

Thomas Thacher, counsel for Mrs. Balcom, advised the surrogate that when Mrs. Rogers brought an action to set aside the will and take her dower rights, she automatically relinquished her right to the "Port of Missing Men" and the shooting preserve.

C. Alexander Capron, attorney for Mrs. Rogers, said her notice was sufficient, and then produced a witness to testify that her income was not enough for her to afford ownership of the property. This witness, Charles Heterich, a banker, said it cost $100,000 a year to operate the property.

$10,000 in Cigarets Stolen From Car

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 30.—Thieves, believed members of an organized band which has been operating in other Eastern cities for some months, looted a westbound Baltimore & Ohio freight car of approximately $10,000 worth of cigarets last night as the train passed through Kearneysville near here.

The exact amount of loot taken will not be determined until the car reaches its destination and its contents are checked.

The robbers are believed to have entered the car near its point of loading dumping boxes of cigarets as the train moved through the Kearneysville section, later hiding the loot in weeds and bushes along the right-of-way near the Charles Town-Martinsburg road.

Railroad police discovered the robbery promptly, and recovered approximately $5,000 worth of the cigarets before the thieves had time to haul them away.

Ship Bounty Relics Will Be Exhibited At Newport News

Newport News, Va., June 30 (AP).—Three relics from H. M. S. Bounty, which Fletcher Christian and fellow mutineers wrecked on Pitcairn Island in 1789, will be stored in the Huntington Marineers Museum here.

Alexander Crosby Brown, corresponding secretary of the museum, obtained the relics by bartering with the islanders, giving them several yards of cotton print cloth in exchange for the pieces.

A bronze bolt from the hull of the ship and a fragment of oak planking already have been received, and a piece of pig iron ballast is on the way here. They were washed up in a storm in 1933, the Pitcairn Islanders said.

Parkin Christian, great-great-grandson of the original leader of the mutinineers, arranged the exchange.

The Bounty, on an expedition to Tahiti to obtain bread-fruit trees, was taken over by the crew on April 27, 1789. The sailors set Capt. William Bligh, whom they regarded as a tyrant, adrift in an open launch with 18 men who remained loyal to him.

Nation's Youth Are Exploited, Educator Says

'Social Racketeers' Draw Attack From President of California U.

By the Associated Press.

Portland, Oreg., June 30.—American youth is being "mercilessly exploited by the social racketeers," President Robert G. Sproul of the University of California told the National Education Association tonight.

These "racketeers" are telling youth that America "is not the fair land of hope and opportunity that, always and everywhere, it has been pictured to be," he asserted.

The educator said the answer of America to her youth "must be today, as her ideal always has been, abundant life, ordered liberty and the right to pursue happiness with some prospect of attaining it."

In an address on "youth's appeal," Miss Willie A. Lawson, secretary of the Arkansas Education Association, asked whether the young would be "assigned a task in the great whole or shall we organize ourselves into separate groups and forge ahead without a guidance which we need and welcome."

"We young people," Miss Lawson said, "are not convinced that an open school with a $35 a month teacher, no books, no supplies, no instructional supervision, in an excuse for a school buiding, is making any contribution whatsoever. * * *

"We think that a government which offers this as a palliative and refuses to consider permanent Federal aid, is using us as a cat's paw to scorch our fingers with the burning chestnuts of political favoritism."

Miss Lawson said youth wanted "a God who can accompany us to the picture show instead of being confined to the four walls of a church * * *; for a God we can accept and talk about * * *."

"I cannot be sure," said Dr. Sproul, "that youth is making an appeal, even though I hear the clamor of a multitude of voices claiming to speak in youth's name."

Dr. Sproul said the way of reaching the answer to youth and the means of attaining the ideal he mentioned were "just what they have always been—freedom and tolerance for the individual, regard for the rights of minorities, an intelligent sense of responsibility for the common welfare, respect for law and love of peace—the ways and means of democracy."

Felons Held in Slaying To Get Mental Tests

Richmond, Va., June 30 (AP).—A mental examination of two Virginia convicts, who were indicted yesterday with six fellow prisoners on charges of murder, was ordered today by Judge Julien Gunn, of Richmond Circuit Court.

The two, who under the statute must die if convicted, are Ed Veal and Bill Lynn, each serving terms of 45 years. They joined with six other convicts in an attempt to break from the Virginia prison June 15—an attempt which cost the life of Powhatan Bass, a guard.

The trials have been set for tomorrow.

Wife Paid Dill $1,000 Month, Trial Reveals

Witnesses Strike Back at Ex-Senator's Charges of Cruelty.

By the Associated Press.

Spokane, Wash., June 30.—Witnesses for Rosalie Jones Dill, former suffragette "general," struck back sharply today at the cruelty charges of her divorce-seeking husband, former Senator C. C. Dill, of Washington State.

Frank Graves, attorney for Mrs. Dill, asserted in cross-examining the former Senator that she contributed "about $40,000" to Dill's 1928 election campaign and paid him $1,000 a month for several years as a part of a "marriage agreement."

Van E. Demick, Spokane builder, testified Mrs. Dill employed him at prevailing union wages. Dill asserted in his divorce complaint that his wife paid her help "starvation" wages.

Under questioning by Graves, Dill said he and the prominent women's rights advocate, for a time "lived together as ordinary, decent people live."

"She was a good wife and companion to you?" Graves asked.

"I wouldn't say she was a companion," Dill answered.

In direct testimony Dill said they were happy together until she became openly hostile toward him during the 1932 Democratic Convention, which nominated Franklin D. Roosevelt for President. She criticized the methods, he said, by which he and several other men worked with uninstructed delegations before the nomination.

Graves asked the former Senator if he aided Mrs. Dill financially when many of her New York properties were being foreclosed during the depression.

"I offered to help her," Dill replied, "but she always took the attitude I knew nothing about business and that she didn't want me to take part in her affairs. I told her if she needed money she could draw on our joint checking account and I think one time I gave her $20 and another time I gave her $40."

They Have Begun To Fight.

For his address before the annual convention of the National Education Association, in which he denounced the local "Red rider" as an intolerable attack on academic freedom, Dr. John W. Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education, deserves national gratitude.

And yet the commissioner was doing no more than his simple duty, both as an official and as a citizen. The essential function of the Federal office which Dr. Studebaker heads is by precept and persuasion to raise the standards of public education in this country. But there can be no standards worthy of the name if teachers are to be arbitrarily deprived of those discretionary powers by the exercise of which the art of instruction stands or falls.

There has been no more heartening manifestation of profesional dignity in our day, no finer expression of fundamental Americanism, than the Nation-wide rebellion of teachers against "Red riders," compulsory oaths of allegiance and other insults to their professional pride and dignity. These practices are common in European dictatorships, where the whole concept of liberty has been undermined. They have no place here.

The advocates of censored teaching, of regimentation, of compulsory expressions of loyalty, are as blatant in their professions of patriotism as they are ignorant of the meaning of the word. They are brothers in spirit to the Hitlers and Mussolinis of the Old World; they are the storm troops, the pretorian guard of black reaction.

With good reason the teachers of the United States have indignantly repudiated the gratuitous insults to their competence and loyalty and are beginning to fight back vigorously. In this struggle every true patriot and every 100 per cent American will join. For if the schools of the Nation are not free, the Nation itself is in chains.

Higher Fares?

That People's Counsel Roberts is properly alive to his duties was well demonstrated in the open meeting called by him to consider proposed increases in bus and street car fares. Representatives of civic organizations throughout the District were invited to present their views and none had the right to object to his statement that it was "a one-sided meeting designed for the public." From the views expressed, Mr. Roberts sought to gain an insight into how he may best promote the wishes of those whose interests his office represents.

The public, quite naturally, resents any proposal to advance the cost of transportation. On the contrary, rather than boost fares, it is urged that a universal 5-cent fare be tested for six months. Inasmuch as a transit official declared at the meeting that the average fare in May worked out at only 5.1 cents, this suggestion has an appeal for the lay mind. But the Capital Transit Co. is quick to reply that the counter-proposal could only accentuate the present deficit and spell bankruptcy.

All the elements in the problem will be disclosed only by patient and comprehensive study. Mr. Roberts' meeting, of course, was not designed to discover new facts, but to provide a forum for the public viewpoint. But if transit officials are wise, they welcomed it notwithstanding bias. For if there is justice in the complaints that the company's earnings are too meager, the moral will not be lessened by widespread discussion of a fundamental community problem.

Sensible Conclusion.

There will be no local dissatisfaction over the termination of l'affaire Zioncheck. For the eminently sensible conclusion to the irrational story of the Congressman's recent activities, special thanks are due the sergeant at arms of the House. He it was who stepped in as friend and adviser when the unfortunate man escaped from confinement in a Baltimore sanatorium. Now, in his home State, seclusion and sympathetic treatment may perhaps succeed where notoriety so signally failed in restoring Mr. Zioncheck to his normal self.

Only one question remains concerning the sad affair. It may be presumed that because of his official position the Congressman escaped arrest much longer than would have been the case with an ordinary citizen. Earlier action would have spared this and other communities episodes which were becoming more dangerous than silly.

The House could properly have taken the initiative in stopping them. Section 5 of Article 1 of the Constitution empowers either branch of Congress to "punish its members for disorderly behaviour." In times past Representatives and Senators have been censured and expelled for conduct inconsistent with public duty. Mr. Zioncheck's actions could fairly have been described in these terms.

A greater interest in the case of the unhappy Representative on the part of his colleagues would have brought him sooner under proper care. In that way, his own welfare might have been better protected and the reputation of the entire Congress, with which he was pointedly identified at every turn of his aberrations, would have been more adequately safeguarded.

An Office Above Politics.

Yesterday John Raymond McCarl surrendered his portfolio as Comptroller General of the United States. His 15-year term had come to an end.

The law very wisely prohibits the holder of that important office from succeeding himself, or even staying on pending the appointment of a successor. The intent of this provision is wholly admirable. It frees the Comptroller General from any temptation to seek to please those in power. Nonetheless there will be general regret at Mr. McCarl's departure, particularly at this time.

During these 15 years as, in a very literal sense, the watchdog of the Treasury, he has performed his duties with great vigor and pertinacity. In view of the rapid growth of Government activities since the World War, his task has been one of steadily increasing difficulty. In recent years its scope and complexity have increased enormously as Government bureaus have been multiplied, as Government spending has risen by leaps and bounds and as Congress has relapsed more and more into the vicious habit of making lump-sum appropriations to be used at the President's discretion.

It was Mr. McCarl's task to scrutinize every detail of Government spending to see that the law was being scrupulously observed. No leakage of funds was too small to escape his watchful eye. It is obvious that he saved the people of this Nation large sums that would otherwise have been illegally spent. It is, unfortunately, equally clear that these savings were but a drop in the bucket in comparison with the sums legally squandered.

That this offended Mr. McCarl's thrifty soul and his zeal for governmental efficiency has long been known, though indirectly. On the eve of his return to private life, the Comptroller took occasion to express his concern publicly, and to plead for a scientific reorganization of the departments of government and the elimination or consolidation of the many "emergency" agencies of dubious value which have sprung up like mushrooms under the New Deal.

With the policies of this and preceding Administrations it was not Mr. McCarl's job to deal. His task was, and the task of his successor will be, to hold every department of Government to strict accountability for the funds they are authorized to spend. It is a task which calls for administrative ability of high order, for a unique understanding of the ramifications of government, for a high sense of personal and public integrity.

It is eminently not a job that can safely be filled by a political hack or lame duck whose chief qualification is that at some time in the past he has rendered services to the party in power. What is needed is another man of the type of Mr. McCarl, someone like Lewis W. Douglas; someone whose passion for honesty and efficiency in government is far superior to partisan loyalties.

The facts that the tenure of the office bridges four Presidential terms, that the incumbent cannot be removed without undebatable cause and is not subject to reappointment—all show that the Comptroller General is intended to be a man above politics. President Roosevelt would be remiss in his high duty if, in naming a successor to Mr. McCarl, he made the slightest compromise with this essential consideration.

That's Real Inflation.

In his first campaign speech as candidate for President of the new Union Party Representative Lemke said that "inflation is just a parrot-like term used by idiots who don't know what it means." Undoubtedly that is frequently the case. Indeed, the most learned students of monetary theory quarrel violently over the question of what constitutes inflation. However, it is safe to say that Representative Lemke's own proposal for a central bank which would control all currency and retire all tax-exempt interest-bearing bonds would be generally recognized as an inflationary agency of a most devastating character.

"The real inflation," Mr. Lemke says, "is carried on by the Federal Reserve Bank, with its notes that go to international bankers in return for nothing and backed by nothing but hot air." Disregarding this perversion of facts, it is impossible to follow the mental processes of a man who objects to bank note issues on the ground that they are not properly secured and then demands that the printing presses be put to work to turn out bales of paper money under conditions that would remove all checks to unbridled spending except those imposed by collapse of the currency system.

Perhaps the Representative from North Dakota relies upon public ignorance of the nature of money and the evils of inflation to make his mad schemes seem plausible. Undoubtedly proposals of this sort have an attraction for the type of people who believe that there is a quick and easy road to riches for everybody if sufficient fiat money is handed out to all.

Gov. Lehman's Decision.

Gov. Lehman's change of mind with regard to running for re-election in New York State was not unexpected. Great pressure to this end has been brought to bear upon him by the Democratic leadership and, at least since the somewhat synthetic demonstration at Philadelphia last Friday night, it has been apparent that he could scarcely maintain the withdrawal from politics which he announced six weeks ago.

There is obvious political animus in Judge Cohalan's assertion that President Roosevelt had "veritably to grovel" before the New York Governor in order to secure the decision now announced. But there is no doubt that the President has viewed with the keenest apprehension the threatened withdrawal of an important party leader who has done an excellent job in his two terms at Albany and whose popularity with the electorate is by no means confined to New York City.

Moreover the open defection of Al Smith has by no means lessened anxiety for Gov. Lehman's renomination as the chances of carrying this key State have been weighed in Democratic councils. New York is one of the few Commonwealths in which the consequences of internal rebellions are seriously worrying the Administration.

Nevertheless, none with any knowledge of New York politics will assume that either the personal popularity of Gov. Lehman, or the fact that he sees eye to eye with Mr. Roosevelt on the subject of social security, gives any assurance that the President would be carried through on the Governor's coat-tails, even assuming the latter's success. None know better than Mr. Roosevelt himself that New York always shows wide discrepancies in its vote for President and its vote for Governor.

In 1924, when Coolidge snowed Davis under by a 2-to-1 majority in New York, Al Smith came through nicely with the governorship. In 1928, Hoover took the State from Smith even though Roosevelt got to Albany by a nose. And in the Democratic landslide of 1932, New York gave Roosevelt a quarter of a million less majority for the Presidency than it gave to Lehman for the governorship.

Mr. Lehman's decision is of much more importance for New York than it is for the Nation. By failing to run he would have greatly lessened the President's chances there. But by acceding to what he rightly calls the "pleas" of his party, the Governor brings Mr. Roosevelt an accession of strength which can easily be over-estimated.

Bob And Sam And Dan.

From barroom ditties to bathtub ballads; from cowboy and logger to retired poet and idler de luxe; from the Klondike to Monte Carlo is a biography of Robert W. Service in a nutshell. After poetically shooting Dan McGrew and cremating Sam McGee, Service was definitely typed as a writer of lusty lines. And those two old-timers whom he immortalized in verse dogged his footsteps with the same persistence with which Gunga Din hounded Kipling. Now, after ten years of living in virtual retirement aboard, Service announces that a new set of ballads is almost ready for publication.

It is hard to imagine Service deliberately cultivating a capacity for idleness. He was in Alaska during the boom days when gold and guns were the only Open Sesame. It is even harder to believe him when he says of those Klondike days that "it is a part of my life which I have long forgotten and have no particular wish to remember." For 63 is a time for remembering; it is a mellow age when backward glances are rich ground for a harvest of anecdotes.

Theodore Dreiser once expressed a desire to lop ten years off his age. And now Service is kidding himself that he would do likewise. But a glance at two lines from his forthcoming verses prove beyond doubt that the virile spirit which prompted "Sam" and "Dan" is stronger than the man who would forget them. Certainly there is more of the Klondike than there is of Cannes in:

> But if you must stab Father with > the bread knife,
> Please, Mother, use another for > the bread.

Another thing which retards the progress of man is the fact that his anatomical design so aptly fits him for sitting down.

A statesman is a better-class politician who has been dead a hundred years.

From The Commonweal.

Shakespeare incorporated an immortal boast of immortality in one of his most beautiful sonnets. Milton has left on record his high esteem of his own gifts. Tennyson was so affected by "Maud" that tears streamed down his cheeks when he recited it. And while perhaps Mr. Shaw does not logically belong in the list, on the principle laid down by the epigram regarding a famous historical institution, that it was "neither holy or Roman nor an empire"—Mr. Shaw being neither holy (as we are sure he would be the first to admit) nor English nor a poet—yet few would have the strength to exclude him from any group of writers known to regard themselves with confidence.

Yet there is a tradition of the opposite sort . . . William Morris, for instance, is said to have showed pleased surprise when his "Defense of Guenevere" was praised, and to have observed: "If this is poetry, it is very easy to write." . . .

Young aspirants to the bay, however, should receive a parting caution: To be able to be truly diffident about one's own creations is very charming, but to create things it is possible to be truly diffident about is not necessarily the surest way to live forever.

Praise For The Police.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There have been, in the last three years, numerous housebreakings, cases of petty thievery and even one case dangerously close to murder in the alley in back of our house. As a consequence we have been on the alert to accomplish anything possible to secure the arrest of the trouble-makers.

On Monday, June 22, a suspicious noise in the alley awakened us. When the noise continued we called the police. The result of our telephone call to the police was the capture of the pony which was given such widespread publicity on the following day.

I suppose there has been some laughter at the expense of the Police Department in connection with this "capture."

We who have had our house broken into, or car stripped, our valuables taken from our home by thieves, our milk man brutally beaten, cannot join in anything but praise for those policemen who arrived in the alley within four minutes of the time our telephone call was made, and whose presence was absolutely unknown until the source of the noise was entirely surrounded and a concert of flashlights played upon the intruder. The efficiency and speed displayed by the police will provide more security to us with the knowledge it has given us of what will be done when we again request their services.

The Two Platforms.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is unfortunate that the platforms of both political parties are so nearly alike. It is evident that the main idea is to please as many voters as possible. In listening to political speeches over the radio one is very apt to mistake a Republican speaker for a Democrat and a Democratic speaker for a Republican. The Roosevelt Administration has greatly strengthened the power centralized at Washington; it advocates and maintains a high protective tariff and is interested in a very loose construction of the Constitution, all of which violates the traditions of the Democratic Party.

On the other hand, the Republicans urge the necessity for increased foreign markets; they favor old age pensions, minimum wage laws and special favors for agriculture and labor in imitation of the New Deal. In fact, the Farmer-Labor Party has little excuse for existence as a third party at this time.

What a refreshing thing it would be should both parties adopt definite principles! We then might have a Democratic Party platform demanding a strict construction of the Constitution, strengthening of local governments, abolition of all subsidies to agriculture, free trade with all the world and a rational system of taxation.

Deportation Resolution.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to the splendid letter of J. D. Mason in your columns calling attention to the facts about the objectionable Kerr-Coolidge deportation alien bill, I want to suggest that I can see no good reason for the suspicious attempt to railroad through in the closing hours of the last session a brand new measure, S. J. Res. 293, embodying only the obnoxious administrative discretions to practically nullify most immigration restrictions and certainly mandatory deportation statutes under which most alien lawbreakers have been deported.

The resolution which was only introduced last week was pressed for passage about 6 o'clock Saturday, the last day of the session, when most Senators were off the floor. If enacted it would have authorized the staying of over 3,000 deportations that have been stayed during the past three and a half years, every one of which aliens is a law breaker, and some of the more than 3,000 aliens whose deportations were stayed were shown to be killers, perjurers, dope peddlers, and even prostitutes. Why this resolution? What the necessity for it? If the Secretary of Labor has the "implied discretion" to "stay" deportations for family separation reasons over a period of three and one half years certainly she has the "implied discretion" to continue their stays for another six months or one-half year, as proposed in the resolution.

I have searched the deportation statutes and have inquired of those in authority, and they admit there is no express authority from which any such discretion to nullify the law can be implied to prevent the separation of the alien's family. The law expressly directs where complaint has been made and the lawbreaking of the alien has been called to the attention of the Department of Labor, as all of these "stayed" so-called hardship cases have been and had to be, that the Secretary of Labor, "shall take into custody and deport" the alien. There is no exception, express or implied, authorizing the Secretary or her Commissioner of Immigration to not deport an alien lawbreaker who has a family, a wife or child or parent here.

Labor In The Machine Age.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I noticed an article in the Washington papers recently by Mrs. Ovida Ferguson Nalle, daughter of the former Governor Ferguson, whose husband and son have recently returned from a visit to Russia. This lady stated that old women are working at men's jobs. I can not say what is happening in Russia, but I can say what is happening in the richest and most prosperous country in the world.

I toured from my home in Virginia to Florida in March and saw lots of white women, some appearing to be at least 60 years old, plowing in cotton, peanut and tobacco fields. They were plowing with their family milch cow, little steer or donkey with a 10 or 12 year old boy or girl leading the animal. The laborers in the turpentine industry lived in houses which were not as good as pig pens or mule stables.

I do not have to go as far as Florida to see a despotic condition. Farm hands here in Virginia, with three to ten in the family, work 10 to 14 hours a day for the mere sum of $14 to $18 a month. Apple pickers here were paid only $1 a day for 10 hours' work. Their rooms cost them around 40 cents a day which leaves them only 60 cents for food and clothing. In a family of five that allows only 4 cents each for a meal. The same applies to the PWA worker who gets 91 cents a day, twenty days a month. These workers pay from $8 to $12 a month for rent leaving barely enough to keep alive on.

I would like to have a question answered. Before the blessings of the machine age came into use, if a man was willing to work, he could own a good suit of clothes and get three meals a day and still lay a few pennies aside. Then it was not hard to find work. Now with the blessings of the modern machine that man can produce many times more wealth than he could when he cut his wheat with the reap hooks and flailed it out. If this is true why isn't it possible to own several suits of clothes and have three fine meals a day if we desire such luxury?

The Test Of Politics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The political conventions have brought out many conflicting arguments about what policies are best for this country. And the forthcoming campaigns may well nigh confuse the man or woman in the street. In the maze of human opinions, whose is the average person to acept as being the nearest correct? There can, in fact, be found arguments both for and against almost every type of politics, religion and other persuasions known to present-day teachings. It seems to me there is one safe analysis:

The primary motive of all these persuasions is the finding of happiness. The test for the infallibility of all these systems and teachings is demonstration. But how many of these theories are demonstrable every time and in every way? After thousands of years only one of them has stood the test! That is the theory of love.

This theory was presented in concrete form by a certain Man who practiced his theory and it revolutionized the world. The greater part of the world today is known after this Man's name. In most countries, His birthday is celebrated every year. Love was this Man's theory and practice and it seems to have worked.

I do not know much about party politics but it seems to me that Franklin Roosevelt, in his attitude toward his job, is trying to emulate that Man who, above all others, practiced that divine art of being a "good neighbor." Men are only great as they are kind.

Washington's Berliner.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This morning there was broadcast over a local radio station, the story of how the telephone came into existence. After giving Bell due credit, the story then proceeded to give all the rest of the credit of Thomas Edison. He was said to have invented our modern transmitter and to have supplied the use of the induction coil to it, whereas, those of us who have lived here long enough know that a young Washingtonian by the name of Emile Berliner invented the transmitter and invented and patented also the use of the induction coil—the little instrument that puts the power into the telephone.

We may be robbed of our vote here in Washington, but the thing that carries the voice of millions of people every day, came out of Washington. The microphone, through which the big political conventions have been broadcast all over the land daily, was invented right down here in a little back room on Sixth street northwest. We have a right to shine in the reflected light of our scientists and inventors here in Washington, since this is about the only way a mere Washingtonian can make himself conspicuous.

When Emile Berliner invented the loose contact telephone transmitter, or microphone, he defied all the known laws of electricity to do it. So lets keep the credit for it at home where it belongs. The original soap box microphone can be seen down at the National Museum, if anyone wishes to verify these statements.

The Same Roosevelt.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is noted that Mr. Roosevelt, candidate for President in 1937, on the Democratic ticket, in his acceptance speech made use of these and similar expressions: "privileged princes," "economic royalists" and "princes of privilege."

Is this the same Mr. Roosevelt who was wont to travel from his estate in New York to his town house in New York City; to the White House in Washington; to his estate in Georgia and thence to the coast to embark for a fishing cruise upon Mr. Vincent Astor's private yacht?

Nearly 7,000 Injured

WITH the Fourth of July at hand parents begin to think in terms of safe fireworks and children are after noise and color. "When I was young" is the way father will start to tell about the giant firecrackers that used to make every horse on Main Street a potential runaway. But times are changing. Automobiles line the curbs and now there is legislation regulating the sale of fireworks.

"An Act to prevent the throwing or firing of Squibbs, Serpents and other Fire Works." This title sounds as though it was the work of the last meeting of the State Legislature or municipal council. Yet as a matter of fact it was passed by the English Parliament when William of Orange was on the throne; a reference note, Acts, 9 and 10, Guil., c. 7, places it historically in 1698.

The preamble gets right down to business and gives sound proof that there were mischievous as well as careless children in the seventeenth century. It reads: "Whereas much Mischief hath lately happened by throwing, casting and firing of Squibbs, Serpents, Rockets and other Fire Works, some Persons having thereby lost their lives, others their Eyes, others have had their Lives in great Danger . . . and much more may thereby happen, if not speedily prevented," so it ran! Then followed an absolute prohibition on the making and selling of such explosives and their use in any public street, road, park or house. Heavy fines were attached. Naturally this was not a Fourth of July precaution—not for England.

Is all of this present-day hullabaloo about a "safe and sane Fourth" necessary, or is it just another movement backed by a few people who want to crusade because reform is in their blood? For many people it possibly is just a "movement," but the families in which nearly 7,000 Fourth of July accidents occurred last year would have definite experiences to back up their attitude. It is hard to realize that a few cents and a pebble-filled torpedo have stolen from children their eyesight for life. Of course, burns are to be expected. When they develop into gangrene, lockjaw, irremovable scars, then the red jacket on a firecracker has a real meaning. The most reliable figures on fireworks show 24 fatalities last year. Washington, fortunately, contributed none to this number, but Maryland had two deaths.

There is a definite downward trend of deaths from preventable diseases such as tuberculosis, diphtheria, typhoid and fireworks. But the accident record from the latter continues to mount! Time after time one reads that more people have been injured in celebrating our independence than in gaining it. A shop-worn sentence, but worth thinking about.

States are gradually passing stringent laws to curb the sale and private use of fireworks; also local ordinances have helped. Baltimore, for instance, has clamped down hard on city sales and last year had 16 reported injuries, while the rest of the State, with about the same population, had about 100 reported accidents and 2 deaths. Behind these public efforts are such active associations as the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness and the American Museum of Safety.

• • • •

Opposition is constantly present to such safety legislation. Some of the commercial fireworks companies lobby in State legislatures against efforts for more effective laws. Their slogan is to "liberalize" the statutes, and they argue that their well-made products when handled correctly are safe. Probably so. But there is always the reality of careless handling, and also the dangers from bootleg fireworks of most uncertain construction. And interestingly enough, in some localities public associations, including volunteer fire departments, have opposed restrictions on the sale of fireworks because some of their money comes from carnival sales around the Fourth.

The increased use of public fireworks displays handled by representatives from the manufacturers is tending to displace the rather ineffective and too often dangerous backyard exhibition. Today there are probably very few cities of even small size that do not have brilliant spectacles attended by thousands of people. Many are scheduled for Washington and vicinity. Contributions from the local government, from improvement associations and service clubs provide the money. And such community displays receive the hearty support of the local fire and police departments whose duties become rather burdensome around the Fourth of July.

Old Men's Music.

Richard Strauss, German composer, observed his seventy-second birthday Thursday by working on a new opera. He explained that it has to be done in summer or spring because musical inspiration, for him, does not ripen in cold air. Verdi, at 80, composed one of his most tuneful operas, "Falstaff."

Why do many other old men, whether geniuses or not, hear only their creaking joints? Why was Verdi doing great work at 80 when Mozart and Schubert, at 30, realized that they were both practically "through?" Nobody knows, but there is opportunity for a guess, and it applies also to men who are not artists but only plain plodders along life's way. Zest of living in old age comes from a deep well of interest that has to be filled or left half-empty in the earlier years. All men stay young who keep abreast of the world and its changing taste, and so live that their arteries don't harden.

Fair Enough

Radio And Press.

It seems that those who catch their national conventions over the air receive a more pleasant impression of the orators and the over-the-counter enthusiasm of the pay roll patriots than people who attend in person or through the newspapers. In Cleveland those who were present in the hall during Mr. Hoover's farewell and the ensuing Godspeed thought them both rather dismal.

Mr. Hoover, notwithstanding years of experience, still drops his eyes and permits his phrases to drip down his vest. His enunciation was mushy, and the galleries broke in on him several times to yell "Louder!" Nevertheless, letters are to hand from Republicans who heard him at home, insisting that he spoke clearly and that the demonstration which followed came to them dry-cleaned of the laborious quality which was so apparent to people on the ground.

I have heard also that the broadcast of the speeches and the neck tones of the delegates who yelled for their pay checks in Philadelphia were not as the papers described them. Even Gov. Bibb Graves, of Alabama, who sounded like a bull in a barbed wire fence to those who heard him in the hall, was almost intelligible in spots, and some people even insist that there were glimmers of thought in his remarks, and the sordid conniptions of the political parasites down in the pit, presented merely as sound without the spectacle, camethrough the screening process of the radio as marvelous demonstrations of loyal enthusiasm.

* * * *

Rather than a reproach to the press, this contrast seems to me a mark against the radio and a credit to the papers. True, many papers are partisan and call the close ones in favor of their party interests, but even the press associations, which are impartial, manage to get reality into the copy. The radio, on the other hand, presents only the sound, omitting the feeling and the smell of the show. Somehow, too, the sound is brought into sharper focus on the air, and a speech which is a wild bellow in the hall is detached from other sounds and the excitements of the scene.

To be sure, the radio has its running-descriptive men who take over the gadgets now and again, but they are so closely censored that they have developed a milky style all their own. Not theirs to point out how the demonstration is run from the chairman's pulpit or to describe the next gang politician as such and mention how many relatives of his are planted on the party pay roll. Not theirs, either, to describe the total absence of any feeling for the poor and underprivileged among orators and delegates who wallow in great breakers of noise day after day strictly for what there is in it. The running descriptive which comes over the radio is a marvel in its own way, for the voice with the smile knows as much as the next one in the place and yet manages to say nothing that could give offense to anyone on either side of the hottest political fight in the time of living Americans.

On the radio the great spontaneous ovation is an explosion of spirit, and those who listen in get the noise and faithful mention of the toy balloons, the placards, the tin bazoos and the tin horns of both varieties. But the running descriptive doesn't permit itself to backtrack and refer to the serfdom of millhands and cotton farmers whose rulers are howling against tyranny under "the robes of legal sanction."

I have seen many gatherings of newspaper talent on big events, and I think the Philadelphia story was the best job of coverage, interpretation and description ever done. There wasn't much spot news, but the press spraddled all over the hypocrisy and unbelievable cynicism of old-time machine politicians who were waving the faded overalls of the Forgotten Man as a party banner but never gave a sucker an even break in all their evil careers at the public trough.

One afternoon up in a broadcasting booth a star running-description man was having a cigarette between innings while the crowd of rice Christians hollered for their supper in one of the minor demonstrations.

"I think Joe Robinson is going to turn them off," he said. "Yes, he's dousing the lights. That turns them off. They are like a parrot screeching in a cage. Throw a blanket over the cage and the parrot will shut up. Now they are quieting down."

But he was off the air at the moment.

Opera Staff Strikes As Performance Ends

Paris, June 30 (AP).—The entire staff of the Opera Comique, including actors, singers and dancers, called an occupation strike tonight at the end of the last performance of the season of "La Tosca."

When the curtain dropped on the last scene the artists and employes gathered backstage and voted to remain encamped in the theater.

A cordon of police surrounded the theater while Minister of Education Zay and his representatives conferred with the management and strikers in search of a wage agreement.

Wheeling & Lake Erie Approves RFC Plan

Cleveland, June 30 (AP).—Stockholders of the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad approved today a recapitalization program proposed by Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The plan calls for the exchange of the prior lien cumulative stock for new prior lien cumulative, nonconvertible and noncallable shares with an interest rate reduced from 7 to 4 per cent. Directors authorized the payment on August 1 of $7.50 a share on the prior lien.

Dodd Denounces Tariff Bars As Cause of World's Troubles

Envoy to Germany Cites Free Trade as First Objective of 1776 Revolution; Says History Holds Answer to Problems.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 30.—Dr. William E. Dodd, United States Ambassador to Germany, today said that international tariff barriers have brought the world into "a dilemma unsurpassed in a thousand years."

Free flow of trade and commerce had been blocked off, he declared, with the result that debts were repudiated, nationalist feeling generated and armaments increased.

The ambassador, who was chairman of the department of history of the University of Chicago before he took the diplomatic post, told the Norman Wait Harris Memorial Foundation Institute that history held the answer to civilization's twentieth century tangle of troubles.

"Free trade was the first objective of the Revolution of 1776," he said, adding that the American colonies would not have been able to pay back to European countries "the staggering debt of the Revolution" had not free trade policies been observed abroad.

Again in the Civil War, Dodd said, the Northern States borrowed $1,000,000,000 from Europe, and again the debt was quickly paid because foreign countries encouraged imports from this country.

"From 1846 to 1860 the country had low tariffs and free trade" as did England, France and Germany, the ambassador asserted. He continued:

"Standards of living everywhere where were rising; populations that had hardly doubled in 200 years now doubled in 30 to 50 years; Western civilization ceased religious persecutions, permitted freer governments, and blessed the world with Goethe, Emerson, Darwin and others."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Back To The Bike.

* * * *

The craze is no rural phenomenon. In New York the city has set aside one of the drives of Central Park for bicyclists and at least one big railroad system is running a "bicycle train" to take bicyclists into the country week-ends and dump them off where they can enjoy nature the way grandpa did.

* * * *

The railroad will rent bicycles or transport them, and one of the novel sights of this spring and summer will be the railroad stations full of people going places by bike and train.

* * * *

It's a queer development in a screwy age. A few years ago an adult tooling down Main street on a bike was an oddity. Today young and old are turning to the sport of the nineties.

* * * *

And you can't blame the folks for trying to get from one given spot to another on a bicycle. They've tried everything else.

* * * *

After all, the bicycle is a symbol of a saner day when a human being found it possible to go riding without becoming a road hog, when all progress wasn't thought to be a simple matter of horn tooting and when a twenty-second wait didn't bring on hysterics.

* * * *

Bicyclists may not have been any too considerate of one another, but they didn't make a practice of running over dogs, booting elderly pedestrians into the brush and chasing school children up alleys.

* * * *

There was the "scorcher," to be sure, but he was always taking as much of a chance as anybody he hit.

* * * *

The bicycle went out as a means of popular transportation when the automobile came in. It seemed a great treat to be able to get into a horseless carriage and go 100 miles or more from home in a single day at high speed. But the tourist public has now dicovered that all the places on the paved roads look alike.

The only undiscovered country is back beside the narrow lanes where the stop light blinkeht not, and the human thumb hath not becometh a nuisance.

* * * *

Yea, the bicycle offereth great advantages. For one thing it eliminateth the parking problem. And for another it maketh the back-seat driver the Forgotten Woman.

* * * *

Honk! Honk!

America, it seems, is a stricken land in which the opportunity to make a decent living has disappeared. Those endless lines of motor cars blocking traffic everywhere are all owned by wan, persecuted, helpless Americans who don't know where their next limousine is coming from.

The Zipper Crisis.

Hi: Don't overlook the importance of the momentous step taken by Washington in approving a raise in the tariff on zippers. This is a very serious matter. What would this country do without zippers, now that the sewing on of buttons has become a lost art? In the clothing industry nobody seems to do it expertly and our wives and mothers don't stay at home long enough to locate a needle and thread.

The old-fashioned button was an American institution, a great tradition, a bulwark of strength, a protection against undue embarrassment. It was not without its influence on character. The issue of buttons versus zipper is one of the gravest in this election. Mr. Roosevelt is for the zipper. Will Alf come out for the button?

ing of the arms embargo on Italy, yet remains delicate.

Phillips began his diplomatic career in 1903 as secretary to Ambassador Joseph H. Choate in London. Two years later he became second secretary of the legation at Peking. Shortly afterward he came back to Washington as assistant to the Third Assistant Secretary of State. After two years he was sent to London as first secretary of the embassy.

In 1912, at the age of 34, he temporarily quit the Diplomatic Service to become regent of the college and secretary of the Corporation of Harvard. Just before the World War he was called back into the service and in 1920 was appointed minister to the Netherlands. Four years later he went to Belgium as ambassador and in 1927 became the first minister to Canada. Later he resigned and retired to private life.

In 1933 President Roosevelt called him back as Undersecretary of State. The move from Holland to Canada was a demotion in rank, but it was undertaken because Phillips wished his children to attend school in the United States. Appointment as Ambassador to Italy would be another demotion so far as rank is concerned, but it would give Phillips an opportunity to serve his country in a situation that might need the utmost of diplomatic ability.

Reports that Phillips will be named ambassador aroused speculation as to his successor as Undersecretary of State. It was expected this post would go to Sumner Welles, of Maryland, also an experienced professional diplomat, who is now Assistant Secretary in charge of Latin-American affairs.

Crowds Cheer Pius On Way to Retreat

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, June 30 (AP).—Pope Pius thrice blessed hundreds of devout from the Loggia of his summer palace tonight after a motor trip over flower-strewn roads from the Vatican.

The Holy Father, beaming with appreciation for the tributes of the natives and others who hastened from the village as soon as it was known he had started his summer rest, remained on his balcony overlooking the visitors.

Similar enthusiasm was manifest along the 17 miles of highway leading from the Vatican to the summer retreat.

All along the way peasants and tourists scattered flowers before the Pope's automobile and cheered as he passed by.

Four carloads of prelates and Vatican police were the motorcade.

Among the celebrators here were students of the American college in Rome. Their summer headquarters also is at Castel Gandolfo.

G. O. P. Chances 'Mighty Fine,' Ekwall Holds

Oregon Member of House, After Visit to Landon, Sees State Back in Fold.

By the Associated Press.

Estes Park, Colo., June 30.—Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas was assured by Representative William A. Ekwall (Republican), Oregon, today that the "Republicans have a mighty fine chance to capture the election this fall."

Ekwall, en route home to Portland, declared after his visit with the Republican Presidential nominee, that "Landon has tremendous appeal to the garden variety of mill run vote."

"He is the type they want as head of the Government," the Oregonian said. "Common people feel government will be perfectly safe in his hands."

Ekwall said he invited the Governor to make a campaign trip through the West and added that he thought "he would win thousands of personal friends if he'll just let people see him."

He predicted Oregon would "go back into the Republican ranks" this fall. He said that while traveling through Pennsylvania, Ohio and Nebraska he had found much sentiment for Landon "not in any particular strata or section, but everywhere."

Ekwall said he disagreed with several public men in that he did not believe the Canadian reciprocal trade agreement would be a major issue in the campaign. He said it had hurt the lumber industries of the Pacific Northwest, however.

Other visitors to see Landon today included A. G. Hill, publisher of the Fort Collins (Colo.) Express-Courier; A. W. Hahn, Fort Collins planter; Charles Lounsbury, editor of the Rocky Mountain News, Denver; A. U. Mayfield, editor, and Fred C. Ferguson, owner, of the Longmont (Colo.) Ledger, and Dave Stirling, well-known Western painter.

Month Of July

By William Lyon Phelps.

Origin Of Name.

Julius Caesar was born in this month, then called Quintilis, and the month was named after him. In England the word July was accented on the first syllable like Julius, sounding exactly like the name Julie, and it did not become accented on the second syllable until about 1750, and no one knows who started the new accentuation. The older one is shown in Sir John Suckling's poem in the seventeenth century, called A Ballad Upon a Wedding.

* * * *

Her lips were red, and one was thin,
Compared to that was next her chin
Some bee had stung it newly;
But, Dick, her eyes so guard her face,
I durst no more upon them gaze
Than on the sun in July.

Here is an Eblish proverb only about 100 years old, showing the modern pronunciation.

He who bathes in May
Will soon be laid in clay.
He who bathes in June
Will sing a merry tune.
He who bathes in July
Will dance like a fly.

* * * *

When I was a boy, I went in swimming just once on the third of May. I did not stay in long.

And here are two proverbs, both of which show the early pronunciation of the word. The first is in 1580.

No tempest, good July,
Lest corn look ruly.

The second is as late as 1732.

No tempest, good July,
Lest corn comes off bluely.

Lehman to Run Again

lumbus, Ohio, where in a speech tonight he will make the first formal Republican reply to President Roosevelt's acceptance speech and the new Democratic platform.

Assails Plea to Murphy.

In slapping at the "draft Lehman" success, Hamilton also hit at negotiations to induce Frank Murphy, Philippine commissioner, to seek the Democratic nomination for Governor of Michigan, where some sections of the party have opposed New Deal leadership.

"This is the first time in the history of American politics that a party had to go out and plant candidates for Governor to try to pull a President through," he said.

Within the next four or five days, Murphy, who conferred with the President at Hyde Park, said he would make up his mind. As another outgrowth of the Hyde Park conferences, Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois, assured the President of State Democratic support.

President Roosevelt declined to comment on reports that Postmaster General Farley soon would leave the Cabinet, to devote his full time to his job as national committee chairman, and said he had not as yet chosen a successor to Comptroller General John Raymond McCarl, whose 15-year term expired last midnight. The President said he would confer with Farley Thursday.

To reports that he already had submitted his resignation, Farley responded in Atlantic City:

"I have not resigned as Postmaster General and beyond that I have no comment to make."

The statement issued yesterday by the American Liberty League's executive committee in New York, avowing "non-partisan" purposes, led observers to speculate on whether the League might withhold formal indorsement of Gov. Alf. M. Landon, who has never courted its favor.

Aimed Directly at Farley.

The League's statement was aimed directly at the Farley pronouncement that "behind the Republican ticket is the crew of the du Pont Liberty League and their allies, which has so far financed every undercover agency that has disgraced American politics * * *"

"Such false and defamatory language goes beyond the limit of self-respect and cannot remain unnoticed," the league's executive committee countered. "It is incredible that any man, no matter what his background, occupying high official position, would in any circumstance make such representation without convincing evidence."

The statement said the league heretofore "has not attempted to defend itself against the malicious defamation and vituperation uttered by spokesmen for the New Deal," and added:

"It glories in the fact that its advocacy of constitutional principles has aroused the bitter enmity of men who would overthrow these principles."

Contending that for this reason the league "has been forced to take public issue with many legislative and administrative activities of the Roosevelt Administration," it nevertheless reiterated that the league "is not a political party nor is it interested in promoting the special interests of any individual or any group."

It said "the Supreme Court in repeated decisions has condemned key measures of the New Deal in language more emphatic than the league has ventured."

Finally, it promised to carry forward its program, and to "continue to condemn members of any party who seek—either openly or by subterfuge—to pervert the American constitutional system or to destroy or to infringe upon the rights of the people as guaranteed in the Constitution."

Hamilton Off on Swing.

Hamilton, Landon leader and Republican chairman, flung his biting taunt at the Lehman decision as he left on an organization swing around the country, the first stop of which will be in Columbus tonight. His announced purpose is to confer with party workers, county chairmen and ward leaders preliminary to the white-heat of the campaign. Between July 14 and 17, he will make stops in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts. At the end of July he will leave on a Western circuit.

The object of the organization talks, he said, will be to turn out "the new vote and the women vote."

"We think that 70 per cent of these new votes are going to be Republican this year," he said.

Speakers' Bureau Formed.

An Eastern Republican Speakers' Bureau has been organized under Representative Clarence Hancock, of New York, and Representative Joseph Martin, of Massachusetts, has opened Eastern Landon headquarters in New York. Landon will make his first speech in the East shortly after Topeka notification ceremonies, July 23. He will speak at Middlesex, Pa., his birthplace.

Before leaving last night for Columbus, Hamilton declared Representative William Lemke's new Union Party would draw six votes from Roosevelt for every one it costs the Republican candidate. He said the third-party movement would be beneficial to the Republicans in the Northwest, particularly in such States as Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Minnesota, North Dakota and Idaho.

Smugglers Seized.

San Juan del Sur, Nicaragua, June 30 (AP).—Nicaraguan soldiers today captured the motor schooner Pinogana of Panama on a charge of smuggling. The Pinogana was anchored in Masapa Bay about 60 miles from here and Army officers said it was carrying a cargo of 84 bales of merchandise.

Text of Letter on Lehman

Following is the text of the letter sent Gov. Lehman of New York, by President Roosevelt, urging him to run again for re-election as Governor:

Dear Herbert:

For some weeks, and particularly since the close of the New York State legislative session, I have been giving careful thought to some matters of grave importance to the country, and especially their relationship to the State of New York. May I repeat to you what I have already told you—that I was deeply disappointed when you stated that you would not again be a candidate for Governor; though at the same time, as you know, I fully appreciate the valid personal reasons which impelled you to make the statement and sympathized with you in those reasons.

Nevertheless, I am writing frankly and with deepest sincerity to tell you what I conceive to be the other side of the picture.

For many years you and I have worked for many kinds of social legislation—much legislation of this type has been enacted, but at the same time much remains unfulfilled.

Our State was and still is among the pioneers, and today the Federal Government is making it possible for all the States to join in this great work.

Future Called Critical.

The next two years, I think, will be critical ones, and what takes place in New York will have an outstanding effect all over the Nation.

If the next State administration should be in the hands of any individual whose heart is not in the right place in respect to these great ideals or is even in part controlled by those who are unsympathetic to objectives which you and I have, we would fail. More than that, I fear that many of the excellent laws put on the statute books during your four years as Governor would be repealed, weakened or enforced by people who had their tongues in their cheeks.

The State of New York would be hurt thereby; even more important to the Nation, the Nation would be hurt thereby—for that kind of an example is imitated and spreads.

I have referred to social legislation such as fair wage laws, unemployment insurance, old-age pensions, care of the destitute, but I should include the equally wide range of legislation affecting public utilities and conservation and, in general, the lives of the average citizen.

I am convinced that your return to Albany for another two years would have a splendid effect on all the rest of the country. That magnificent and richly deserved tribute which was given to you in Philadelphia last week shows what the other States think of your fine and successful leadership.

I hope therefore that not only for the State but for the national good, you will be willing to reconsider your statement that you would not run again. Such reconsideration would make me very happy—more than that, it would make millions of people all over the United States very happy.

With my very affectionate regards,

Very sincerely yours,

(s.) FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Hon. Herbert H. Lehman,
Governor,
Albany, N. Y.

Reply by Lehman.

Following is the text of Gov. Lehman's statement:

"I announced on May 20 that I would not be a candidate for re-election. I did so with an earnest desire to be relieved of the cares and responsibilities of the Governorship in order to return to private life and the enjoyment of my family. My decision was reached after long and careful deliberation. I considered it final.

"Since then I have been deeply touched and stirred by the many expressions of confidence and friendship that have come to me from all parts of the country. I shall always be grateful for them.

"Regardless of personal considerations, however compelling, I feel that I can no longer resist the pleas of my party both in the State and in the Nation or of those with whom I have worked in closest association for many years and with whom I have waged the fight for equal opportunity and social security.

"Therefore if my party in this State chooses to nominate me again and if the people of the State again call on me for service I shall proudly accept the call and will during the coming two years devote myself wholeheartedly to the interest of the people of the State."

Fight Launched On New Deal By 200 Women

'For America, Landon and Knox,' Slogan of Group Called Non-Partisan.

By the Associated Press.

Toledo, Ohio, June 30.—Two hundred women, pledging themselves to work for the election of anti-New Deal candidates in the national election this fall, set to work today on a national organization plan.

Mrs. Mable Jacques Eichel, of Wilson, Conn., director of the movement, said the group was nonpartisan.

One of the names suggested for the organization was "The Independent Coalition of Republican and Insurgent Democratic Women." Appended to the name was the slogan, "For America," Landon and Knox."

Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith, of Des Moines, Iowa, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture in the Wilson Administration, was one of those mentioned as a candidate for Vice President.

Mrs. Eichel, in an adress, said the country was confronted by the greatest crisis since the Civil War.

She said organization work already was under way in eight States and that after the organization meeting here the work of local groups in all parts of the country would go forward quickly.

The women, in addition to pledging themselves to work for the election of anti-New Deal candidates for President, Vice President and Congress, attested their belief in the American form of government, that the New Deal violates those principles and that this year's issues transcend in importance all party lines.

New Night Spot Will Be Opened Near Annapolis

Russian Entertainers Will Stage Productions at Club Del Rio.

By Chanticleer.

By special carrier pigeon, direct from the quiet shores of South River not far from Annapolis, comes word of a new night-spot-in-the-making. Come tomorrow's dawn and the Club Del Rio, with the atmosphere of old Imperial Russia, will be ready to swing wide its doors to admit Washington night clubbers in search of real, honest-to-goodness diversion.

It all started when a half-dozen Russian entertainers, in search of a vacation spot, stumbled across the site and decided to invite the whole town for bits of nightly (and daily) relaxation. They promise spectacular Russian theatrical productions, with dining from luncheon to supper, swimming in the afternoons and dancing between shows.

So, drop down tomorrow, or anytime thereafter, and you'll find Youry Yourloff, the Russian character and classic dancer; Claudia Caplova, star of the Rasch ballet; Michel Michon, barytone of the Moscow Art Theater and many other well-known Russian artists, all waiting to distribute samples of hot weather entertainment amid cooling South River breezes.

• • • •

And speaking of new things, along comes the Mayfair, that downtown Thirteenth street Cafe-of-All-Nations, with announcement of a brand new policy. Just glance elsewhere on this page and you'll see the new policy in person (or persons). Handsome Wes Warren and blonde Mildred Bodee are taking patrons right off their chairs with harmony and solo numbers via the vocal chord and piano route. And don't forget, the one and only Jack Campbell is still at the piano—and still wowing 'em.

• • • •

Days are getting longer out at the Maryland Club Gardens. The sun still rises and sets about the same time, but Washingtonians are coming early, staying late and leaving their watches at home. From 9 a. m. to 3 a. m., there is never a dull moment and you don't have to do the same thing twice in order to enjoy every hour. Musicians, lifeguards and bartenders are wondering where it all will end. And Maestro Jimmy Harris says he is going to mention things to the union when his day reaches the 25-hour mark.

• • • •

Bolshekoff and Sinda, those sparkling Russain dancers, are coming back to Washington. This time, under the wing of Matt Windsor, they will appear at the Russian Roof Garden. Bolshekoff was with Matt Windsor last fall when the Club Volga Boatman first opened. He came up from the ranks of ballet and gained popularity both in this country and Europe.

The air-cooled Lotus Restaurant has one of the largest floor shows of the season this week. Drop in for a cooling drink or full course dinner and you'll tap your toes to the rhythms of Bill Strickland and his Capitolians while watching such headliners as the Five Ames Sisters in versatile song and dance routines and the only known five-sister act in the business. There also will be Jimmy Givens and Anne Karol presenting rhythm and comedy dances and Frances and Carroll in specialty waltz numbers. Ray Donohue is still there, too.

• • • •

The Hamilton Hotel rainboy room should be (and really is) one of the most popular night spots in town. The reason, among others, is beautiful girls. Even the management is wondering where they all come from. They are thinking of taking Earl Carroll's stage door sign and placing it over the entrance. The sign reads: "The prettiest girls in the world pass through this door." So, the next time you drop in, girls, don't blush if everyone looks up with admiring glances.

And, lest you forget, Moe Baer continues to hold the music spotlight. He says his most popular request number is "Moody," written by Sammy Marks, his pianist, and used exclusively by the Baer orchestra.

• • • •

Not that Pete Macias has a flock of old-timers in his Powhatan Hotel Roof Garden Orchestra, but take a tip and don't wager big money they can't play—by request—any old-time tunes. The other night young Jock McLean walked up to Pete and bet him he couldn't play "I Guess I'll Have to Change My Plans."

Well, sir, Pete just took the bet, waved his baton and the band sounded off under Drummer Levick's order. The piece was played and, to make it doubly insulting for young McLean, Marty Rubin got up and sang the vocal chorus from memory!

• • • •

If you can wait until Friday night to visit enchanting Cocoanut Grove, drop in and see beautiful Mary Nolan, better known as Imogene Wilson, of flicker fame, in her first personal appearance in Washintgon. She sings and, between times, entertains with dramatic sketches.

And in addition, a new Jack Pomeroy revue will be on hand, featuring new costumes and new routines. And still further in addition, Bill Brady, Washington's own product, will sing some more of those songs you've heard about. He leaves for Atlantic City after tomorrow night's show, however.

• • • •

You had better heigh yourself to La Paree pronto if you would get a last glimpse and earful of Emory Daugherty and his band before they leave on a summer road tour. He packs up within the next few days. But meanwhile, he stays for this week's floor show bill which includes:

• • • •

There are at least five good reasons for wandering out to the Shoreham Hotel terrace this week. In the first place, the unique circus-type of floor show now features a high wire trapeze act, with the Four Flying Flemings (say it fast) of Ringling Brothers renown, performing 60 feet in the air on apparatus erected on the lawn opposite the dance floor.

Secondly, should it be raining when you leave home, keep right on going because the air-conditioned ballroom of the hotel will be thrown open until the shower passes.

And thirdly, there is always the hotel swimming pool handy in case it doesn't rain and you still want to get wet.

And last, but not least, where in all Washington will you find so many prominent guests who nightly dine and dance at the Shoreham Terrace?

• • • •

If it's sea food you want—prepared as only expert chefs know how—or lucious chicken or steak dinners, run out to Griffith Farms, the 100-acre country estate on the Marlboro Pike, 3 miles beyond the District line. Raymond and his Hawaiians are always there, together with indoor and outdoor dining.

• • • •

Milt Barrett, host at the Dude Ranch, is very secretive these days about a new policy he is ready to break most any moment. He won't talk about that, but he will admit that Charlotte and Tinker, those masters of ballroom, comic, tap and acrobatic dances, are back by popular demand.

And Dixie Dyer, the old mainstay of the Ranch has just returned from a vacation and it is reported she is putting plenty of "umph" into the night life.

• • • •

Incidentally Jimmy Rice is leading the band at Brinkley's over in southeast as he never led before. He and the boys are there every night.

Income From Taxes In Maryland Gains

Annapolis, Md., June 30 (AP).—Maryland tax income from gasoline and liquor was $463,962.12 higher during the first six months of the current year than in the same period of 1935.

The greatest increase came in the liquor, which was $251,285.22 above the collections from January through June of last year. The increase from gasoline taxes was $212,696.90.

The records of the office of William S. Gordy, jr., State comptroller, show that both tax revenues have shown a steady growth since 1934.

The liquor tax revenue comes from the $1.10 per gallon excise whisky tax, the 20-cent-per-gallon wine excise tax, and the sale of manufacturers, wholesalers, railroad and steamboat licenses.

Joseph O'C. McCusker, chief deputy State comptroller, pointed out that the increase in liquor taxes would tend to supplement a falling off in the anticipated revenue from the Maryland estate tax. The income from this source was estimated at $500,000 for budget purposes. McCusker said that few large estates were being settled in the State. The increase in gasoline taxes goes to the State roads commission.

On the Air Today

John Heiney, The Post's radio editor, is taking a few days' vacation. During his absence this department will be conducted by well-known Washington radio personalities. This morning's guest conductor is Arthur Godfrey, of WJSV.

H'ya, m'friends! Here it is 1:30 Tuesday afternoon and John Heiney, your handsome radio editor, for whom I am allegedly subbing today, tells me the deadline is 4 o'clock and will I for the pity sake get busy! So stand from under, m'friend!

Heiney says now don't start out saying I'm perfectly at home in front of a mike but a pen baffles me. I must sit down, he says, and write what I think and remember it will be in print and copyrighted before the night-hawk makes his rounds. Thus assured, I take my pen in hand, to wit:

I guess this is the best opportunity I'll ever have to answer a flock of fan mail at one clip, so I think that's what I'd better do. In the first place, I dislike that term "fan mail" because usually it implies goofy love letters from goofier femmes. I used to get letters like that before I first appeared on the stage at Loew's Fox. But personal appearances are the greatest cure for "fan mail" you ever saw! As soon as these gals find out you're not 6 feet 2 and slim and dark and have no interesting limp nor a certain wistfulness about the eyes, they scratch you off the mailing list. From then on you get letters demanding that you stop everything at precisely 7:26 and a half and say happy birthday to Susie Zilch and tell her to look under Aunt Agatha's hay. You also get letters by the score from beaming sponsors of "Don't Kick Mother Week" demanding publicity for their great humanitarian efforts between 8:10 and 8:20, when they always tune in for the time. Data on lost dogs and cats come in for a good share of this, too, and will I please play "Meet Me By The Ice House, Lizzie" for Thelma, who had a birthday last Chewsday. Heh! Heh! Dearie me! It's all a lot of fun and I love it! And besides, it's paying off the mortgage on the farm!

I do get a letter now and then, though, asking my advice about how to begin a career in radio or on the stage. I am flattered to know that you believe me qualified in some measure to answer that question, but, although I've been in radio and show business nearly ten years, I still know no better reply than this: If you would seek success in show business, be it radio or stage, first learn to be a plumber or a barber or a hostler—anything that will pay your rent and board. You can't headline the bill when you're on relief, m' friend, and, sad though it be to relate, for every so-called "name" who's in the dough, there are 10,000 stooges on the dole! A buck private in the rear rank of Haile Selassie's defunct army has more chance of becoming Mussolini's right-hand man than the average hopeful ham has of attaining anything approaching stardom! So if you're the one who is always the life of the party, who is constantly called upon to sing, but divinely, my dear, at various teas and revivals, who has a marvelous voice on the phone and just oozes personality, take a little tip from me, m'friend, and make sure you can eat during the years you'll be waiting for "that break" from Walter Winchell!

Well, Heiney said two pages, double-spaced, and this is just about it. I just want to say thanks to you early birds and Moon-Dialers for putting up with me for so long on WJSV. Y'know, in radio we figure a man's usefulness to any given audience to be about a season long—maybe two, if he's good. But unless I'm fired before then, I'll start the fourth year of the Sun-Dial on the 15th of next January, and there were nine months on the WMAL Breakfast Club before that! Why you stay with me, I dunno—but I want you to know that I am humbly grateful and murmur each night before I lay me down a little prayer of thanks and hope; thanks for being there this morning and hope you'll be back tomorrow!

ARTHUR GODFREY.

U. S. Reports Year's Deficit Near 5 Billion

Income Is $293,000,000 Over Last Year; Public Debt $33,913,590,295.

By the Associated Press.

The Government closed its 1936 fiscal year last night with the latest tabulations—for June 27—showing receipts of $4,086,425,544 and a deficit in excess of $4,723,000,000.

The income compared with President Roosevelt's budget estimate of $4,410,000,000—a calculation which, however, included $529,000,000 in expected processing taxes—subsequently invalidated by the Supreme Court.

The 1936 income, records showed, was $293,000,000 greater than that collected a year ago, despite the loss of the processing levy.

As of June 27, the Government had spent $8,809,923,537 and the gross public debt stood at $33,913,590,295. The year's final totals will be given by Secretary Morgenthau in a radio address tonight.

Current year receipts showed big gains in virtually all categories of revenue The total, officials said, already was in excess of revenue collected in such years as 1928 and 1929, when the Treasury's income aggregated $4,042,000,000 and $4,033,000,000, respectively

Expenditures through June 27, on the other hand, were greater than in the last fiscal year, when they totaled 7,310,000,000 Prepayment of the soldier bonus and additional expenditures made necessary through invalidation of the AAA were included in the 1936 outlay

$3,263,000,000 for Emergency.

Of money disbursed during this year, $5,546,000,000 went for what the Treasury defines as "general" purposes for maintaining Government departments. Extraordinary or "emergency" spending for recovery and relief amounted to $3,263,000,000, as compared with $3,576,000,000 last year.

Latest Treasury figures showed an accumulative decit of $19,386,000,000 for six years, of which $13,969,000,000 occurred since inception of the present Administration.

The national debt increased from $16,026,000,000 in December, 1930, to the $33,913,000,000 reported yesterday.

Maryland Planning Toll-Free Bridge

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 30.—The State's success in the court fight to build a temporary highway bridge at Harpers Ferry does not alter the intention to build a new toll-free span, Dr. Homer E. Tabler, chairman of the State roads commission, said today.

Dr. Tabler said that "business has been deader than a door nail" in part of Frederck County, the lower part of Washington County and in Harpers Ferry since the Highway Bridge was washed out in the flood of March, this year.

"Our only concern with respect to the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad's Harpers Ferry Bridge is to restore automobile traffic as soon as possible," he said.

2 Owners of a toll bridge, which was washed out, initiated a court fight to block opening of an unused railroad bridge to carry traffic across the river. There has been no road bridge since the flood, and the toll bridge company's span has not been repaired.

Court Fight Lost.

The court fight was lost yesterday when a Baltimore judge gave the State roads commission permission to go ahead with its efforts to condemn the railroad bridge. The railroad said it was willing to permit opening of the unused bridge, but asked that condemnation proceedings be brought so that it could not be sued by the toll bridge company, which has a franchise.

While the railroad bridge is being used as a temporary highway bridge, Dr. Tabler said, a new free span will be built some distance down stream. This structure, he said, was indorsed by both the Maryland and West Virginia road commissions as a result of petitions received from hundreds of persons living in the vicinity.

Rail Traffic Gains.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 30.—An increase of 250 per cent in the passenger business out of Hagerstown during June was reported today by Baltimore & Ohio Railroad officials. There has been a large increase in freight business out of Hagerstown. Shipments of cement and stone to Washington from a large cement plant near Hagerstown have been heavy during June.

Want Canal Filled.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., June 30.—Residents of Thomas, Second, Third and Springdale streets, including the area west of Virginia avenue extending to Wiley Ford bridge, plan to submit petitions through a committee asking the city board of health and the mayor and city council to use its efforts to have the abandoned Chesapeake & Ohio canal through the city filled up.

Retirement ceremonies for two employes in the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries. Left to right: Deputy Commissioner Charles E. Jackson presenting a parting gift to Capt. J. H. F. Kerns, head of Car Service, and Miss Lilly Hurdle receiving a similar gift from Glen C. Leach, chief of the division of Fish Culture.

By Betty Read.

Work was at a standstill for a short time yesterday in the United States Bureau of Fisheries while the staff said good-by to two of its members who have been in the bureau for 49 and 39 years.

Miss Lily Hurdle, a clerk-stenographer, had a service record of 49 years to her credit as she retired yesterday and Capt. J. F. H. Kerns, an expert fish culturist and head of the car service, which transports baby fish to waterways all over the country, left the bureau after nearly 40 years.

The informal party, which took place in the office of Commissioner Bell, was attended by almost every employe in the central offices and many in the field were represented in the gifts presented to the retiring pair.

For several months two autograph books have been mailed around the country for the signatures of the employes away from the office and together with those of their fellow workers in Washintgon the books were presented as a parting gift.

Capt. Kerns has done an unusual job for many years in arranging for the shipping of the young fish for stocking lakes, streams and rivers. Pullman cars have been converted for the purpose into traveling aquariums. The seats are ripped out and in their place are long tanks filled with running water where the fish are placed for transportation.

A number of Government employes lose their jobs today.

With the beginning of the fiscal year today, there will be many temporary employes for whom no budget provisions were made and in consequence could not be kept at work. The situation is that while there is plenty of work to be done, the funds are not sufficient to keep up the pace of recent months. The projects on which the temporaries have been occupied will not be abandoned, but will be absorbed by regular employes, an official of one of the departments said yesterday.

In the Department of Labor about 40 have been thus separated from their jobs and while some of them have been taken on by WPA, no provision could be made for the rest. In the Commerce Department, a similar situation exists, particularly in the Census Bureau, and the same holds in many of the other regular Government departments and agencies.

The important issues to be considered by the annual convention of the American Federation of Government Employes to be held in September in Detroit, were outlined in the convention call which went out to members yesterday.

The principal business of the convention will be the development of a legislative program for the next Congress. The five-day week, which has been obtained by approximately 300,000 Government employes will have a plank in the working platform for next year.

Other issues include a plan for automatic promotions, a civil service board of appeals, extension of the merit system, repeal of discriminations due to marital condition, hospitilization for civilian Government employes and other measures.

Commissioner Frank T. Bell, of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, is off on his annual inspection jaunt in Alaska. Today he is scheduled to be in Wrangell and will stay there during the fishing season so that he may have first hand information as to suggestions he would like to make to improve conditions for the northern fishermen. The seal season is also in full swing and he times his annual trip so that he can see that the Government's regulations as to killing only a specified number of 3-year-old males are carried out.

The solicitor's office in the Department of Labor is preparing to do some hard work on the Walsh-Healy bill when and if the President signs it. This bill establishes specified labor conditions on all Government contracts and this particular job will initiate the new solicitor, Charles O. Gregory, former professor of law at the University of Chicago, who recently joined Uncle Sam's employes. He succeeded Charles E. Wyzanski, the former head of the office, who was transferred to the Department of Justice.

Union 228 of the American Federation of Government Employes held its charter dinner last night at the Broadmoor Hotel, at which time it passed its six months' probation period and was given a permanent charter.

Maryland Bonds Unit Plans Own Appraisal

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 30.—Not satisfied with the appraisal made of land in Hagerstown through which the new dual highway to Frederick will pass, the State roads commission is making an appraisal of land itself and then will meet with city officials to see whether an agreement can be reached on the amount the city must pay toward the rights of way. The roads commission said it could not meet more than half the costs for a right of way within the corporate limit. In the meantime, the roads commission has held up the start of a new bridge across the Antietam Creek, over which the new highway will pass. Dr. H. E. Tabler, chairman of the commission, said that work on the bridge would not be started until an agreement on Hagerstown paying half the costs for rights of way had been signed.

150 4-H Club Members To Attend W.Va. Groups

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 30.—Plans are being completed to take care of at least 150 4-H boys and girls at the annual Tri-county (Morgan, Jefferson and Berkeley counties) camp, to be held July 13 to 18, inclusive, at Camp Frame, Back Creek, leaders today announced.

Andrew Blair, of Weston, is to be the camp director assisted by Hortense Hogue, of Ritchie County, and Gladys Scrannage, of Morgantown. The leaders will be assisted by County Agents W. N. McClung, of Berkeley; H. C. C. Willey, of Morgan, and Neil Bolton, of Jefferson, and by Ernest C. VanMetre, Berkeley County club agent.

Parole Is Sought By D. C. Reporter

Baltimore, June 30 (AP).—Parole Commissioner W. David Tilghman announced today that David Lee, Washington Herald reporter serving a 90-day sentence for contempt of court, had applied for a parole.

Lee and another reporter on his paper were sentenced by the Montgomer County Circuit Court on charges they had helped the paper to pubish a secret verdict before it was announced by the court and while another related trial was going on.

The reporters appealed to the court of appeals, which released the other reporter, but held that Lee would have to serve the sentence.

Virginia Ready For Park Visit Of Roosevelt

State Completes Plans for Dedication Friday of Shenandoah Area.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Big Meadows, Va., June 30.—President Roosevelt will come here Friday to dedicate Shenandoah National Park and to receive it formally into the national park system as a gift from Virginia at a celebration sponsored jointly by the State commission on conservation and development and the United States Department of the Interior.

He will deliver the dedicatory address at 2:30 p. m. here, 3,500 feet above sea level along the famous Skyline Drive in the Blue Ridge Mountains, with 50,000 persons expected to hear him here and with a Nationwide audience to listen to him over coast-to-coast hook-ups of the National and Columbia Broadcasting Companies.

The thousands who are planning to attend the exercises were advised here today by Wilbur C. Hall, chairman of the conservation commission to make an early start from their homes, so as to reach Big Meadows in time for the program.

One Way Traffic.

The Skyline Drive will be made one-way for incoming traffic from 7 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., and one-way for outgoing traffic from 2:30 p. m. to 6:30 p. m. on Friday. It is estimated that 10,000 automobiles can pass over the drive each hour under these arrangements.

Hall emphasized again today that the exercises are free to the public and no cards of admission are necessary. Parking at Big Meadows, where facilities are available for more than 20,000 automobiles also will be free.

Headquarters for the dedication, which have been at Richmond, were shifted on Monday to Skyland, a resort near here, and from this point Hall and his aids are completing arrangements.

Assisting him are Oliver G. Taylor, of the National Park Service, and J. R. Lassiter, park superintendent, who comprise the dedication comittee, together with the following from the Richmond office of the Conservation Comission: M. F. Pleasants, field assistant in the division of history; J. Stuart White, assistant director of the division of publicity and advertising, and Miss Anna Belle Foltz, secretary to Mr. Hall. Civilian Conservation Corps workers from camps along the drive are doing much of the work.

Ban Lifted.

The Federal Government has temporarily lifted the ban on concessions on the Skyline Drive by permitting the sale of food, drinks and native handicraft at Big Meadows from tomorrow through Saturday, and oil and gasoline from tank wagons along the drive on Friday only.

The program is timed to last only one hour and will open with music by the United States Marine Band. Hall will preside and the Right Rev. H. St. George Tucker, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Virginia, will pronounce the invocation. The first speaker will be Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior. After his address, Gov. George C. Peery will present President Roosevelt. The Right Rev. Peter L. Ireton, Bishop Coadjutor of the Catholic Diocese of Richmond, will deliver the benediction.

Fred Gochenour is the lucky recipient of the farm. He has been Yowell's tenant for the last 17 years.

$10,000 Theft Holds Ousted Bank Employe

Ex-Bookkeeper Seized on Warrant; Shortage May Reach $251,000.

By the Associated Press.

Rutland, Vt., June 30.—Deputy Sheriff John Dusckett today arrested John J. Cocklin, 42, discharged bank bookkeeper, on a warrant charging him with grand larceny of $10,000 from the Marble Savings Bank.

Gov. Charles M. Smith is president of the bank.

The warrant was issued by State's Attorney Asa S. Bloomer, who said the loss might run as high as $251,000. Bloomer said the thefts began in 1923 and were carried on until 1932. The method, Bloomer said, was to take sums from large inactive accounts and put them in false withdrawal slips.

Discharged in 1933.

Smith, president of the bank since 1920, tonight said Cocklin was discharged in May, 1933. George Carpenter, commissioner of banking, asserted a shortage was discovered at that time.

The item, Carpenter added, was written off and charged to surplus and undivided profits of the bank in a resolution adopted by the board of trustees in 1933.

Carpenter said Bloomer's investigations disclosed that $40,000 in bonds and $14,000 in cash had been recovered.

Smith asserted part of the shortage had been recovered, but he declined to say how much.

"That is an old matter," he said, "which was charged off and the bank is not now affected by it in any way. The depositors lost nothing."

Bail Set at $20,000.

Cocklin, a World War veteran, was in custody of a sheriff tonight trying to raise $20,000 bail.

Carpenter said Cocklin "used a considerable portion of it (the money in stock market speculations."

After his discharge from the bank Cocklin was appointed assistant city treasurer to the City of Rutland by Treasurer Will Davis. He gave up this position of his own accord recently.

Fruit Conserve Supreme Wins Contest Prize

Misunderstanding Disqualifies Many Recipes Using Canned Dried Fruit.

MANY and varied were the recipes submitted last week in The Post's contest for seasonal fruit preserves, conserves, jellies and marmalades.

It seemed, however, that there was some misunderstanding on the part of the women who entered recipes requiring canned and dried fruits rather than the fresh seasonal fruits stated in the rules of the contest. Naturally, none of these recipes, no matter how tempting they sounded, could be awarded a prize.

First prize, $5, is awarded Mrs. Rose A. Lusby, 815 Buchanan street northwest, for her recipe for conserve supreme. Second prize, $3, goes to Mrs. Agnes McNeilly, 1315 N. Vernon street, Clarendon, Va., for her recipe for red currant mint jelly. The three remaining prizes of $1 each go to Mrs. B. B. Beale, 4851 Brandywine street northwest, for her recipe for carrot and sour cherry marmalade, to Miss Carolyn Bennett, Leonardtown, Md., for her recipe for blackberry jelly and to Mrs. J. M. Campbell, 329 Elm avenue, Takoma Park, Md., for her recipe for cherry, pineapple and rhubarb preserves.

Conserve Supreme.

1 quart currants
1 quart red raspberries
1 quart gooseberries
1 quart red sour cherries
1 orange, 1 lemon, sliced thin, skin and all
¼ pound walnuts, chopped in coarse pieces

Wash and stem currants and gooseberries; wash and pit cherries, pick over raspberries. Put all together, add sliced orange and lemon. Measure fruit and add equal amount of sugar. Bring to boil slowly, and cook until thick. Before removing from heat, add walnuts. Pour into hot sterilized jelly jars.

Red Currant Mint Jelly.

5 cups currant juice
7 cups sugar
One-half cup fruit pectin
1 cup water
1 cup tightly packed mint leaves, chopped

Crush currants, add 1 cup water and mint leaves. Stir until mixture boils and simmer, covered, for ten minutes. Place fruit in jelly bag and squeeze out juice. Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan and mix, bringing to boil over a very hot fire.

Add pectin at once, stirring constantly. Bring to a rolling boil and boil hard one minute. Remove from fire and skim. Pour at once into clean jelly glasses, cover with paraffin at once.

If fresh mint is not available, mint extract may be added to taste upon removing from heat. The fresh mint is much more desirable for flavor, however.

Carrot and Sour Cherry Marmalade.

6 carrots
2 cups pitted sour cherries
1 orange
Sugar

Scrape and dice carrots and cook until tender in as little water as possible. Slice oranges in very thin slices and cut in small pieces. Mix fruit and carrots, measure and add ¾ as much sugar. Simmer until clear, stirring as little and as carefully as possible.

Blackberry Jelly.

4 cups blackberry juice
8 cups granulated sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 bottle liquid fruit pectin (8 ozs.)

To prepare juice crush thoroughly or grind about 3 quarts fully ripe, washed and hulled blackberries. Place in a jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice. Squeeze and strain juice from 1 medium-size lemon, measuring 2 tablespoons. Measure sugar and juices into large pan and mix. Bring to a boil over full heat and at once add liquid pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute. Remove from heat, skim, and pour quickly into clean, scalded jelly glasses. Paraffin at once with hot paraffin. Makes about 12 glasses, 6 fluid ounces each.

Cherry, Pineapple and Rhubarb Preserves.

4 cups sugar
1 cup water
2 quarts cherries
1 large pineapple
2 cups rhubarb cut in pieces

Boil sugar and water for 5 minutes. Add cherries (pitted), pineapple cut in small cubes and rhubarb cut in small pieces. Cook slowly until thick and transparent. Pour into clean glasses and seal.

Avocado Salads Gaining Favor

SUMMER menus for yachting parties, or merely as a suggestion of cooling sea breezes for inland sojourners, gain sophistication in the use of a sea-going salad which needs use no inmates of the sea to carry out the idea.

Arrange a boat, simply made from a quarter of one of the large summer avocadoes, with a triangular looking sail of thin, square cocktail cracker set into the prow of the boat at one of the four points. The cargo of the boat may be fruit, vegetable, sea food, or meat, to conform with the needs of the menu and to fit the occasion.

If you prefer the unshared flavor of avocadoes, serve without filling of any kind, lemon and salt sprinkled, and with a separate piquant dressing. A spoon is the proper accompaniment if the fruit is unpeeled. Watercress makes an ideal salad garnish for this service.

Summer avocadoes are more resistant to the test for softness because of their thicker shell. Press gently with the palms of both hands to gauge the condition of any avocado for serving. Real softness is unmistakable and not to be confused with the elastic stage which precedes softness.

Maple Sirup Enhances Flavor of Rice Pudding

If rice pudding has never been a popular dessert in your house try preparing it the next time with the addition of maple sirup as the sweetening agent. You will be delighted with the delicate and almost elusive flavor that it imparts.

Maple Rice Pudding Is Urged After a Salad Plate Luncheon

Recipe Given Which Is Designed to Create Appetite for New Desserts; Addition of Sirup Brings Pleasant Change From Lighter Dishes.

By Dorothea Duncan.

IF MAPLE SUGAR is your favorite flavor don't limit its use to serving with pancakes, waffles, French toast and hot biscuits. Maple sirup, like honey, is too frequently thought of merely in terms of a sirup. Women forget that it is a sweetening with a distinctive and wholesome flavor. You will find that maple sirup imparts an exquisite flavor to puddings, custards, sauces, ice creams and confections.

One dessert which is greatly improved by the addition of maple sirup is maple rice pudding. If you have never before been successful in creating among your family an appreciation for rice pudding, the following recipe will turn the trick. You will find this pudding a pleasant change from the lighter types of desserts so frequently served in the summer time. This pudding served hot or cold is especially good, for example, after a salad plate luncheon.

Maple Rice Pudding.

2½ cups milk
3 eggs (beaten)
1 cup maple sirup
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup raisins

Combine all ingredients and blend thoroughly. Place in a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about 35 minutes, or until custard is firm. This dessert may be served either hot or cold, accompanied with plain or whipped cream. It is delicious, too, when served hot with a sauce prepared with 1 cup heated maple sirup to ½ cup whipped cream. The cream is folded into the sirup after it has been heated. This amount serves 8.

Maple Sirup Cake.

½ cup sugar
One-third cup shortening
¾ cup maple sirup
½ cup milk
Salt
2¼ cups cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
3 egg whites

Cream the shortening and sugar together. Add the sirup and stir well. Sift flour once, measure and sift with baking powder and salt. Add flour and milk alternately, stirring well after each addition. Fold in the beaten whites and bake in a greased oblong pan in a moderate oven (350 to 375 degrees F.) 45 to 60 minutes. When the cake is baked and cool, place it on an inverted pan and cover with maple sugar frosting.

Maple Sugar Frosting.

¾ cup maple sirup
¼ cup sugar
1 egg white

Cook the sirup and sugar together until it spins a thread (220 degrees Fahrenheit) when dropped from a spoon. Pour this sirup slowly over the beaten egg white and beat until cold. This icing is quickly made and may be used to give a maple flavor to simple, inexpensive cakes or cookies.

Maple Mousse.

1¼ cups maple sirup
½ cup sugar
5 cups cream
2 tablespoons gelatin
¼ cup cold water

Combine maple sirup and one cup of cream and bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Add the gelatin softened in the water and dissolved over heat. Strain, cool in ice water until the mixture thickens, then add remainder of the cream, whipped stiff. Place in a mold, pack in ice and salt and let stand for four hours, or pack and freeze in trays of the mechanical refrigerator.

If freezing with ice and salt use equal portions.

Recipes for Hot Weather Appetizers Sought in Contest

IT IS A WISE woman who uses discrimination in selecting the correct appetizer for summer meals. For when the weather is especially warm and the appetite is lagging, the perfect selection of first course goes a long way in inducing finicky appetites to partake of food which they would otherwise reject.

The appetizer has become an important part of the dinner and luncheon meal in America as well as abroad. Refreshing jellied soups, chilly fruit combinations, iced or even partially frozen beverages, small crisp salads, using fruit or vegetable combinations or even small jellied molds, are just a few of the appetizers or first course upon which a housewife depends in the summer to whet indifferent appetites.

There are numerous other appetite inducements, too. Seafood combinations with interesting sauces are, of course, major appetite tempters in Washington.

Next week, in its weekly contest, The Post is asking for your favorite summer appetizer or first course. Cash awards will be offered for the five most interesting recipes. The first prize will be $5, the second, $3, and the three remaining prizes, $1 each.

To enter the contest merely write out the recipe of your favorite summer appetizer or first course and send it to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post. Be sure to mail your entry in time to reach this office by Saturday. The last request is especially important, as the recipes are judged for awards at this time. Many of the recipes in previous contests have been arriving as late as Tuesday of the following week, and naturally cannot be considered for a prize.

The contest rules also request your favorite recipe. Some women have been including as many as a dozen recipes in their entry instead of one as requested.

Blonde Movement Affects Furniture

Light Woods to Be Shown at Exposition.

Leather veneers and widespread use of blonde woods for furniture, air conditioning devices designed to meet the budget of the modest home owner and glassware in a variety of unusual guises are among new things for the home expected to center the attention of the nation's homemakers on the International Housefurnishings Exposition in the Merchandise Mart July 6-18.

Advance information from manufacturer exhibitors who will take part in the exposition indicate many revolutionary introductions in drapery materials and rugs as well as furniture and electrical gadgets.

Although the modified lines of the new modern furniture undoubtedly will be of widespread interest, the materials used for the new groups are even more arresting. Blonde mahogany and walnut provide the mediums for a large percentage of the modern pieces as well as for the seventeenth and eighteenth century reproductions which will receive strong emphasis. Pastel leather used as a veneer is another unusual material that appears in many of the new pieces.

Women Hold G.O.P. Rally In Maryland

Mrs. William Kelly Is Hostess at 'Horse and Buggy' Meeting.

Mrs. Walter Tuckermann and Mrs. Gann Speak Before Luncheon.

By Dudley Harmon.

The small private chapel on the Maryland estate of Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, where the rafters rang with hymns in the days when it was a Presbyterian church, yesterday resounded with the strains of "Oh Susanna" as more than 50 Republican women gathered for a "horse and buggy" rally. The meeting was sponsored by the District League of Republican Women, of which Mrs. Kelley is president.

An old horse and buggy which members had discovered after days of searching, and on which they had counted as the feature of the program, proved unavailable at the last minute. Undaunted, however, they continued their hunt yesterday morning and unearthed in the stable of a neighbor an ancient surrey, which was installed in the place of honor on the lawn of Mrs. Kelley's home. After luncheon it was brought to the upper terrace where the picnickers sat, and its appearance was the signal for loud applause and prolonged cheers.

In a half-hour address before luncheon, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, sister of the late Vice President Curtis, outlined Republican principles and attacked the Democrats' spending program.

She wore a blue print frock and a navy blue straw hat with a blue and white grosgrain ribbon.

Mrs. Tuckerman Speaks.

Mrs. Gann was followed on the platform by Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, chairman of the Montgomery County Federation of Republican Women, who asked the women of Washington to co-operate with women in Maryland in the campaign.

Politics were not forgotten, even over the luncheon table, and praise for Landon and Hamilton was mingled with enthusiastic remarks about the menu.

Coffee and sandwiches were distributed by Robert, a colored man born on the estate of Mr. Tuckerman's father. During the winter Robert is a page in the Supreme Court Building.

The lone man at the luncheon was Mr. Raymond Bellamy, who was Federal director of employment under the Hoover Administration, and who has stumped in two campaigns with his good friend, Mrs. Gann. Mr. Bellamy was accompanied by his 4lyear-old son, Raymond, jr., who, appropriately enough, was born on the day a similar rally was held on Mrs. Kelley's estate, and who has been a staunch Republican ever since.

Among the party workers who joined in yesterday's celebration were Mrs. Evelyn Chase and Mrs. Chester Swope, members of the board of the League of Republican Women; and Mrs. Meade Moore and her daughter, Miss Emily Moore, who sold elephant banks; Miss Moore, a student at Vassar, will leave next week to spend the summer at Poland Spring, Me.

The afternoon was devoted to speeches by former Representative Phillip Pitt Campbell and Mr. Byron Sedgwick, president of the Young Republicans Club of Maryland, who came after the luncheon.

Hazel Munroe Wed To Walter Mullen

Perform Ceremony at Bride's Home in Takoma Park.

Miss Hazel Lucille Munroe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Munroe, of Takoma Park, Md., was married yesterday afternoon to Mr. Walter William Mullen, of Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Mullen, of Philadelphia, at a simple wedding at the home of the bride's parents.

The Rev Reno S. Harp, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, officiated at the ceremony which took place at 4 o'clock before the fireplace in the living room. Palms, ferns and varied white flowers formed the decorations. The bride had her sister, Miss Elizabeth Munroe, as her only attendant. Mr. Roy Thomas, of Takoma Park, served as best man.

Immediately after the ceremony, there was a reception for about 50 close friends and relatives.

The couple will live at 3224 Wisconsin avenue after their wedding trip. The bride wore a navy blue and white traveling outfit. Mrs. Mullen has lived in Takoma Park all her life. She is a graduate of Central High School and a member of Theta Mu Sigma Sorority. Mr. Mullen is with the reconditioning department of the Home Owner's Loan Corporation.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Interesting Friends May Be Found Through Local Community Centers, Says Correspondent.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: From time to time I see in your column where some lonesome soul wishes to make friends. And I have often wondered if a recital of my experiences here woul dbe of any help. I came her two years ago, friendless and with the added liability of being 35, plumpish and not too personable. However, I was of a gregarious nature and well educated. Therefore I began to speculate on how to make contacts with thinking as well as pleasure loving persons of my own age. Matrimony was not the object, although I preferred men friends.

• • • •

Church work frankly bored me. I am too fat to hike. So I wandered over one night to a Community Center and found to my complete surprise, guess what? A class in contract bridge. Needless to say I attended regularly thereafter, met some charming people with whom I formed a private class for advanced instruction and then graduated into the duplicate bridge stratum. I now can have enjoyable amusement every night in the week if I so desire, in the company of both men and women.

• • • •

Lonely persons may be interested to know that during the winter months, every Community Center conducts bridge classes. hey are private teachers all over the city as well, a game of duplicate bridge can be found nearly every night in the week at the better hotels and apartment hotels, and there are clubs for the play of rubber bridge.

• • • •

The Sunday Post has a bridge editor who should be able to give all sorts of information on bridge games in Washington, and the Washington Bridge League—a non-profit-making organization—meets twice monthly at the Shoreham.

Size, age, sex and beauty or lack of beauty are leveled at the bridge table. The game affords mental stimulus in attractive surroundings with intelligent people; and to soothe the qualms of the righteous, it is not gambling. Sincerely,

J. H. G.

DEAR J. H. G.: It seems to me this recital of your experience in finding friends in Washington may well be a challenge to lonely readers to go and do likewise. I have often called attention of correspondents to the Community Center projects in Washington, and at one time devoted a lengthy column to discussion of the many classes of study offered during the winter season, which, as I remember, include languages, arts, crafts, literature, drama, dancing, bridge, play writing and other fascinating subjects. I am sure the bridge editor of The Post will be very pleased to advise any inquirers where they may be able to contact a congenial group of bridge players in the city.

Seeks Literary Contacts.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Is it possible for you to secure the name and address of "Honest Adviser," whose letter was published in your column of June 27? BOBBIE.

• • • •

DEAR BOBBIE: The name and address of "Honest Adviser," as well as the name of the church to which he belongs, was confidentially imparted to me in the letter he wrote for publication in this column. However, I do not feel at liberty to publish his identity here, and since you failed to give your name or address there seems to be nothing I can do about bringing you two together.

M. H.

Seeks Introduction.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am new in Washington—trying to make a living free lance writing. But it is an uphill game and I feel the need of stimulation and social contacts which one would get from a good literary club. Would you please give me the names of any such clubs in Washington and any other information which you deem worthwhile. Much success in your work and believe me to be, cordially yours, J. M. W.

DEAR J. M. W.: An excellent club of the sort you seek, and in fact the only club of the kind I happen to know about, is the Free Lance Writers' Club, which meets twice monthly at the Shoreham Hotel during the winter months. However, meetings were recessed in May, not to be resumed until October. I suggest you get in touch with Col. Edmund S. Sayer, writer and member of the club, who knows a great deal about writers' organization in Washington and who is, moreover, an interesting gentleman to know. Col. Sayer has said he will be glad to meet you. He lives at 4801 Brandywine avenue northwest, and his telephone number is CLeveland 3734. Call him and say that I referred you to him.

M. H.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Relief of Arthritis.

In our search for a drug that will bring about relief of symptoms in and cure of that widespread condition, arthritis, some of us have forgotten the basic remedies which nature herself supplies. Chief among these is heat. In earlier discussions it has been pointed out that the disease in question destroys the circulation: in fact, many tiny blood vessels will be completely blocked and the affected areas deprived of needed blood. Moderate heat from any source—hot-water bottles, hot baths, electric pads—will dilate capillaries, soften tissues and, coupled with massage, greatly increase the supply of blood.

A simple plan of applying moist heat is to surround the joint with a thick Turkish towel wrung out of hot water, protecting the couch with a rubber sheet. An ordinary electric heater may then be adjusted to maintain the temperature. The application may be continued for an hour or more, changing the towel once each 30 minutes. Very little attention is required, although care must be taken to avoid burning. To receive the greatest benefit the warm, moistened part should then be massaged gently. A small amount of sterile cocoa butter or coconut oil may be used on the hands to lubricate the skin. No force should be employed, and if there is the slightest evidence of pain the procedure should be stopped.

Many mistakes are made in the use of massage through too vigorous squeezing and kneading of muscles. The objective, of course, is increased circulation with better muscle tone. The gentlest kind of stroking is demanded.

With many patients there may come a time when muscles will atrophy because of disuse. This means that careful manipulation must be instituted. As soon as it is determined that massage is of benefit, exercise of some sort may be prescribed. In most instances this is possible, and muscles will obey the commands sent them by the nervous system. This does not mean that massage should be stopped, but that both should continue, each supplementing the other. With the patient lying in bed, movements of the fingers, wrists, elbows, shoulder joints, knees, ankles and toes may be undertaken. Again the dictum, "pain means stop," must be kept in mind. We must observe care in not allowing any form of exercise that produces fatigue. If the patient is out of bed and can walk, so much the better, even though crutches or a cane may be required. Considerable advantage follows the practice of walking up a slight incline.

These three measures—heat, massage, and exercise—are invaluable for the arthritic, and directions for home use of the electric baker, the hot paraffin bath for hands, and for simple massage will be forwarded on request, accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

New Face Powder Has Come Hither Scent and Actually Stays Put.

(The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.)

THERE is a gorgeous new face powder recently brought out for your approval, and if you don't approve, you don't know face powder. That is my opinion but you don't have to believe me. The powder is exquisitely fine in texture, delicately perfumed with different fine fragrances and it stays on the skin so that you don't have to replenish it constantly.

The same company puts out just as fine a bath powder in the same scents, also a powder of exquisite texture. The best part of all this news is that the price is nominal. You get a very fine powder for a very moderate price. The only difficulty is that you will want to go around kissing your friends so that they will get a whiff of its delicate perfume.

A face powder to stay on—and that is what women are looking for—must be of a certain stay-where-you-put-it consistency, and it must also be applied after some sort of a foundation which will help hold it. But I have known powders that would not stick no matter what foundation you used. Because this one will and because it won't break you to buy it, I can sincerely advise you to try a box of the face powder and the bath powder, too, if you need it. For summer it's great.

There is a little lamb's-wool puff in the face-powder box that certainly doesn't detract from the package and it spreads powder beautifully.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column telephone The Washington Post, National 4200, extension 323.

Women of Australia Follow Lead Set by U. S.

Feminist Declares Countrywomen, "in Line With World in Being Behind," Are Striving to Gain Recognition as Human Beings.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

A VIEW OF Australian women and a glimpse of American women through the eyes of a foreign visitor were given yesterday by Mrs. Edith Glanville, widely known feminist, writer, Quota Club leader and welfare worker, of Sydney, Australia.

Declaring that women of her country are "in line with the world in being behind," Mrs. Glanville deplored the apathy of the average housewife in Australia. "Compared with American women we are still in a pioneer state and largely concerned with domestic duties. Although we have a few representatives in the professions and in public offices, we have never, as a whole, taken an active part in public life. Today, we are waking up to our task. Trying to follow the example set in America, our women are making a sincere effort to raise our status and gain recognition we deserve as human beings.

In Washington for a few days, Mrs. Glanville has been getting acquainted with some of the members of the National Woman's Party, because, as she explained it, "I want to know every woman who has worked with Alice Paul. She and her associates are the ones who deserve the credit for curbing the back-to-the-home movement."

Mrs. Glanville first met Miss Paul at Geneva in 1934, "although I had heard of her for many years," she said. "I don't believe American women have any idea what this courageous worker has done for women of the world. Her activity has inspired all of us. If she and her associates can swing the Equal Rights Treaty at the League and can get the equal rights bill passed in America, woman's position everywhere will be elevated."

Although she is an ardent feminist and has been active in the women's movement in Australia, Mrs. Glanville also has some other absorbing interests. She has attended meetings of the League of Nations four times "as a refugee worker concerned with the welfare of the Assyrians, who aided the Allies in the World War and have been charges of the League of Nations ever since. Just now they are being given a permanent home in Syria," she continued, "but the task of getting them settled is a difficult one."

Mrs. Glanville became interested in the Assyrians a number of years ago when she was connected with the Near East Relief. Her work in their behalf has won her a special privilege; she is the only Britisher allowed on the left bank of the Euphrates where the Assyrians are settling.

"You see, these unfortunate people are being brought out of Irak (formerly Mesopotamia), which is under British mandate, into a country under French mandate," she explained. "France agreed to take care of the refugees provided the League of Nations would provide the money to move them into Syria, and provided no other country would take part in the movement." The French High Commissioner in Syria gave Mrs. Glanville special permission to aid the Assyrians in getting settled.

And Call It Accident

By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

Chapter XX.

THE DAYS went quickly by, and during almost each of those days Ruth Starling had been in touch with the manor house and its occupants. She had had tea with Lady Cicester the day following her first ride with Lord John, and the whole party, including Helen Bates, had been asked over to play tennis. Further, after a second glorious ride with her new friend, Iris had asked him to what had turned out a pleasant picnic on a stretch of sand within half a mile of the castle.

And now, about a fortnight after their arrival at Perranuth castle, Iris and Philip stood together watching Lady Cicester's luxurious motor car bearing their paying guest away for lunch, this time alone, at the manor house. In a pleasant little note which had come that morning at nine o'clock, Miss Starling had been asked if she would be kind enough to come to lunch so that she might explain certain things that the writer wished to know concerning the American couple belonging to the embassy who were to form part of the week-end party.

A few minutes ago Iris had looked at Ruth with one of her derisive smiles, "I suppose we may expect you to be home in time for dinner?"

"I'll be back by 4, of course. I've not forgotten you're taking me to Lilyford."

"I'm sure John will want you to stay to tea."

"I shall tell him I can't do that."

Philip chipped in: "As a matter of fact, a chap in my old regiment who is within ten miles of here phoned just now and asked me to come over and bring Iris to meet his wife. But we didn't like to accept, as she'd got a plan with you."

"Please accept his invitation. Of course I shall be quite happy alone this afternoon," and so it had been arranged.

Iris Chides Philip.

The motor which was conveying their paying guest to the manor house looked already a speck on the ribbon-like road before either husband or wife spoke. Then Philip took Iris' hand. "You were right, my dear, as usual. I agree that John has gone dotty over that girl."

He spoke in a hesitant, awkward tone, and Iris looked at him gravely, as she asked, "Why don't you take a little more trouble about her, Phil? I can't make you out. After all, it's most important she should believe you're interested in her, and you're not going about the way to make her do so." As he said nothing, she went on: "She told me this morning that she's afraid you don't think she'll ever be a success as an actress. If you're not careful, she'll find some one who at any rate will pretend he thinks she's a genius, and where shall we be then?"

He astounded her by one of the very few outbursts of temper in which he had ever indulged with reference to herself, for dropping her hand, he exclaimed:

"Can't you sometimes realize that I'm not so stupid as you think, darling? How long have we been here? How long has that girl been here? A bare two weeks. Give a fellow time! The truth is, I'm not feeling well. Another truth is that I talk to her far more about her beastly play and that beastly theater when you're not here than when you are. The truth is, I'm getting to hate her!"

"My dearest boy!" Her voice was full of remorse, pain, tenderness. "I had no idea you didn't feel well."

He responded at once, as he always did to any gesture of love on her part. Indeed, he quickly turned around and hugged her.

"My precious pet! I'm sorry I was so cross. Unluckily I'm a bit bothered about money."

"Can't you ask Ruth for another check?"

"I don't like to do that yet. Do let me manage Ruth Starling my own way, darling. You see, you like her, and I hate her. That's the long and short if it! It would have been so jolly of we had been here alone together. But there she is all the time——"

Iris laughed. She really could not help it, puzzled and troubled as she was about her husband's curious condition of mind and body. "Why, we see hardly anything of her, now that John has taken that silly fancy to her!"

"She gets up at cockerow," he said disagreeably, "and she's here every evening. Just when I feel tired out, she wants me to start talking about her damn play."

She looked into his now sullen face with apprehension. "Of course I've known there was something the matter. Do make a clean breast of it——"

And then her voice fell almost into a whisper: "Who's dunning you now? I thought you'd paid up everything."

"I haven's paid up that brute Rawle. And he wants something on account."

"Does he know about Ruth?"

"Yes, I thought that would keep him quiet for a bit. But it's only made him dun me the more."

"Would you like me to ask her for some money? I don't mind a bit."

But of course he knew she would mind, and mind very much. Iris was still a proud woman. He had long ago lost what pride he had, when it came to approaching a likely person for money.

"Could you tell her you're in a bit of a hole yourself?" he said in a shamefaced voice. "I don't want her to be always making out checks to me. I was rather sorry she made out the one for 200 pounds for the bathroom to 'Capt. Trefane.'"

Iris remembered the delight which the sight of that check had induced in Philip. But she remained silent. Also he was certainly speaking the truth now.

"Yes," he exclaimed suddenly. "That's the thing to do. She seems awfully fond of you, and I'm not blaming her for that, of course."

His wife winced at the thought of asking Ruth Starling for money for herself, yet she knew she would have to do it.

"I can't make out why you don't get in touch at once with the people who own the Mayfair theater," she said hesitatingly.

"I did phone to London yesterday, and heard that the man who really matters in the business is off on a climbing holiday in Switzerland. They don't even know where he is."

Iris Puzzled.

"When will he be back?"

"Not for another fortnight."

"That's a pity; I long for it to be settled," she said uneasily.

"Sufficient for the day is the evil thereof," he muttered. Then: "Do you really want to go out this afternoon?"

"No, of course I don't, and I think what you ought to have, old boy, is a real rest; you're so horribly restless."

"I've reason be," and then he let himself fall into a chair.

Iris looked at him anxiously. Always before, during a country holiday, they would walk, go boating, even golf together, though there was no golf course really near. Was he hiding anything from her concerning his health? His sudden fit of cramp had puzzled and disturbed her very much.

After they had had their light lunch, the sort of lunch Iris liked, which consisted simply of vegetables and fruit, Philip suggested that they should go and see what had been done to the annex. Willingly she agreed. She had seldom known her husband to take so much real trouble over anything as he had done over the bathroom to which the finishing touches had been put that morning. Iris herself had gone to considerable trouble to make the other room pretty and comfortable. Ruth Starling was to sleep there for the first time tonight, and it was with justifiable pride that she opened the door of the bedroom.

"My word, darling, this is lovely!" and Philip looked round him with surprise and admiration.

Suddenly he exclaimed: "This must have cost a pretty penny! Is our little Ruth standing in on this?"

"Well, no, I think it will have to be our present to her," said Iris quietly. "As a matter of fact, it didn't cost very much, Phill, for of course all these things will go back to Daisy Trent the day we leave the castle."

"I suppose Mrs. Trent has everything insured?"

"I don't think so."

She looked what she felt, surprised. "It's for such a short time." As she opened the bathroom door: "It's a pity we can't take the bathroom away, too!" she exlaimed. And then: "What a perfectly beautiful bath——"

"Isn't it? Old Bowser was quite overawed when he saw it. He told me there wasn't a bath like that between here and London. But I venture to doubt that!"

"It looks exactly like glass."

"It is glass, run over some form of metal, I suppose. To tell you the truth, Iris, it's an American bath. I thought your dear Ruth would like that." He added good humoredly, "You're not the only clever one in this partnership, darling. When I knew money was no object I got into touch with a chap who represents several big New York firms in London and he just happened to have that bath in stock."

Then he burst out laughing. "Monster John is paying for the bathroom, and I was determined he should have something to pay for. He'll stare when he sees the account even if he's only half as close fisted as his mamma."

Iris laughed too. She was keenly amused at the thought of what she hoped would be Lord John's dismay at the size of the bill about to be presented to him.

Poor Speech Is an Enemy

COLD-SHOULDERED! And she had planned so long for a lovely vacation.

No wonder Sue is heart-sick. But you can't blame the summer resort crowd either. Sue has been presenting entirely the wrong picture of herself to them.

"I don't know as I can go any more swimming today," she said soon after her arrival. "Tom and myself went to the beach, but he don't seem to care for the water. He's over there opposite of Jim."

If you told Sue that she was shunned because she said "don't know as" for "don't know that;" "go" for "enjoy" or "endure;" "myself" instead of "I;" "he don't" for "he doesn't" and "opposite of" for "opposite" or "opposite to" — why she'd just laugh and say "Nerts!"

She thinks that people who try to talk correctly are "prissy" and says she feels like a dummy when she says "between you and me" instead of the incorrect "between you and I."

"Lots of nice people talk slang and don't try to sound like little Rollo," she argues.

Certainly. Some slang is amusing. Other phrases are cheap. "You're a wow," "a lousy break" are cheap. But "you're simply tops," "off to a good start" are heard in the mouths of lively but cultivated people.

Send 15c for our booklet, COMMON ERRORS IN ENGLISH, to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

Peace Planning Held Essential In Winning War

Mobilization of Every Resource Is Stressed by Gen. Craig.

Peace-time planning in advance for the mobilization of the economic and material resources of the Nation are essential for the waging of successful war, Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff, said yesterday in an address to 53 graduates of the Army Industrial College in the Public Health Building auditorium.

Recalling that the Industrial College was founded in "cognizance of the fact that in a modern war of major magnitude every resource of the Nation—human material and economic—must be mobilized to insure success," Gen. Craig cited the lessons of the World War as to the need of peace-time planning.

"We entered the World War with little conception of the military and industrial effort that would be required," he asserted. "We had the greatest amount of difficulty in determining our requirements. We were unable to give industry a clear picture of our probably military needs. Industry and commerce found it difficult to make the adjustments necessary.

"From the World War we learned that we must first determine our requirements, the priority of our needs and then the availibility of materials necessary for the fabrication of our military supplies. Plans for fighting must be made in peace, if at all. Similarly, our procurement planning must be done when the country is at peace, else in a future struggle we may have the same confusions and delays that hampered our efforts in the World War."

Diplomas were given the graduates by Assistant Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring.

Jury May Reopen Flogging Inquiry

Wilmington, N. C., June 30 (AP).—A special grand jury session to investigate Columbus County's floggings by masked night riders was considered tonight as the foreman of the panel revealed an alleged attempt to influence a juror.

Foreman Hackett Applewhite, at his home in Bolton, said he favored a special session to resume the jury inquiry that was halted Friday when court adjourned at Whitemille, the county seat, after some 30 witnesses had been examined. Other agencies continued the inquiry however.

While the investigation into the beating of at least four women and two men was under way, Applewhite said a man approached a member of the grand jury with the remark, "I've got a friend involved, and I want you to look out for him."

The foreman said the juror had declined to name the man as yet.

Admen Advocate 'Greater Truth'

Boston, June 30 (AP).—An even greater measure of "truth in advertising" was advocated today before the thirty-second annual convention of the Advertising Federation of America by William H. McLeod, sales manager of William Filene's Sons Co.

Said McLeod, "We have gone far, but not far enough" in this direction.

"We don't publish outright lies any more," he declared, "yet in advertising we forget our breeding and manners."

McLeod suggested "a new urge" toward the truth.

Speaking on "publicity problems that cause many headaches," he made a plea for "decent co-operative advertising between manufacturer and retailer."

Stamp-Bearing Rockets To Be Fired Into Mexico

McAllen, Tex., June 30 (AP).—Rockets containing American and Mexican stamps will be fired across the Rio Grande along the Mexican border south of here July 2 in a stunt conceived by American Legionnaires to help pay for their new $10,000 building here.

The tubes crossing from the United States to Mexico will carry 2,000 covers bearing the new 40-centavo airmail stamp commemorating opening of the Mexico City-to-Laredo highway tomorrow. Rockets from Reynosa, Mex., to the American side will carry covers bearing the United States 16-cent special delivery airmail stamp.

Taken to Emergency Hospital by another motorist, Oertel was pronounced dead on arrival.

Body at District Morgue.

The body was taken late in the afternoon to the District Morgue, where it was identified last night.

Buchholz, not realizing the seriousness of the accident, continued his trip to Virginia after making a report to Park Policeman W. R. Lutes. He was expected to return today and will be held pending the outcome of the coroner's inquest.

Park policemen said that marks on the right side of the Buchholz car indicated that the man had run from the sidewalk into the side of the car.

In an automobile-street car collision in Brentwood, Mrs. Agnes M. Myers, 40, of 821 Maryland avenue northeast, the driver of the car, suffered a possible fracture of the right arm and possible internal injuries.

She was taken to Sibley Hospital by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad, where her condition was said to be not serious.

According to Hyattsville police, the accident occurred as Mrs. Myers' car was about to pass another automobile in the middle of the street.

A 4-year-old colored girl, Roberta Gladden, of 8 N street southwest, was injured when struck at the intersection of Howison and N streets southwest by a car operated by Laurel M. de Meritt, 22, of 4000 Twenty-first street northeast.

Pardon for Boland Is Refused by Nice

Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland yesterday declined to pardon John Martin Boland, of Washington, convicted of conspiracy with Mrs. Anne Lyddane to murder her husband, but suggested that Boland seek a parole when he becomes eligible in September.

State's Attorney Jame M. Pugh went to Annapolis to ask the Governor that Boland be freed from his four-year term which followed his conviction on charges of which Mrs. Lyddane was acquitted later by a jury at Hagerstown. Pugh said it was unfair, since Mrs. Lyddane was acquitted, that Boland should serve out his term.

Gov. Nice said he would not act favorably on Boland's application for parole in September unless it was approved by the three judges of the circuit court who found him guilty.

Louisiana Blocks Roosevelt Pledge

Baton Rouge, La., June 30 (AP).—Without objection, the Louisiana Senate today agreed to withdraw a concurrent resolution pledging the Legislature to exert its efforts toward the re-election of President Roosevelt.

The resolution, drawn by Senator John J. Wingrave, of New Orleans, was returned to the calendar last night after Senator James A. Noe objected to the Legislature going on record with a resolution which he said "praised the worst enemy Huey P. Long ever had."

When the resolution was called up this morning Lieut. Gov. Earl K. Long, brother of the late Senator and president of the Senate, asked Senator Wingrave to withdraw it.

"In view of the congested condition of the calendar and the likelihood of extended debate over this resolution I wish you would withdraw it," the Lieutenant Governor said.

"I will consent to withdrawal," Wingrave replied, and the resolution was dropped from further consideration.

WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, JULY 1, 1936

D. C. Awaits Greatest '4th' In Its History

Final Reports on Plans Given by Chairmen at Meeting.

Rehearsal Will Be Held by Patriotic Groups Tomorrow Night.

Washington is prepared for one of its greatest Fourth of July celebrations in history, the committee in charge announced yesterday after chairmen had made final reports on plans for the event.

The fireworks, always the climax of the Independence Day observance, will be unusually brilliant as $100 more has been spent for them this year than was spent a year ago. At 8:35 p. m. Saturday $850 will go up into smoke and flame and dazzling light on the Washington Monument Grounds.

Although the fireworks display undoubtedly will be the most popular attraction, C. Melvin Sharpe and his committee also have made arrangements for an elaborate procession of flags with all patriotic organizations in the Capital taking part.

Radcliffe to Speak.

Senator George L. Radcliffe (Democrat), of Maryland, will speak but his remarks will be limited to 10 minutes so the Roman candle and skyrocket performance can start on time. Col. Edwin Alexander Halsey, Senate secretary, will read the Declaration of Independence.

Last year the crowd which gathered on the Monument Grounds for the celebration was estimated at 100,000. That number will be exceeded this year, the committee believes, providing the weather is clear.

Harold G. Haydon, chairman of tickets and seating, said at the luncheon meeting yesterday at the Harrington Hotel that 1,100 seats are on sale this year, 200 more than last year.

Several hundred persons were unable to obtain chairs last Fourth of July and Hayden expects the same condition to prevail Saturday night. He announced that tickets are on sale at hotels, department stores, newspaper offices and at the regular agencies. They also may be bought at 1700 I street northwest, and will be on sale at the Monument Grounds all day Saturday.

Entire Day of Events.

In addition to the program in the outdoor theater at the base of the Monument, which will begin at 7:15 with a Marine Band concert, the celebration committee has planned an entire day of events, to be held at several playgrounds and pools.

In all, 300 medals, gold, silver and bronze, will be awarded at the athletic meets. The festivities will begin at 10 a. m. at Banneker, Taft, Wesley Heights and Takoma Park recreation centers, at the National Training School for Boys and at Fort Bayard where the American University Park Association will hold its gathering.

Swimming meets will begin at 10 a. m. at Banneker, Mckinley and Francis pools. The Takoma pool's program will start at 1 p. m.

Winfree E. Johnson, chairman of the committee which arranged the playground and pool schedule for Saturday, announced that the Welfare and Recreational Association of the office of the National Capital Parks had given $60 toward the $100 spent for the gold, silver and bronze medals.

Business Houses to Close.

Although most business houses will be closed all day Saturday, the Fourth of July spirit will be evident in the downtown area through a display of flags and other patriotic decorations. Frank R. Jelleff, chairman of the city decoration and illumination committee, reported yesterday that merchants had promised to co-operate in giving the day a gala appearance.

Tomorrow night at 7 the members of patriotic societies who are to be in the procession of flags will rehearse on the Monument Grounds. Lighting effects, unusually elaborte this year, and the amplifying system, will be tried out at that time.

Another feature arranged for Saturday is a tour of the forts in and around Washington. The National Capital Parks has planned this event which will start at 9 a. m. and cover 38 miles. Buses will be provided for those who don't bring their own cars. The entire party will stop at Fort Totten for lunch.

Water Charge Slash Ordered Continued

Continuation of the 25 per cent reduction in water rents was ordered yesterday by the District Commissioners upon recommendation of Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner. The rent is $6.75 for 10,000 cubic feet of water.

Col. Sultan said it was decided to continue the reduction because the Water Department has a surplus of nearly $500,000.

Community Center Chief Ends 5 Years in Office, Maps Plans

Seven New Clubs for Young People, Enlarged Schedule and More Trained Leaders Goal of Mrs. Peeples, Veteran Director.

Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, who completed five years of service as director of the Community Center Department of the Public Schools, took one look at the calendar in her office and immediately outlined her objectives for the next 12 months.

They are:

Seven new community clubs for young people.

A four-night-a-week schedule for all existing centers instead of the present schedule of one and two nights a week.

More trained leaders for athletics, music, drama and dancing.

"I want to serve the Southwest section better," she said. "There is no club there now for white young people. A club is also needed for white persons in Anacostia, and the new Anacostia Junior High School building seems the ideal place for it."

Wants Center in Trinidad.

Mrs. Peeples said she also hoped to establish a recreational center in the Trinidad section as the mothers there have appealed to her for a spot where their children might gather after school and in the evenings. She also has urgent appeals from parents in Chevy Chase, she said.

"They want the Woodrow Wilson building to be open to their children for community activities and I want to arrange that for them if I possibly can," said the director.

Since her budget has been increased 50 per cent over last year she thinks she can come fairly colse to carying out her objectives. The colored sections, she explained, need many new centers "but that problem is so extensive it must be thoroughly studied before we make actual plans."

Washington-born, Elizabeth Peeples was appointed director of the Community Center Department by the Board of Education to succeed Miss Sybil Baker, who was made head of the Playground Department in 1931. Only one other person had held the job, created in 1915 by an act of Congress. That was Miss Cecil Norton, who is now Mrs. Charles Broy.

Was Principal Before.

Before Mrs. Peeples became the director she was principal of the Brightwood School for five years and says her work there was excellent preparation for managing the Community Center Department.

In her present job she is in charge of school buildings during after-school hours and deals with all requests for their use. Most of them now are routine and come from employes of Government agencies, citizens' associations or self-help groups.

But once, before Mrs. Peeples was the director, Eastern High School was requested for a wedding. James Kidwell, leader of the Elks' Boys Band, was the bridegroom. The band practiced at Eastern and so Kidwell and his fiancee wanted to be married there.

Mrs. Peeples said she never has had any trouble dealing with people. Her biggest problem during the last five years has been lack of money. But now, with her increased appropriation, she is looking forward to the day when 28 community centers eventually can be operated on a daily and nightly schedule.

One-Man Car Hearing in D. C. Slated July 13

Roberts Mapping Campaign for Reduction in Transit Fares.

Backed by the organized citizenry of Washington, People's Counsel William A. Roberts yesterday began to map a campaign for reduction in street car and bus fares and to oppose extension of one-man street cars.

The Public Utilities Commission meanwhile scheduled for July 13 a hearing on the request of the Capital Transit Co. to adopt 40 one-man cars.

Roberts said he considered the Monday mass meeting, despite the sharp differences of opinion expressed, to have given him a mandate to fight for a uniform low fare and to resist further substitution of one-man for two-man cars.

Following a discussion with Edward D. Merrill, general manager of the Capital Transit Co., at the mass meeting, Roberts yesterday wrote him a letter suggesting that they exchange ideas on plans for improving the street car and bus service.

Praising Merrill for his management of the Washington Rapid Transit Co., Roberts said it was something new in local public utility affairs for him to appear at the protest gathering.

"I realize that it takes genuine manhood to walk into a meeting of that kind prepared to listen to criticism and with a determination to gain from it."

Trial Story Error Corrected by Post

In a story printed in The Post yesterday it was stated that James J. Laughlin, counsel for Irene M. Anderson, argued for the life sentence, which would make the woman eligible for parole after 15 years. Under her present status, she must stay in prison for 20 years minus time off for good behavior.

According to Laughlin, the appeal was based on the fact that the indeterminate sentence law provides for a maximum and minimum sentence in all felonies (with the exception of the death penalty for first-degree murder). In second-degree cases, Laughlin pointed out the courts have been giving straight sentences. It was his contention that this was contrary to the statute.

The Court of Appeals decided that the indeterminate sentence law couldn't be applied in second-degree murder cases due to the mathematical impossibility of computing the life span. The Post regrets the error.

Maj. Brown Forms New Squad To Unify Work of 2 Bureaus

Public Relations Bureau to Replace, Consolidate Other Units.

Formation of a Public Relations Squad, replacing and consolidating the functions of the Crime Prevention Bureau and the Missing Persons Bureau, and promotion of Capt. Maurice J. Collins, commander of the Seventh Police Precinct, to the rank of inspector, were announced yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

Lieut. Horace W. Lineberg, now attached to the Crime Prevention Bureau, will head the new squad, and his personnel will consist of five police privates, a policewoman and a clerk.

The elevation of Capt. Collins, was a move toward Maj. Brown's decision to divide the city into three inspection districts instead of two, as at present.

Inspector Bernard Thompson, chief of detectives, discussed the new squad last night, and said that its duties would consist of handling all cases in which persons are reported missing, and following these cases through until they are solved.

Identification Unit.

Cases of unidentified dead also will be handled by the squad. Indentities of persons killed or dead from disease, will be determined by the men detailed to the squad. This also will include identification of persons who have drowned and whose bodies are unclaimed.

Among other functions will be censoring motion pictures where this is thought necessary by authorities, and the inspection of licenses of second-hand dealers.

Bureau members will work on a supplementary file system of different type of cases handled, thus supplementing the work of the Statistical Bureau. There will be different forms of files for each type of case, authorities pointed out.

Located at police headquarters, the squad will begin its tour of duty at 8 a. m. and finish at midnight.

At the time the new squad was announced Maj. Brown said that Private A. G. Kassins, who has been in the Crime Prevention Bureau, would be transferred immediately to administrative headquarters, and assigned to handle juvenile delinquency cases.

Police privates named to the squad last night were Patrolmen John Apostilides, A. E. Fradette, O. S. Hunt, J. O. Patton and S. D. Scott. The policewoman is to be named later, along with the clerk.

Night Supervisor.

Inspector Collins will be assigned to the position of night supervisor to replace Inspector William E. Holmes, who will be placed in charge of the new third inspection district.

The new position will carry additional compensation of $900 for Inspector Collins.

Capt. John E. Bowers of the Eighth Precinct will be transferred to the Seventh Precinct to succeed Collins. Lieut. H. R. Lohman, oldest member of the force in terms of service, will take over the command of the Eighth Precinct until the Civil Service Commission certifies a new captain.

Maj. Brown issued orders yesterday that the new district and their inspectors will be as follows:

Inspector James F. Beckett will inspect the first district, Precincts 1, 2, 3 and 7.

Inspector Edward J. Kelly will be in charge of the second district, Precincts 6, 8, 10 and 12.

Inspector William E. Holmes will take command of the new third district, Precincts 4, 5, 9, 11 and harbor.

Restoration of the third district will return the department to the status of 1933, when Maj. Brown was appointed superintendent. At that time, because of reduction in personnel, one district was absorbed by the other two.

15 Other Transfers.

Fifteen other transfers were announced.

Private P. J. Jordan, from the Traffic Division to the First Precinct; Private P. J. O'Sullivan, dismounted from motorcycle and transferred from the Traffic Division to the Second Precinct; Private B. M. Moore, from the Third to the sixth Precinct; Private Vincent Minton, from the Third to the Sixth Precinct; Private Allen Love, from the Second to the Sixth Precinct; Private M. J. Geary, from the Seventh to the Ninth Precinct; Private E. E. Devey, from the Traffic Division to the Twelfth Precinct; Private L. M. Snyder, from the Tenth to the First Precinct; Private H. L. Pearson, from the Fifth to the Ninth Precinct; Private O. P. Fuss, mounted on motorcycle and will remain in the Seventh Precinct; Private J. J. Boyd, mounted on motorcycle to remain in the Traffic Division; Private A. J. Kaskesi, from the Seventh to the Traffic Division; Private A. W. Kasius from the Detective Bureau to Administrative Headquarters; Private J. T. White, dismounted from motorcycle to remain in Traffic Division, and Private W. B. Sparks, dismounted from motorcycle to remain at Traffic Division.

Feminists Score Again—Dog Tags Are All One Price

Suffragists can chalk up another victory in the elimination of sexual inequality in the law.

In past years males were taxed only $1 and females $2. Just where the complaint that brought about the change came from—the male dogs on a point of pride or some female organization—could not be learned.

Sale of the tax tags starts today on the first floor of the District Building, and all dogs will be required to display a tag before the end of July.

Re-election Is Due For Mrs. Doyle

Direct Relief Cut Approved For District

Grant Will Enable City to Proceed With 125 Projects.

The District Commissioners yesterday formally approved the proposed reduction in direct relief for unemployables because of the District act limitation of administrative costs to $200,000, as the WPA was allotted $1,032,500 here yesterday.

William Cleary, deputy WPA administrator, said the Federal allocation would enable the District to continue operation of 125 projects.

About 10,512 persons are now employed on these projects. Cleary could not say whether any of the 1,000 being dropped from the relief rolls of the welfare department would be assimilated in the WPA, but he explained that any person certified by a public relief agency was eligible for WPA work.

WPA Projects Listed.

The WPA projects include construction jobs on sewers, highways, parks, school grounds and playgrounds, with a sewing room. Work also is being done on a tuberculosis camp at Bald Eagle Hill, but none of the new allotment is required for this project.

Of the $1,032,500 just allotted, $828,500 is for July. WPA officials expect to get further allotments during the next fiscal year, although they will be required gradually to reduce the monthly expenditures and number of projects.

In approving reduction of the public assistance division administrative staff by 125, the commissioners specified that another check of operations will be made October 1 to determine if further economies are possible.

Opposed to Spending All.

Melvin C. Hazen, president of the board, explained that the Commissioners were opposed to spending every cent of the $200,000 allowed for relief administration unless it is necessary. If transfers from relief rolls to old-age and blind pensions permit by fall, the staff may be cut further.

The Commissioners also aproved an allocation of the remaining $1,400,000 for direct relief over a 12-month period, allowing about $112,000 for the summer and fall, and $124,000 for winter periods, when the need is more acute.

"If we find we need more money when Congress reconvenes," Hazen said, "we will ask for a supplemental appropriation rather than a deficiency appropriation. We are not going to spend the money allocated for next spring during the winter."

British Films Are Booked by Warner Houses

Gaumont-British Pictures Are Bought for Earle and Metropolitan.

The pick of England's leading screen productions will be presented in Washington at the Earle and Metropolitan Theaters during the 1936-37 motion picture season, according to an announcement made yesterday afternoon by John J. Payette, Warner Bros. general zone manager for the Washington territory. Arrangements have been completed whereby outstanding pictures made by Gaumont-British will be presented at these two downtown theaters.

Among the internationally famous stars who will be seen in these productions are George Arliss, Constance Bennett, Jessie Matthews, Constance Cummings, Sylvia Sidney, Robert Donat, Victor McLaglen and Roland Young.

Sylvia Sidney and Robert Donat will be costarred in "The Hidden Power," a romantic melodrama based on a story by Joseph Conrad. Alfred Hitchcock, who directed the popular "The 39 Steps," will direct this production.

Constance Bennett will be seen in "Everything Is Thunder," with Douglas Montgomery, and in "The Hawk," based on a successful stage production.

Edmund Lowe and Constance Cummings will appear in "Doomed Cargo," and Miss Cummings also will appear in "Strangers on a Honeymoon," a romantic melodrama by Edgar Wallace.

Clive Brook, Helen Vinson and Mary Carlisle will be presented in "His Majesty's Pajamas."

Rafael Sabatini's "The Marriage of Corbal" will persent Nils Asther and Noah Beery in prominent roles.

The "dancing divinity," Jessie Matthews, will star in "Paris Love Song" and another production which as yet has no title. Gordon and Revel, popular song writers, have been engaged to write the music for Miss Matthews' two productions.

Roland Young will star in "King Solomon's Mines," the thrilling story by H. Rider Haggard.

George Arliss will have a modern sort of Jekyll-and-Hyde role in "The Nelson Touch," an original screen play. Mr. Arliss also will appear in another production during the season.

Raoul Walsh will direct Victor McLaglen in Kipling's famous "Soldiers Three," which will be produced on a lavish scale with special scenes in India.

Walkouts

Tommy Manville has been married four times, or is it five? . . . He's walked out on each occasion . . . Al Jolson took so many runouts on the Shuberts that nothing was Jake at the Winter Garden . . . He'd run away to see a horse race . . . Jim Barton would shut down theaters if need be, to see a six-day bike race . . . Willie Moore's walkouts from Dinty Moore's need a separate chapter . . . Buddy de Sylva is quitting pictures because they bore him . . . Will Cobb, Rupert Hughes, the MacNutts and Bill MacGuire walked out on the Writers' Guild and collapsed it . . . Margaret Sullavan took a walkout on Henry Fonda, then repeated with William Wyler, and now is fonder of Fonda . . . Gloria Swanson is a marital walker-outer . . . Ditto Connie Bennett . . . Champion Jimmy Braddock would like to exit gracefully from his Garden contract . . . And Zioncheck . . . No, there's a guy who can qualify for membership.

ANN HARDING.

• • • •

Judge Crater's walkout ranks as one of the great national mysteries . . . Darryl Zanuck took a walkout on Warners, Warners took a walkout on Ascap, Cagney took a walkout on Warners, Grace Moore walked out on Agent Frank Orsatti, Senator Copeland took a walkout on the New Deal . . . Coolidge phrased it differently: "I do not choose to run."

• • • •

Ann Harding was so sure that "Trial of Mary Dugan" would be a flop that she insisted Al Woods tear up her three-year contract and substitute a run-of-the-play contract . . . She figured the play would fold in two weeks, or less . . . It ran two years as a smash hit . . . And she was so burned up at outsmarting herself that eventually she did take a runout powder.

• • • •

• • • •

• • • •

Rube Waddell, brilliant eccentric of the diamond, slated to pitch an important game at the Polo Grounds, walked out of the clubhouse while his mates were dressing and disappeared . . . They found him 30 minutes later in a Washington Heights saloon betting the bartender that he could eat more pretzels than any man in the house.

• • • •

Argentinita, brought here for the "International Revue," refused to rehearse with the rest of the cast . . . In the first show, it was revealed that she was a fat lady who couldn't dance a lick . . . They begged her to take a walkout, but when she refused, they made her open the show cold, that is, do her dance before the band played the overture . . . But she wouldn't walk out of the show until they paid her $20,000.

About The Showshops

THOUGHTS—if that is what they are—on a hot and thundery Tuesday afternoon: There is a delightful element of surprise in being on the correspondence list of Mr. Maynard Owen Williams, European editor of the National Geographic Magazine . . . One never knows where his interesting and breezy letters are coming from—the heart of The Gobi, Tunis, in Algeria, and now from a de luxe cabin aboard the Normandie . . . The Post, it seems, is one of the shipboard luxuries afforded passengers on the floating palace of the French and the copy Mr. Williams received on June 26 was the one in which this column happened to comment on "Private Number," by an odd coincidence the ship's cinema for that day . . . There also was a package of Kleenex for Mr. Williams, in case both wash stands went dry, and one learns with mingled emotions that what he took to be a packet of matches turned out to be a box of lipstick tissue . . . Mr. Williams wonders if this was a compliment . . . It was too much to hope, no doubt, that Mr. Williams would omit touching upon a sensitive topic in his merry epistle to the heathen . . . "Here I am," he says, "trying to analyze the art of Dusanne playing the part of Dorine in Tartuffe and you talk about giving Hepburn the 'Eyre.' That's so horrible that I'm quite capable of repeating it—without credit, of course." . . . My gratitude to a helpful friend for being willing to share the blame!

BELL.

• • • •

Lou Brown, doubling in brass—that is what all press agents double in—between Baltimore and Washington as pinch-hitter for Ray Bell (no relation), vacationing from the publicity desk at Loew's Fox, made his entrance to the tesselated elegance of the drama department to the accompaniment of a clap of thunder that probably curdled all the milk in the District . . . Finds doubling not so hard since "San Francisco" is holding over a second week at the Century Theater in Baltimore, one of the few pictures in recent seasons to have earned that distinction . . . That's the one that is being previewed tomorrow midnight at Loew's Fox and then is booked to follow "Private Number" at the Palace . . . What a pitcher! . . . Bess Schreiner calls up in something that closely resembles a dither to say that the National Sylvan Theater festival program scheduled for last night will be presented tonight . . . Old Jupiter Pluve is raining out too many of their first nights this season . . . Tonight's bill will be the Federal Bureau of Investigation acting group's production of the old French farce, "Pierre Patelin" . . . Interludes of quaint fifteenth century songs and other interpolations will punctuate the performance . . . Weather permitting . . . If not, they haven't said what will happen . . . That was Louis Malone supplying the piano "score" for "Under the Gaslight" out at the Roadside Theater Monday night . . . Nice job of cueing, but not quite the contagious audience appeal of Betty Grey's entr'acte songfests during the two-week run of "Around the World in 80 Days," the season's inaugural bill . . . And I could have lived to be 100 and not omitted mention of Howard Wierum's fine pretending as the hero of "Gaslight" from a review written smack up against an inexorable midnight deadline . . . His heroics hardly have been surpassed in Roadside history . . . And, for no apparent reason, that calls to mind the run of "Show Boat" at RKO-Keith's . . . I'm wondering if that isn't something in the nature of a Washington all-time record, too . . . When Universal's picturization of the Edna Ferber fiction, starring Irene Dunne, comes off this Thursday night—and I am assured that it is coming off this Thursday night—it will have run 43½ days on Fifteenth street . . . That beats "Ecstasy" by a day and a half, if I have my statistics on straight . . . Not a surety any way you look at it . . . And there are those who were sure that Irene Dunne got by only because Fred Astaire "carried" her . . . Heh, heh, heh.

The postman didn't do so badly today . . . Here is a most cordial note from Francis Lederer, 6715 Hollywood boulevard, Hollywood, Calif., who happened to come across our review of "One Rainy Afternoon" and wishes to express "my thanks and appreciation to you for the charming and generous manner in which you have written of my work in that picture" . . . Why not? . . . It was pretty good work . . . Then there is the postcard reminder that it is on Thursday night of this week that Managing Director Pollio, of the Mayflower, is throwing that "old-fashioned crab feast" for the press in the Garden of the Mayflower . . . And right on the heels of the postman comes Bill Merriam on my telephone wire, all hot and bothered to have it known that instead of arriving at the Cocoanut Grove, over on K street, last night, Mary Nolan, stage and screen star, will be there for a week beginning Friday night . . . The former Imogene Wilson will offer a routine of songs and dramatic sketches, so Bill tells me . . . Tomorrow night, under the direction of Mrs. Maud Howell Smith and Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest, a Greek play, written especially with this performance in mind, will be presented in the Garden Theater of the Arts Club . . . At a later date, one hears, this prize-winning effort will be repeated at the National Sylvan Theater on the Monument Grounds.

There will be another of those official A. A. U. swim meets out in the Crystal Pool at Glen Echo Park on Monday and Tuesday, July 13 and 14, with championship events the items of featured interest . . . On July 22, the Washington lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks—just so you won't forget what B. P. O. E. stands for—will hold its annual Orphan's Outing at Glen Echo . . . One day in the year, at least, when the kids have themselves a time . . . The Messrs. Adler, Mann, Kelly and Kern—The Yacht Club Boys, headlining the stage bill at the Earle, to you—were hosts at an informal rout in Suite 505 in the Hotel Washington last night . . . The exchange of smart talk and witty sayings beban at 10 and may be going on yet, for all I know . . . Swell fellows, these Yachters . . . Dan Terrell, who had a finger in the arrangements, found himself so crowded for time that he hit upon the device of publicizing two Warner pictures at once yesterday . . . He spelled it "The Green Pasteurs!"

Virginia Raises State Employes' Salaries Today

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, June 30—Ten per cent pay increases for State employes and 5 per cent increases in appropriations for State departments become effective tomorrow with the restoration of cuts imposed in 1932.

The fiscal year of the Commonwealth ends today.

Restoration of the salary cut will be effective on salary checks dated June 15. Salary checks that will go out tomorrow cover the period June 15-June 30 and so will be of the same size as before.

Appropriations which now are subject to a 5 per cent cut will be payable in full after today. Gov. Peery on June 10 not only ordered pay restored, but appropriations also.

Among the persons who will benefit from the pay restoration will be the convicts in State prisons. Their allowance will be increased from 9 to 10 cents per day.

The Assembly of 1936 budgeted 5 per cent of the pay cut, and authorized the Governor to pay the remaining 5 per cent if departmental economics could be effected.

Economics were effected for the State in turning the fiscal year with a cash balance in excess of 325,000, and with the deficit that hung over from 1934 discharged.

The salary cuts were imposed by Gov. Pollard in 1932, when, under a mandate by the Assembly to keep expenditures within the revenues, he cut the State's budget 30 per cent. In 1932 the Special Assembly decided that the budget cut should be reduced, but the salary reduction continue. The modification of the economy program was responsible for the $2,900,000 deficit with which the State began the fiscal year 1934-36.

This deficit, however, was reduced materially in 1934-35 and wiped out during the fiscal year now coming to an end.

Economies by the various departments went as far toward balancing the budget this year as increases in revenue incident to improved business conditions.

Grand Larceny!

One of this column's most generous and versatile contributors is Philip E. Barney, who conducts a column of his own, a clever one, but, lamentably, devoted to humor, poetry, and similar unscientific subjects, in a daily newspaper. Mr. Barney's contract hands, accompanied as they are by his pungent comments on the bidding and play, are not only technically interesting, but they also offer a good deal of color and excitement. Here is his latest, and his own inimitable analysis as the declarer in the South position.

North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
3 clubs [1]	4 hearts	4 spades	Pass [2]
Pass	Pass [3]

"(1) My wife making a new two-way three bid one week before she ever heard of it or read about it in your column.

(2) Conservative, what? This is a forcing pass, forcing East to conclude that West has a weak hand.

"(3) Couldn't know he could make five hearts or five diamonds.

"West opened the heart queen, East won and returned a heart. I led to the trump ace and learned about distribution from that.

"(Pause for reflection).

"Remembering that Napoleon, Foch, or some other great strategist once made a feint attack with his weakest suit, I made a faint lead of a small diamond, East played low, and I played the nine. West took it with the ten and, after a brief reconnaissance, led the jack of trumps! This is known as an asking lead (asking partner in effect: 'Well, I couldn't lead from my queen up to all those clubs, could I? And I figured declarer would take another diamond finesse up to my ace-queen.') I took the trump trick, finessed clubs and, marveling greatly at my luck, discarded my diamond; trumped a diamond and conceded one trump trick, making contract.

"My wife almost forgave me for an earlier hand in which I let the opponents make a slam that a babe in arms would have defeated.

"By the way, please invent an asking bid to ask left-handed opponent if he holds all five outstanding cards in your trump suit."

The only comment I should like to make is that Mr. Barney let the West player off too easily in his observation in Note 2, under the bidding. That West should have failed to take some action over four spades, in view of his partner's bid for ten tricks, is inconceivable. With two spade tricks and an indeterminate number ranging from one to three in diamonds, not to mention his other two queens, a double of the four spade contract should have been, well to use my correspondents literary technique, tempting. The specious "reasoning" applied by mediocre players to this type of situation, that "they were afraid of a run-out" hardly can hold water in this case, since West could have doubled five clubs with almost equal assurance. I can only imagine what East had to say after the hand was over!

Anything for a Hat These Days!

Even Fred MacMurray, who ought to be used to it by now, seems a little doubtful as to just what it is Carole Lombard is made up for in this semi-Bedouin headgear and cluster of Reynard tails. At any rate, this is the way these two popular players look in one of the scenes from "The Princess Comes Across," the new Paramount release in which they will be seen on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater, come Friday. From all report, this is a gay number in which both appear to fine advantage, supported by a cast that is virtually swell elegant.

Alvin Powell, for 46 years a letter carrier, retired yesterday. Recently he received a letter of congratulation from the Postmaster General, and last Saturday he was feted by his fellow workers.

Powell was appointed a carrier on December 24, 1889, and recently celebrated his sixty-fifth birthday.

Two Alexandria mail carriers will be transferred today to the Arlington County postoffice, according to Postmaster J. Owen Lynch. They are J. M. Simpson, regular carrier for the last four years, and Frank Beall, jr., substitute carrier for the last year, who will be transferred from the Potomac branch office, and will become a regular carrier attached to the Clarendon office.

The mail which heretofore has been handled by the Alexandria postoffice for Aurora Hills and Virginia Highlands will be taken over by the Clarendon office.

It is not believed by Postmaster Lynch that transfer of delivery service to the Clarendon office will affect receipts of the Alexandria office.

Watching Them Make Pictures

Hollywood, June 30.

The new edition of the flicker, "The Big Broadcast," has gone into production and the radio comics are at work. Jack Benny, Burns and Allen, and Bob Burns are on the set.

GRACIE ALLEN.

These comedians want to be funny in the picture and they have their gag writers on the set to write additional gags.

The joke writers try to be funny, and it is strange how only Jack Benny laughs at what his gag man says; only George Burns laughs at what his gag man says, and Bob Burns' gag man always gets a laugh from him.

This particular sequence takes place in a broadcasting station. Director Mitchell Leisen is rehearsing Jack Benny and Burns and Allen. They do it again and again because Grace Allen gets the words match and key mixed in her speech. Then she reads the lines correctly. George Burns shouts: "Gracie blew up. She read it the right way."

• • • •

Director Frank Capra is still busy on his new flicker, "Lost Horizon." Ronald Colman and John Howard run through a scene for Capra. He watches the entire rehearsal through his camera, turning his camera when they move about the set. It isn't often that you see a director watching a rehearsal through the camera.

Sitting on the set, waiting to do a scene, is the interesting Margo. She is excited about acting. She talks it. She says she wants to be an actress. Perhaps this is why she is a better performer than many who believe they are actresses.

• • • •

Robert Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck have completed playing a scene for Director Van Dyke in the flicker, "His Brother's Wife." Van Dyke is shooting fast. That is his method.

Actors working for Director Van Dyke for the first time are puzzled by him and a little scared. When they get to know him they praise him more than the movie critics do.

Van Dyke has a trick in directing. He talks fast, abruptly, shooting his instructions at the player. He says "You come on the set. You walk toward the table. You pick up a cigarette. You start saying your lines. You walk toward the door. And you should be finished with the speech when you open the door. Come on, let's do it."

• • • •

The performer tries to remember these instructions. He works fast, before he forgets. Van Dyke isn't going to get him. But Director Van Dyke does. This is part of his trick and how he gets tempo in his pictures.

• • • •

Alice Faye, Gregory Ratoff, Patsy Kelly and Ted Healy are waiting for Director Lanfield to arrange a set-up for the flicker, "Sing, Baby, Sing." They sit on a long table, a prop, like football players waiting for the signal from the coach to get into the game.

Ted Healy says, "I'm fighting hard to put in a few jokes." With these performers in the flickers, the finished picture should be somewhat of a surprise to the scenario writers.

Much has been altered. In fact, Healy says to Ratoff: "I wish I had the part you had."

Helen Jacobs In Net Play Semifinal

Dorothy Round and Miss Stammers Are Upset at Wimbledon.

By the Associated Press.

Wimbledon, England, June 30.—Helen Jacobs, husky American champion, chopped her way past Anita Lizana, of Chile, today into the semifinals of the All-England Tennis championships for the sixth successive year.

Winning, 6—2, 1—6, 6—4, the California star joined Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, plump and pigeon-toed Polish ace; Mme. Simone Mathieu, of France, and Frau Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, of Germany and Denmark, in advancing to the penultimate round.

Miss Jedrzejowska, who will be Miss Jacobs' opponent in the semifinals, furnished the biggest upset of the tournament thus far by her conquest of Kay Stammers, southpaw English star, 6—2, 6—3.

Dorothy Round Beaten.

England's other hope and 1934 champion, Dorothy Round, was a stubborn victim of the formidable Frau Sperling, 6—3, 8—6, while Mme. Mathieu vanquished Frau Marie-Louise Horn, of Germany at 7—5, 6—3.

While the women were catching up with them, the men's semi-finalists—Fred Perry, defending champion, Don Budge of Oakland, Calif., H. W. (Bunny) Austin and Gottfried von Cramm—viewed the proceedings from the sidelines. They will get into action tomorrow, Perry vs. Budge and Austin vs. Von Cramm, with Perry the bookmakers' 2-to-1 favorite and Von Cramm and Austin held at even money.

Miss Jacobs chopped down Miss Lizana more than literally. It was only her indomitable heart and the customary college try that finally pulled her through after the hard-hitting South American star rolled up a seemingly insurmountable 4—2 30-love lead in the third set.

She escaped the fury of the Chilean's drives in the first set by soft-balling her with her famous chop-stroke. However, in the second set Miss Lizana harnessed her speed in perfect control and virtually blasted the American off the court, limiting Miss Jacobs to seven points in the last four games.

Miss Jacobs fell back on the chop stroke in the final set to halt Miss Lizana's drive to apparent victory. They exchanged about 20 shots for the third point in the seventh game before Miss Lizana drove out to lose it. Miss Jacobs finally saved the game and the Chilean obviously was disheartened. Thereafter she put up only a feeble defense.

Not only were England's two greatest women players eliminated, but Jack Crawford and Adrian Quist, of Australia, were shorn of their doubles title by the veteran Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon, of France, 3—6, 7—5, 2—6, 9—7, 6—2.

The American doubles titleholders, Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, divided the first four sets with Von Cramm and Heiner Henkel when darkness halted play. The Germans won the first set, 6—4, and the fourth, 6—3. The American won the second, 10—8, and the third, 6—4.

GRAYS WANT OPPONENT.

The Mount Rainier Grays have scheduled the Chevy Chase Grays for the nightcap game of a doubleheader for Sunday but still want an opponent for the opener at 1 p. m. Call Greenwood 2707, Manager Bob Newell.

Giants Bow, 7-6, To Bees; Drop To Fifth

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 30.—The New York Giants dropped to fifth place, their lowest standing of the year, as they lost a 7-to-5 decision to the Boston Bees today for their third successive setback. Defeat of the Giants lifted the idle Cincinnati Reds into the first division, one point above New York.

The Giants got away to a 4-run lead in the second, but the Bees came from behind to tie the count in the eighth with 2 runs and then put over the deciding tally in the ninth. Singles by Tony Cuccinello and Mickey Haslin with Hal Lee's sacrifice sandwiched in between produced the last run. Haslin's blow was his fourth hit of the game.

Nats Purchase Bill Dietrich On Waiver

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Philadelphia, June 30.—Bill Dietrich, bespectacled right-hander of Athletics' pitching staff, tonight was claimed by the Washington club at the waiver price of $7,500.

Manager Bucky Harris, of the Nats, announced the deal as the Washington team arrived here to await tomorrow's double-header with the Philadelphia club. Final acceptance of the deal was held in abeyance, however, until tomorrow as a concession to the Washington pilot who will seek to ascertain the pitcher's physical condition then.

Manager Connie Mack, of the Athletics, willingly accepted the $7,500 offer on the condition that Bucky Harris first would satisfy himself that Dietrich was sound of limb.

Dietrich, a 25-year-old veteran of the A's pitching staff, has a record this season of four victories against six defeats.

Dietrich, whose major league career started with the A's in 1930, last year won seven and lost 13 games with a last place ball club. He started in 43 contests, and when he strolls plateward, bat in hand, he carries lightly a stick average of .083. Last year he gave up an average of 5.40 earned runs per game.

Harris plans to utilize Dietrich chiefly in relief roles. The Nats had been-operating with only seven pitchers, and the Washington manager visualizes the fast-balling Dietrich as a helpful relief performer. His forte is speed combined with a sinker ball.

The Nats' manager long has admired Dietrich for his battling qualities on the mound, too, and likes him particularly for his effectiveness against the Yankees.

Wilson Picks Cards to Win If Dean Doesn't Hurl Too Often

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 30.—The Cardinals will win the National League pennant if Frankie Frisch stops using Dizzy Dean whenever any of his other pitchers get into trouble, Jimmy Wilson, manager of the Phillies, predicted today.

"What that pitching staff needs is confidence. And it won't get it with Dean going in there every other day as soon as a pitcher lets a run score," Wilson said.

Nevertheless, the Philadelphia manager likes the Cards over the Cubs, who are now favored by most experts because Wilson let them have Outfielder Ethan Allen and Pitcher Curt Davis in a recent trade.

Wilson bases his opinion on the spirit of the Cards and "their superiority in the middle of the infield." With Bill Jurges out of the Chicago infield, Wilson thinks St. Louis is stronger at second and short.

He Is Puzzled.

"How this kid Stu Martin was overlooked I'll never understand," Wilson said. "He's one of the best in the game right now. I'm not saying he's as good as Billy Herman, but I'd rather have Martin and Durocher down there than Herman and English."

Wilson also had something to say about night baseball and "Pepper" Martin. "I don't see how the fans figure Martin isn't good enough to play on the National League all-star team. I'd like to be quoted as saying I think Pepper is the best ball player in the league today."

Commenting on the capacity crowd of over 33,000 at the Reds-Cubs game last night, Wilson said "next year I hope they'll all be playing seven-ball games at night. D'you know what a crowd like that means? It means that you can go out the next day and put $25,000 on the line for a ball player.

"If the National League wants to sit back and give Cincinnati that advantage seven times a year, they'll soon have to take the consequences when the Reds buy 'em in."

Yanks Thump Red Sox in 2 Contests

54,000 See New Yorkers Win, 10-5, 6-3; Boost Lead to 9½ Games.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 30.—Riding to victory behind the power of their bats, the New York Yankees increased their lead in the American League to nine and one-half games today as they whipped the second-place Boston Red Sox twice, 10 to 5 and 6 to 3, before a crowd of 54,046.

Fourteen hits, two of them home runs and three more of the extra base variety, rang off the Yankees bats in the first game as they clubbed Lefty Grove for five innings and then continued their heavy slugging at the expense of Jack Russell, Fred Ostermueller and Jack Wilson.

Lou Gehrig got one of the homers and then added another in the second to run his total for the season to 20 as the McCarthymen made the most of their eight blows off Johnny Marcum. Myril Hoag hit the other circuit drive in the opening encounter.

Although hit hard, Grove was not charged with the defeat as the Red Sox knotted the count with Russell on the mound.

Cards Defeat Pirates Twice; Take Lead

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, June 30.—Pepper Martin's single in the ninth with a mate one second gave St. Louis a 4-3 win in the nightcap of a dual bill with the Pirates today. The Cards had regained the National League lead in the opening game by trimming the Bucs, 2-1.

About 20,000 saw Mace Brown and the veteran Jesse Haines hook up in a slab duel in the initial game. Brown allowed only three hits and Haines was touched for eight.

Officials to Test 'Camera Eye' With Dummy Horses

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., June 30.—Using dummy horse heads mounted on trucks, new and extremely exacting tests will be made tomorrow at Pimlico on the photo-finish device used last spring at that course and at Havre de Grace and more recently at Suffolk Downs, Boston.

At the latter course last week, officials were ordered by the Massachusetts State Racing Commission to discontinue use of the machine. The charge was made that the "camera eye" favors the outside horse.

Jervis Spencer, jr., chairman of the Maryland Racing Commission, and probably other members of the commission, besides officials of the Maryland Jockey Club and others will be on hand for the tests here.

Nats Seek to Gain In 4 Tilts With As

Now only a game and a half behind second place, the Nats visualize progress to be made during the three days here when they meet the Mackmen in four games. In eight engagements between the two teams this season, Washington has won seven.

Harris will send the clubb's two leading pitchers against the Mackmen tomorrow. Jimmy DeShong will hurl one of the games and Buck Newsom will be sent back to the mound despite the fact he worked eight innings at Chicago on Sunday.

Newsom complains that long layoffs affect his control and points to the eight walks he issued at Chicago. He asked for tomorrow's assignment.

Canzoneri Bid $10,000 for D. C. Bout

As confident as a political campaign manager six months before election that a bout involving Tony Canzoneri and his world lightweight championship will lure record-breaking throngs to Griffith Stadium, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn last night took the initial step toward arranging same.

The initial step assumed the form of a 33-word telegram to Tony, offering him a flat guarantee of $10,000, the privilege of exercising an option for 37½ per cent of the gate receipts, and three railroad tickets for 15 rounds of fighting on August 17. The wire was dispatched to Sammy Goldman, the champion's manager.

Howard Scott, the transplanted Texas who was skyrocketed to favor in local cauliflower circles by virtue of his recent appearances, has been selected as the home-town boy to make good. He is willing to fight for little more than car fare to the ball park as long as the title is at stake. Mons. Ahearn is equally confident that Scott will take over the champion's official duties if the bout materializes.

The effect of Ahearn's offer will not be known until this afternoon. Canzoneri is scheduled to abdicate his lightweight throne today at a meeting of the New York State Boxing Commission, provided he is assured of a shot at Barney Ross' welterweight title. If Ross accepts the challenge, negotiations for a title fight here will be abandoned. If he declines, it's Tony's move and he may elect to move into Mr. Griffith's playground.

Season, Drills, Age Limit Are Cut

New Rules to Bar Spring Grid Practice; Limit Participation.

By John R. Vosburgh.

A revolutionary program calling for drastic curtailment of inter-high athletics will go into effect, September 1, it was learned yesterday. The new regulations have been quietly passed by the Board of Education.

The sensational policies include reducing the age limit of inter-high athletes from 21 to 19 years, restricting by as much as 20 to 30 games a year the number of contests a school may play, complete prohibition of spring football training and prevention of an athlete's participating in more than one sport a season, such as baseball and track.

Another radical departure calls for written consent of every inter-high athlete from his parents for participation in a sport and for a certificate from a physician showing his physical fitness.

Four Practices Per Week.

The program as passed by the board urges coaches to hold no more than four practice sessions a week in football, basket ball, baseball and track at two hours a session for baseball, an hour and a half in football and basket ball and an hour in track. There will be no penalty for violation of this recommendation, officials said, but if injury or harm to a boy can be traced to such violation, the coach must answer for it.

The regulations place "control and executive authority in all matters pertaining to inter-high athletics" in one man, Birch E. Bayh, capable new head of the Department of Health and Physical Education. Bayh, who was brought in from Terre Haute, Ind., by the School Board to become "czar" of inter-high sports following the Tech-Western football "riot" of 1934, with E. B. Henderson, colored athletic head, prepared and submitted the report.

The Board of Principals now holds the authority to be given Bayh in September. Although the board will not have the power to initiate policies, it will be empowered to ratify such policies as Bayh initiates. Bayh will be responsible only to the first assistant superintendent of schools, the superintendent of schools and the Board of Education so far as his policies are concerned.

Major Changes.

Major changes follow:

1. Abolition of the present Board of Faculty Advisors in favor of a High School Athletic Council headed by Bayh and including a faculty athletic manager and a physical education teacher from each school, or, preferably, an assistant principal.

2. Removal of the power of the Board of Principals to govern inter-high competition, formulate rules governing eligibility, arrange schedules, manage inter-high games and control finances, and placing of these powers in the council.

3. Effective in September 1937, the age limit for high school athletes shall be cut from 21 to 20 years of age and on September 1, 1938, the age limit shall become 19.

4. Football teams shall play no

Bad Actor at Post Wins Handily

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 30.—Goantell, owned by C. E. George, of Washington, D. C., huffed and puffed and threatened to knock the starting gate down, but when the all-important running began she angled away in front like a scared rabbit and there was no catching her.

To the tune of a $13.80 mutuel, she bounded along under Jockey G. Terhune to make every post a winning one and have a length advantage over Flosilda. Three lengths away came Fredalva to take third money. Only two others, Chambersburger and Martinious accepted the issue.

Flosilda was played heavily in the mutuel machines. Her odds shrunk throughout the wagering and the 1 to 2 figure was displayed on the odds board at one stage. She ran as if she did not fancy the track. A heavy shower just before the program began, slowed the course considerably and the feature, the Bernie Harter Purse, was run in the mediocre time of 1:23 4-5.

3,500 Attend.

Despite the threatening weather, a crowd of 3,500 was on hand and betting proceeded at a brisk clip. The daily-double celebrators were those who wagered on the combination of Mont Daisy, a $27.60 winner in the second race, and Vennie H. the $18.80 winner of the third race. The team paid a $339.20 mutuel.

The track officials must have anticipated a rainy day, for they named the fourth race, the secondary feature, the Falling Waters Purse. Radial, one of the most improved horses on the track, proved the winner and brought Jockey Terhune his second victory of the day. Paying a $17.20 mutuel. Radial led Silver Arch to the wire by a length with Noajoyce third.

Welsh Wins on Default, Enters Quarterfinals in Net Play

Rain Disrupts Matches at Columbia

Pollard Trailing, 4 to 1, Unable to Finish; Meets McCue.

All survivors in the District tennis championships were victims of Old Jupe Pluvius yesterday at Columbia Country Club but he failed to keep Champion Barney Welsh from moving up to the quarter-finals.

The racket-swinger from Rockville had a 4-1 lead on Paul Pollard, of Lynchburg, Va., in the first set when the storm broke. Pollard was forced to default the match because of inability to remain longer in Washington.

Welsh thus gained the round of 16 and the chance to play Lieut. James R. McCue, Navy No. 1 man, and seeded fourth among the out-of-towners. Pollard was seeded No. 5 among the visitors.

The champion had things all his own way against the Virginian. When the storm became imminent, Barney began serving as if it were a case of life and death. His service whiz-banged over so fast Pollard could do little else than watch it. On the last point, after having served about half a dozen aces, Barney netted the first ball and then aced his opponent on the second.

3 Good Matches Today.

All other matches were moved up one day. Thus at least three outstanding singles struggles are on the bill this afternoon. The fourth-round battle between Frank Goeltz, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and Ralph McElvenny stands out conspicuously. Goeltz is seeded No. 3 among out-of-towners.

Hugh Lynch, seeded No. 8 in the Washington list, is favored to gain the semifinals when he meets Frank Shore, the inconsistent collegian from North Carolina, seeded No. 6, in the first quarter-final fracas of the tournament. Dooley Mitchell, former champion and seeded No. 2, meets Jean Dudd, the unseeded phenomenon who upset Alex Kelles, of Baltimore.

Price Colvin, of Baltimore, No. 2 seeded out-of-towner, faces Hy Ritzenberger at 3 p. m. in a third-round match, and at 5 p. m. the winner must play Freddie West, the Lynchburg, Va., youngster who upset Tom Mangan in the second round.

At this writing, it appears as though the four semifinalists will be Welsh, Goeltz and Lynch. Goeltz, with McElvenny and Mitchell in his path, is the biggest risk to gain the round of four.

Junior Nines to Play In Elimination Tourney

Four teams in quest of the American Legion junior baseball championship of the country will begin play a week from tomorrow in an elimination tournament to decide the club which will represent the District in the national event. Fort Stevens, Nash, Costello and the Washington police posts will enter teams.

The winner will engage in another elimination to decide the winner of the sectional title for Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia and the District. The Sons of the American Legion will be the guests of Clark Griffith's Nationals Friday. The Sons will present Buddy Lewis, Washington's third baseman, with a trophy. Lewis is a product of the Gastonia (N. C.) Legion team.

Feminine Golf Star Here

Best Woman Golfer in World Is the Goal of Babe Didrikson

By Dave Herman.

Babe Didrikson yesterday expressed a desire to be the best woman golfer in the world.

At Congressional Country Club she began the first of a series of practice rounds for Sunday's important exhibition match, evincing power from tee to green, despite a torrential downpour that forced the 22-year-old Texas gal to cease firing for more than an hour.

The former Olympic star, who has been golfing only two years, said that she improved her game by six strokes since last year. Babe recalled the first time she played she scored a 95, but today isn't satisfied unless she scores in the middle 70's.

An extensive tour has been arranged for Miss Didrikson. Following a coast-to-coast jaunt, in which she will exhibit in all of the important cities, Miss Didrikson will embark for Australia where an interesting series of matches has been arranged for her, she said yesterday.

As far as teaching the game, Miss Didrikson hasn't any idea of doing that. She thinks that man knows too much for woman, and that the feminine swinger never will get to a point where she can compete with him.

"I hit a ball a long ways," Miss Didrikson said, "but it isn't long enough to compete with the Sarazens, the Littles, the Thomsons."

She added: "My ambition is to be a first-class golfer from tee to green, and I'm learning every day."

The tall Texas lassie admitted that she had received a bonus of close to $3,000 rfom Goldsmith for her services.

During her exhibition tour with Gene Sarazen last year she made something like $7,000. She has a manager—Capt. Henry Lawson, of Boston.

Miss Didrikson said she learned plenty of golf watching Sarazen play. "He impressed me with the fact that I should study my shots while am approaching the ball, thereby enabling me to swing at the ball as soon as I reach it," she said. "You know Gene loses little time when he prepares to make a shot."

Formerly a terrific slugger, Miss Didrikson has cut down on the arc and length of her swing. She hits the ball easier and uses more wrists and body.

STONE PEEWEES WIN.

The Johnnie Stone Peewees took an 18-7 decision from the Shamrocks yesterday. The winning battery was composed of Curls and Davis, Gossman.

Catoctin Golfers Win.

Frederick, Md., June 30.—The Catoctin Country Club golf team defeated the Rodgers Forge Country Club team of Baltimore here yesterday afternoon, 21 to 15. The victory was the second this year for the local golfers. A return match will be played in Baltimore on August 30.

Tagging All the Bases.

Philadelphia, June 30.

Note to Bucky Harris: Jesse Hill, who is always benched by Manager Bucky Harris when a right-hander is opposing the Nats, has batted .270 this season against left-handed pitching . . . and .370 against right-handed pitching . . . From Ben Chapman, Harris has received a list of American League pitchers against whom a base-runner can attempt to steal with a better than fair chance of getting away with it . . . no man in the league has made a deeper study of pitchers' windups than the fleet-footed Chapman . . . and Harris is still willing to wager that the former Yankee will lead the league in stolen bases before the year is ended . . . despite the fact that he had only one stolen base to his credit when he came to the Nats at the end of the first third of the season.

POVICH.

Jake Powell, benched by the Yankees the other day, is learning that a fellow can't stay in the Yankees' line-up unless he hits regularly . . . no manager in the league gets as panicky as Joe McCarthy when one of his players encounters a hitless streak . . . Joe DiMaggio would have cost the Yankees $100,000 had he not broken his leg early in 1935 . . . when all other clubs cooled toward the Italian after that, the Yankees picked him up for $25,000.

Italo Chelini, the White Sox's new pitching sensation, who beat the Nats, 4 to 1, in his first big league start the other day, is a product of San Francisco's famed Telegraph Hill district . . . which gave Harry Heilmann, Dutch Ruether, Tony Lazzeri, Frankie Crosetti and Joe Cronin to the big leagues . . . Larry Rosenthal, the Sox' brilliant rookie outfielder from St. Paul, is not Jewish despite the Hebraic handle . . . but Polish-Catholic . . . he is the best-looking rookie to come up with the Sox in a decade.

Cleveland's "stick-to-the-finish club" of fans, pledged to the support of the Indians through thick and thin, has been renamed by wisecrackers as the "stuck-to-the-finish club" . . . Bozie Berger, the Washington boy with the Indians, has not appeared in the Cleveland regular line-up since the day he replaced Roy Hughes at second base in the late innings and made two errors that lost a game to the Yankees . . . In Weatherly, the outfielder they picked up from New Orleans last week, the Indians have a new candidate for the league's base-stealing honors.

Schoolboy Rowe has voluntarily left the mound in the early innings four times this season when he felt the pain of a mysterious shoulder injury . . . the last time he was forced out, against Washington ten days ago, he strode back to the clubhouse in a rage and said he hoped his arm would rot off . . . in his next start, he pitched a two-hit shutout . . . Goose Goslin, the big question mark in the Tigers' outfield at the start of the season, is the only Tiger outfielder who has been able to hold a job regularly.

Joe Cronin has confided to friends around the league that he was badly stung on the Heinie Manush deal with Washington . . . and Manush has confided to friends that this will be his last season in baseball . . . Cronin's omission from the American League All-Star team this year interrupts his record of being named to the team in every year since the game's inception.

The Athletics, stripped of their stars, are actually making more money at the gate than they did last season . . . Connie Mack can sell Centerfielder Wally Moses for $75,000 to three American League clubs any time he has a mind to . . . Bob Johnson, who folded sadly as a hitter in midseason last year, now is just beginning to justify the belief that he is a great batter . . . but the A's main punch is provided by George Pucinelli, the former Oriole who hit 69 home runs in the International League last year . . . but take the bat out of Pucinelli's hands and he couldn't hold a job with the Ragamuffin A. C.

Beau Bell, the Brown's slugging outfielder, who is subbing for the injured Jim Bottomley at first base, is a tangle-foot around the bag . . . he has difficulty in finding the base with his feet and on one occasion against Washington tagged out four consecutive runners on the base line with his glove, just to make sure of the putout . . . Rogers Hornsby still reserves opinion on Joe DiMaggio's greatness as a hitter until he sees him bat against some other ball club . . . Hornsby suggests that a slugging display against his own pitchers is indicative only of the fact that the Brown's pitchers are still a poor excuse for the genuine article.

Hagen Loses in First Round of Court Battle

Tallahassee, Fla., June 30 (AP).—Walter Hagen, the golfer, lost the first round today in a court fight against his wife's effort to make him pay her $250 a month maintenance.

The Supreme Court overruled his application for an order preventing Circuit Judge John I. Viney, of St. Petersburg, from hearing the case filed by Mrs. Edna C. Hagen.

Heurichs Will Meet Coffey Co. Nine Today

The rivalry between the Heurich Brewers and Coffey Sales Co., leading teams of the Industrial League of The Post Sandlot Association, crops out again today after a brief interval of cooling off, following the Heurich's winning of a two-out-of-three-game play-off series for the first half title.

The clubs will meet on the South Ellipse at 5:15 p. m. The Coffeys are the only club to stop the Brewers in the league this season. Shout Taylor, former St. Mary's Celtic mound ace, will pitch for the Beermen.

Crosley Takes Full Control Of Reds

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, June 30.—Powel Crosley, jr., president of the Cincinnati baseball club, exercised a two-year option today to assume the controlling interest.

He purchased preferred stock in the ball club nearly three years ago and invested large sums in the purchase of players and equipment.

The Reds finished the 1935 season in sixth place, the highest final rating they had held in years. Tonight they stood in fourth place, the highest this late in the season for nearly a decade.

Saying he had found the "game quite interesting and fascinating" since becoming interested financially in the Reds, Crosley said he desired to "become permanently allied with the future of baseball in Cincinnati."

The Reds already this year have drawn 12,000 more customers to their three night games than they drew last year for the first three of the seven games they played under searchlights. The 33,468 paid customers at Monday night's game with the Chicago Cubs was the largest to see the Reds play at home since 1929.

The club showed a profit of $50,000 last year, most of which was turned back by Crosley for the improvement of the ball park.

Ring Comeback Planned by Godfrey

'Big Gawge' to Challenge Winner of Haynes-Williams Bout.

Add to the list of heavyweights who are attempting comebacks in the squared circle the name of George Godfrey, the 370-pound Leiperville (Pa.) Larruper, who claims the European championship.

In town to challenge the winner of tonight's fight at Griffith Stadium between Leroy Haynes, the Philadelphia Negro sensation, and Tom Williams, Godfrey declared he was ready to fight Braddock, Schmeling and Louis.

"I'm only 34, and fit as a fiddle," the Negro Goliath stated as he rolled up his sleeves and displayed his stone-like, bulging muscles.

He added: "I beat Pierre Charles in Belgium and many other tough heavyweights in my tour of Europe. As long as Baer and Sharkey are trying to come back, I guess I can, too."

Fighting 17 Years.

Godfrey, who has been in the fight game 17 years, and who wrestles when he can't box, said he saw Schmeling dump Louis in Yankee Stadium. He said the punch which ruined Louis was a smashing right-hand blow in the second round.

"Joe Louis isn't through," Godfrey declared. "He's only 22, and I think he'll be heavyweight champion before he's 25."

Godfrey stated he did not think Schmeling and Braddock would fight in the fall. He looks for a match between Baer and either Schmeling or Braddock.

Haynes, who is being pointed for a bout with Joe Louis, is intent on scoring a knockout tonight to atone for his recent downfall at Al Ettore's fists. His opponent, a big, rough and tough individual, has other ideas concerning the outcome, however, and a sizzling good bout is expected. The card is being promoted by the Allied Democratic Clubs of the District.

Stock Market Outlook Good For Next Half

April Break Only Halt to Long-Continued Rise in Prices.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 30.—Financial markets bowed out of the first 1936 semester with satisfaction and high hopes for an even better performance in the second.

During the six months period just ended speculative and investment forces received support from continued easy money conditions, large amounts of idle funds seeking employment, and substantial improvement in virtually all lines of business and industry. Disastrous floods failed to halt recovery and the start of the Presidential campaign created no appreciable market stir.

On the other side of the picture was the cloudy foreign situation, with monetary, social and war dangers threatening from time to time. Passage of the new tax bill, imposing penalties on undistributed company profits, injected a question mark into corporate affairs, but brought hopes of larger disbursements to shareholders.

At Peak in April.

Stocks, after a steady and almost uninterrupted advance since the early part of 1935, experienced their first break in April. It was the longest and one of the most extensive rises on record.

The Associated Press average of 60 shares reached its peak for the year at $64.80 on April 13. At the end of June the index was not a great distance under this figure, although the market was highly erratic during the last two weeks.

The status of the money market, with a direct bearing on stocks and bonds, was shown by the fact no listed United States Government obligation was selling at a yield of as much as 2¾ per cent.

From last October 30 until May, call money brought only three-fourths of 1 per cent. On the latter date the New York banks boosted the rate to 1 per cent, not because of any exceptional demand for funds, but on account of the contention that servicing such loans was unprofitable at the lower figure.

Big Utility Opens Test of Holding Act

New York, June 30 (AP).—The Electric Bond & Share Co. and 21 other defendants and the U. S. Government squared away today for a finish fight on the constitutionality of the Public Utility Holding Co. Act of 1935 with the filing in Federal Court of the factual background of the test case.

Stipulations covering about 600 pages and setting forth the facts upon which both sides have agreed and outlining diverging views on points having a vital bearing on the constitutionality of the act were submitted to Judge Julian W. Mack in Federal Court for the Second District of New York.

Milk Gives Farmer Most Cash Income

An increase of more than 50 per cent in dairy farmers' income between the first four months of 1933 and 1936 was cited today by Thomas H. McInnerney, president of National Dairy Products Corporation, as reason for the rise in farm purchasing power. He pointed out that the 2 million and a half farmers who produce milk commercially as well as three million more who milk small herds shared this larger income.

Tracing the economic importance of the dairy industry, Mr. McInnerney emphasized that milk was a source of income to one out of every 15 families in the country and said: "The dairy industry is nationwide in scope. Some part of the 47 billion quarts of milk produced annually comes from each State. In fact, the cow is the largest source of farm income in one third of the States of the nation. Cash farm income from milk is larger than that from cotton or beef, double what the farmer receives from hogs; brings three times as much as wheat; four times as much as tobacco and five times as much as corn. Milk tops all other farm commodities in providing agricultural cash."

Grain Corp. Loss $1,000,000 for Year

Chicago, June 30 (AP).—Audit of the Farmers National Grain Corporation books for the year ended today was expected by C. E. Huff, president of the Government-sponsored co-operative, to show a loss of more than $1,000,00 for the period.

Huff said that the losses are now indicated as being somewhat over the unimpaired capital and surplus of $1,098,692, which the corporation reported on June 30, 1935. Drought and relatively large grain imports, resulting in erratic movement on grain to market, he said, occasioned operating losses during the last three years.

Sports Outlay Billion a Year; Golf Is Leader

New York, June 30.—The American people spend close upon $1,000,000,000 a year on sports, the Index of the New York Trust Co. says today in an article on sports as an industry. It is estimated that the annual cost of all sporting and athletic goods aggregates $500,000,000 and such expenditures of sport enthusiasts as country club dues and fees some $200,000,000, while the sum of the estimated 256,000,000 paid admissions for all sporting events is at least $125,000,000.

Although fishing, billiards and bowling, ping pong and trap-shooting, each with more than 5,000,000 followers, are said to be the most popular sports, the Index singles out golf as the most expensive of those with a large mass following. It estimates that the annual outlay of golfers in equipment, club dues and caddy fees amounts to about 15 per cent of the total national sport bill. Football is said to follow golf from the expense angle, with tennis, bowling, fishing and hunting, bicycling, due to the large number of devotees, also representing heavy annual outlays.

"Figures mentioned herein are necessarily inconclusive; the general totals are rough approximations," the Index concludes. "Nevertheless, they indicate clearly that the American people every year spend a vast sum on sports. While the more spectacular examples of such expenditures are the spectator events—college footbal, the world series, a championship prize fight, a horse race—far greater amounts are involved in the annual expenditures of the average participant. If he is a golfer, the individual bill may be a comparatively large one; if he plays on a local soft ball team, it may be almost nothing. Taken altogether, however, the millions who now actively participate in sport spend hundreds of millions to enjoy athletic recreation and meeting their wants has led to the development of a large scale sports industry."

Packard 6 Months' Net Equals All Last Year

Detroit, June 30.—In the first six months of 1936 net earnings of Packard Motor Car Co. will be approximately the same as for the entire year of 1935 which were $3,315,622, Alvan Macauley today told stockholders in a letter accompanying payment of the company's dividend due July 1.

This indicates per share earnings for the six months of about 22 cents a share. During the same period of 1936 Packard's sales totaled about 34,000 cars, an increase of 16,700 cars, or 97 per cent, over the first six months of 1935, Mr. Macauley says.

B. & O. Carloadings.

Baltimore, June 30.—Carloadings on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for the week ended June 27, totaled 47,981, an increase of 7,788 cars over the total for the same week of last year.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent

Stocks Close Irregular in Moderate Trading; Chrysler at New High; Bonds Steady.

New York, June 30.—Stocks closed with mixed price changes in a turnover of around 800,000 shares, about the same volume as that of yesterday. Bonds were quiet and steady. Government issues were not much upset over realization that the fiscal yea ris closing with a direct public debt at the whoopla total of 34 billions, to which must be added another steeple of six billions of guaranteed debt. Wheat and corn were down on reports of rain in the West. September wheat closed 1¼ of a cent lower at 93¾ cents a bushel. Cotton was little changed.

Stocks again pulled two ways. Bullish demonstrations in Chrysler, Greyhound and one or two other stocks were impressive, but they failed to offset the hesitation among the steels, rails, utilities and the general run of the market. Chrysler was rushed up to a new high record price in the period since 1929. General Motors was firm, but Auburn broke badly. Steels were narrow. U. S. Steel lost a fraction.

In the railroad section Santa Fe gained more than a point on reassurances over dividends, following the break late yesterday. Great Northern and Central were higher. Colorado & Southern issues sagged 1 to 2 points. Telephone continued to recover. Good earnings helped Commercial Credit. Pressure was lifted from Underwood. Case was soft.

The Outlook.

With six months of business improvement to its advantage, the market is looking forward with mixed feelings toward the remaining half of the year. On balance the chances seem to favor further recovery. Transportation records show a greatly increased movement of goods throughout the country. Drought reports are disturbing, but the crops at any rate promise to equal those of a year ago, and prices are better, especially for cotton. Automotive production is far above last year and the steel industry is running at more than double its rate of last summer. The building industry still is lagging, but new construction can't be indefinitely postponed. Money is plentiful and cheap, and foreign trade at least has ceased to decline.

According to the rules business ought to move forward steadily and the stock market ought to anticipate the advance. That the position is changing little may be partly because of disturbances abroad, political and economic, but mostly it reflects the lack of stability in our economic future. No one can be sure of just what the New Dealers will do. All that is known for sure is what they would like to do, and that is enough to give anxiety, what with their equanimity over huge deficits their expressed desire to break up property holdings, their costly social schemes and their animosity toward the capitalistic system, to say nothing of their sketchy monetary ideas.

Dividends.

Only guesses can be made on methods that will be used by corporation management to meet the new tax measure. The assumption that dividends will be increased, if present rates fall far short of total earnings, may be all right as a general guide, but it won't fit all cases. Not only will some companies find it advantageous to be less skimping of expenditures, but many have bond refunding plans that now will be dropped. United States Rubber is a case in point. Refunding and financing for removal of preferred dividened accumulations, elmination of profit and loss deficits, and the like, often have been undertaken with the view of removing barriers from resumption of dividends on common stock. Sometimes refunding for short term at least expensive, and some companies likely will decide to wait for a change in the tax law before doing anything that automatically will add to net earnings without actually improving the business.

Harvest.

The dividend harvest was more abundant in June than in any month for a long time. Dividends were increased on 52 stock issues, more than have taken place in any month since December, 1934. Initial dividend payments were made on 50 stocks, the largest number since March, 1930. Dividend reductions and suspensions, on the other hand, were few. If second quarter earnings turn out to have been as good as believed, and if the third quarter brings no jolt to business confidence, the next quarter's dividend declaration likely will lift considerably the general level of payments. Action on corporation dividends won't reflect the new tax law for a long time—some hope never, for they count on repeal.

Stocks and Stories.

Chrysler stockholders found in their dividend check envelopes today a statement of the company on the progress made in allied lines, notably air conditioning equipment. Wall Street hears that Walter Chrysler is ambitious to make of Chrysler a great manufacturing concern, self-financing, which will be worthy in every way to face General Motors . . . Gossip from Detroit suggests that Electric Auto-Lite has taken an executive interest in Airway Electric, now said to be making money. . . . Bullish dope is being distributed on Motor Products. . . . Some brokers are trying to talk up American Hawaiian Steamship. . . . Speery is said to have got round a few large blocks of stock. . . . Earnings of American Hide & Leather for the fiscal year ended June 30 are estimated at $4 a share. . . . Greyhound is still a favorite of the speculators, because it isn't just another of those home-loving issues. It is fidgety.

Bank Reserves.

Suggestions from commercial bankers for reduction in excess reserves by measures other than an increase in reserve requirements seem to have had the merit of provoking new and more pointed debate. Any proposal which would involve borrowing by the Treasury at interest to buy and sterilize gold no doubt would be classed as a political impossibility at present and doubtless the political obstacles were fully recognized by those who brought forward such ideas. The cleavage of banking opinion as to the method by which reserves shall be reduced becomes more pronounced. The commercial banks oppose an increase in reserve requirements which, as they see it, would cause fears of continuous up and down manipulation of reserves and, through generating uncertainity, make banks, especially the smaller ones, more niggardly with credit.

Wheat Influx Thrice Volume Of a Year Ago

Heavy Receipts and Rains in Canada Unite to Depress Price.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 30.—With domestic receipts of wheat at leading terminal markets nearly three times greater than a year ago, wheat prices today developed a notable downward trend.

Enlarged rural offerings of wheat to arrive in Chicago acted in particular as a weight on values. Canadian advices of beneficial rains were also a bearish influence.

Wheat closed unstable at virtually the day's bottom figures, 1 cent to 1¾ cents a bushel lower than yesterday's finish; July, 92½@92¾; September, 93¾@93¾; December, 95¼@95⅝; corn unchanged to 1⅜ down; July, 66@66⅝; September, 65¾@65⅞; December, 62@62½; oats, ¼ to 1⅛ off; September, 30⅝@30¾, and rye at 1 cent to 1½ cents drop, September, 63½. In provisions, the outcome was unchanged to 37 cents decline.

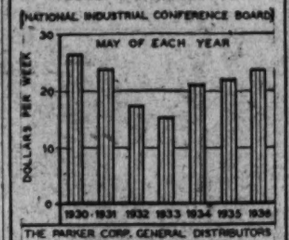
Higher Factory Pay Buys Better Living



Boston, Mass., June 30.—The weekly income of the factory worker is steadily rising. Nearly all the gain goes into increased purchasing power and better living. The cost of living has increased only 2 per cent the past year, while the weekly factory wage has gone up 9 per cent, to about $23.80.

5th District Boom In Building Seen

Richmond, Va., June 30 (AP).—The Fifth District Federal Reserve Bank, in its monthly review of conditions in Virginia and four other States of the district, tonight reported an unfavorable agricultural outlook; steady improvement in employment and a building boom, especially in the construction of residences.

The outlook for agriculture in the district "is decidedly less favorable than was the case a year ago" and "is doubtful to say the least," the bank stated.

The outlook on employment showed a brighter picture, with all the bank's "available indicators" pointing to "a steady improvement" in the number of men at work since early spring.

"Construction work undertaken with private funds is in much larger volume than a year ago, and building trades men are better employed than at any other time in several years," the report declared.

Bank Stockholders Fight RFC Suit

Chicago, June 30 (AP).—Efforts of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to collect $10,000,000 from stockholders of the Central Republic Bank & Trust Co. were opposed by 12 of Chicago's most prominent law firms in a joint brief filed today in Federal Court. They represented a majority of some 5,000 defendants in the suit brought by the RFC to collect an anticipated deficiency in repayment of an $80,000,000 loan made in 1932. The brief comprised more than 300 pages of arguments and citations and concluded with this statement:

"The enforcement of stockholders' liability in favor of depositors of a bank, who have theoretically at least entrusted their money to the bank because of reliance upon the solvency of the bank's stockholders, is one thing, but for an agency of the Government, which did not advance money in reliance in the slightest degree upon stockholders' liability and which took all of the assets of the bank as security for its advance, to insist upon the enforcement of such liability, is quite another thing."

Business Trend Points Higher, Survey Shows

Long-Term Recovery Cycle Is Held not Yet Completed.

New York, June 30.—That the cyclical recovery of business which began three years ago has not yet been completed and that there is no better place for long-term employment of funds than in honestly managed, competently operated American business enterprises which have a period of growth ahead of them, is the major premise reached in a "Mid-year Appraisal of Business and Security Market Prospects" prepared for E. A. Pierce & Co. by the Standard Statistics Co. The 64-page pamphlet gives a comprehensive graphic survey of recent and long-term trends of business, finance and security markets in some 170 different charts which are used to illustrate various points made in the text of the appraisal.

The volume of American business has held up surprisingly well so far this year in the face of many uncertainties and impediments. With relative stability and an only reasonably satisfactory level of activity, corporation profits have continued to increase, so that second quarter profits are estimated at from 40 per cent to 50 per cent greater than those of the first three months.

Good News Discounted.

In the face of these two factors bearing on security prices, the failure of common stocks to have given a more enthusiastic response in the past five months is explained by the fact that by the beginning of 1936 a vast amount of the good news had already found its expression in stock prices. Relatively, stock prices advanced considerably more rapidly than business activity from the trough of the depression in 1933, and the past few months have seen a reasonable pause to give business activity a chance to catch up.

That the restraints which have caused the capital goods industries to lag behind consumers' goods are not insuperable is indicated by the gratifying progress made by the heavier industries during the past half year. This very slowness in getting under way tends to accentuate the vast deficits in capital goods to be supplied by future production. It is inevitable that replacements must ultimately be made in any modern industrial establishment, unless a permanent change has come over our economy.

The revival in these basic heavy industries which has occurred thus far this year demonstrates that the obstacles in the path of their revival which were thought to exist, can somehow be overcome. This supplies the basis for the hope that in the future the obstacles will be overcome in even greater degree.

June Supplies Biggest Upsets

By Paul Mikelson.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

New York, June 30.—"What is so rare as a day in June?"

Sports leaders and writers, dazzled and groggy after a whirlwind June that rolled down history lane tonight, can truthfully rise up and shout: "Nothing!"

Probably never in all sporting history has any one month produced the startling performances and upsets to equal those of June, 1936. Backtracking a few highlights:

Baseball—The Cubs ripped off another winning streak, riding from from the National League "wilderness" to pennant contention with 15 straight . . . Lou Gehrig reached a new "iron man" record by playing in his 1700th straight ball game and still is at it . . . Mickey Cochrane, "Iron Mike" of the World Championship Detroit Tigers, was sent to the hospital and then went West to recuperate from a breakdown . . . the New York Yankees developed another fearsome "murderers' row" and made it look like a runaway in the pennant race . . . Van Lingle Mungo, of the downtrodden Brooklyn Dodgers quit his team, only to return later and equal the major league record by striking out seven Cincinnati Reds in succession . . . the major league trading deadline passed without a deal being made except a surprising one that sent Ben Chapman from New York to Washington for Jake Powell . . .

The gold-plated Boston Red Sox and Detroit Tigers lost valuable ground. The Reds and Nationals continued to throw surprise parties all around the circuits.

Tennis—Australia eliminated the United States and Yugoslavia upset France in the Davis Cup eliminations. Bitsy Grant made his debut at Wimbledon, stood the crowd on its ear, and then lost. Baron Gottfried von Cramm upset Fred Perry to win the French hard court crown.

Golf—The United States Open scoring record of 286, held by Chick Evans and Gene Sarazen, was smashed by Tony Manero, new champion, and Harry Cooper, runner-up. After beating on the door for years, Alf Padgham finally captured the British Open, shutting out the United States for the third straight year. Holes-in-one, a prize that thousands strive for and never get, literally rained as the Nation's harvest soared over the 700 mark.

Track . . . Cornell came back to win the I. C. 4-A with a youngster named Herbert Cornell driving down the stretch to clinch victory . . . Jesse Owens, Ohio State's "ebony flash," streaked onward to impressive victories . . . California uncovered amazing new Olympic material . . . Don Lash shattered Paavo Nurmi's "old faith record" by ripping over 2 miles in 8:58.3. . . . Bill Bonthron came back, met defeat by Gene Venzke, and then turned the table son his arch rival.

Swimming . . . two young school girls, who have been swimming a combined total of four years, won national championships. Toni Redfern, of New York, a dub swimmer a year ago, captured the 100-meter free style; Iris Cummings, Los Angeles, who took up swimming three years ago, won the 220-yard breaststroke.

Answer, nothing.

5. "Seasons" shall be as follows:

6. Games may not be scheduled with college freshman teams except with permission of the head of the Department of Health and Physical Education.

7. A list of eligible players must be filed by school principals with Bayh at the beginning of each advisory period. Eligibility protests will be settled by Bayh, who may, if he desires, submit the protest to the board of principals.

9. At the close of each sport season, each school shall submit to the superintendent of schools a financial report (audited) showing all receipts and expenditures.

Penalties for schools and athletes violating the regulations are also described, the school forfeiting all games during period of violation and the player becoming ineligible for one year.

The program as passed also included a vigorous recommendation for "subsidization of athletes by the Board of Education" by which the board would make up any deficit incurred by the sports program.

It also requires that coaches of school teams "have a broad professional background in the field of health and physical education and be employed as teachers of health and physical education." Among the criteria by which these men shall be judged, the program says, shall be his "ability to build bodies rather than tear them down" and "ability to win games in such number as is consistent with the available material."

Europe Blocks Otto's Return, Say Austrians

Nation Prepared Internally for His Restoration, Leaders Assert.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, June 30.—Monarchist leaders asserted tonight that only sentiment abroad, which they conceded was vital, remained in the way of a Hapsburg restoration in Austria.

Government officials, commenting on reports from Geneva that Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg might go before the League Assembly to ask that the Archduke Otto be placed on the throne, said Schuschnigg is not planning "for the moment" to go to Geneva.

"Of course the situation might change quickly," they added.

The chancellor plans to go to Geneva in the fall, a spokesman disclosed.

The French foreign minister, the spokesman said, had sent a "formal suggestion, not an invitation," that Schuschnigg attend the present League session. But even had it not arrived too late, the chancellor would have been prevented from going now by the pressure of business.

Planned Long Time.

Asked whether the question of restoration would be discussed in the autumn, the spokesman said merely that Schuschnigg had intended to visit Geneva for a long time, wanted to meet Foreign Minister Delbos of France for the first time, and desired to renew his acquaintance with Anthony Eden, of Great Britain.

"The government's attitude on restoration remains unchanged," the spokesman added. "It has no intention of doing anything about it—there is no question of restoration at the present time."

Restoration propaganda has become increasingly effective internally, officials admit, with the legitimists' difficulty centered principally in the situation outside Austria.

Some quarters expressed belief that Schuschnigg was permitting the legitimists a free hand to gain a diplomatic advantage in negotiations with Germany, which might grant concessions to prevent a restoration.

Legitimists Encouraged.

A statement in the House of Commons that the British government regards the return of Otto to the throne as a domestic Austrian issue greatly encouraged legitimists.

The attitude of Italy and France remains something of a question mark, however. That of Yugoslavia is a big exclamation point behind the small word "no!"

"We assume that Italy will approve," said a monarchist spokesman. "France probably will some time take Great Britain's attitude, and perhaps can swing the Little Entente members (Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Rumania) to that belief.

"The first important thing is the agreement of Italy, France and Britain. Then Germany may agree. If that happens the objections of the Little Entente—whose governments oppose the restoration of a dynasty that once ruled their countries—could not be regarded as insurmountable."

The viewpoint of the Austrian rank and file is regarded by legitimists as generally favorable—at least not hostile to any great extent.

Fairfax Co. Park Funds Awarded

Residents and organizations of Fairfax County have pledged sufficient funds to assure the county a rural recreation park. The goal of the county committee in charge of raising funds and obtaining the location was about $4,400.

A meeting of the committee was held Monday night in Fairfax and as soon as it was determined that the necessary amount had been subscribed, a permanent county committee was organized, with C. C. Carr, of Fairfax, as chairman. This committee was instructed to file the necessary application with the State and Federal WPA officials for the Federal allocation.

When the project was originally contemplated, the Works Progress Administration offered to give approximately $21,000 for labor, provided the county committee obtained the necessary site and about $4,400 locally. Mrs. James U. Kincheloe, wife of the county commissioner of revenue, donated a site near Clifton Station. The tract will contain between 25 and 40 acres, depending on the amount desired by the committee for the park.

The site has been approved by WPA engineers and plans have been prepared for a lake, recreation hall and athletic fields. The engineers said that the tract was ideal for park purposes and offered remarkable possiblities for present and future development as funds may become available. The county committee also has been assured that sufficient WPA labor will be available under the local quota to carry the project to completion.

Other officers named to the permanent county committee include Mrs. L. I. Dolph, of Lorton, vice chairman; Mrs. Frances Leigh, of Fairfax, secretary, and W. T. Carrico, of Annandale, treasurer.

Rioting Marks Selassie's Plea For League Aid; Italians Held

Argentina's spokesman, stressing the Pan American ideal of international justice, warned the Assembly his country might quit the League if that ideal were flouted.

Haile Selassie's voice was rather flat as he spoke in Amharic. His words were translated for the assembled diplomats.

"The representatives of 52 nations assured me the aggressor would not triumph," he said, after asserting "I did not wish the war that was imposed upon me. * * *"

"Despite our lack of airplanes, artillery and other modern weapons, my confidence in the League was absolute.

"I could not believe that 52 nations—among them the most powerful in the world—could be defeated by a single aggressor.

Expected Assistance.

"I never expected the people of foreign countries to have their sons shed their blood for us, but I did expect the League powers to grant me financial assistance so I might purchase badly needed arms.

"Outside the Kingdom of the Lord there is no nation which is greater than another. God and history will remember your judgjudgment!"

Referring to the movement to life sanctions, he asked:

"Does this not mean that you abandoned us to Italy? Will the world states accept this precedent and bow down before force?"

Van Zeeland was elected Assembly president at a secret meeting, receiving 47 of the 50 votes.

"The League is at a turning point in history," he said upon taking the —r, and "never before have the difficulties been so great. The fate of a large section of humanity hangs in the balance."

"Frameup," Italian Says.

Rome, June 30 (AP).—A high Fascist official reflected Italian anger tonight at the day's developments in Geneva and called the appearance of Emperor Haile Selassie before the League Assembly a "frameup."

Commenting on the arrest of

HAILE SELASSIE.

Italian newspapermen, accused of creating disorder by heckling the Negus from galleries, the official said it created "a very bad impression here."

He called the Emperor "Signor Tafari," since Haile Selassie is no longer recognized as a ruler by Fascists.

The press ministry declined to say what would be the government's reaction to the arrests and to granting "Signor Tafari" permission to speak, pending a study of the day's events.

Informed sources indicated, nevertheless, Italian impatience with the League has been strained almost to the breaking point.

The high Fascist official added:

"It was natural there should be outbursts of resentment when Geneva allowed the former Negus to speak his speech, which was chiefly insults against our soldiers.

"We are very sceptical tonight whether the League will be able to achieve anything worthwhile in the peace line by having Signor Tafari there and authorizing him to take part.

"It was significant there was applause before he had finished his speech in Amharic, which I am sure none at Geneva understood, showing it was all a frameup."

Virginia Seeks System to Aid Poor Workers

By the Associated Press.

Warrenton, Va., June 30.—Families of the "marginal" and "submarginal" population groups constitute the only "great unsaturated market as yet undeveloped in Virginia," Col. Leroy Hodges, managing director of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce, said here tonight.

The problem, he told members of the Warrenton Chamber of Commerce, at their annual dinner, is to find means of giving these low income groups greater spending power.

He said the State chamber now is seeking to interest Virginia business in the solution of the problem.

"Trends clearly indicate," he said, "that the time has arrived when the business leaders of Virginia should give serious thought to the future of the Old Dominion—an adequate plan that will guide and energize through the years the physical, industrial and social development of the State."

1,500,000 in Rural Areas.

Col. Hodges computed that of Virginia's total population of less than 2,500,000, 1,500,000 live outside of incorporated towns.

"Some authorities classify at least half of these rural dwellings as 'marginal' and as high as one-fifth of them as 'submarginal.' This marginal group is composed of those on or near a bare subsistence plane, while the submarginal group is made up of dependents and delinquents and those living below the decency level.

"To business men, and especially to manufacturers, it is of direct concern to find that these white submarginal population groups are showing a tendency to increase while, the colored and luxury groups are declining. These low-income families constitute the State's only unsaturated market for surplus goods."

Possibilities Stressed.

He pointed out that an additional dollar per day in the spending power of each of 40,000 families in the submarginal population would increase the "consumers' market" by something near $15,000,000 yearly.

"A serious trend of the depression period has been for the people of nonfarm status to bring submarginal lands into cultivation. Between 1930 and 1935 the number of persons living on farms in Virginia increased more than 100,000, of whom 40,000 belonged to a nonfarm status in 1930.

"While the number of persons per farm has decreased, the whole population shift in agriculture in Virginia has tended to throw lands not fit for cultivation into use by people not essentially farmers."

WPA to Seek Leave Loophole For 5,000 Aids

WPA union representatives yesterday were told by Aubrey Williams, deputy WPA administrator, that they had misunderstood his decision in regard to the leave status of the 5,000 employes whose cause they had traveled to Washington to plead.

He said he would not countermand retiring Comptroller General McCarl's ruling, which had placed these administrative, supervisory, research and clerical workers outside the recent leave law. The 14 union representatives, following a series of conferences Monday, had understood that he had decided to countreman the ruling.

Williams explained that countermanding of the order might put these employes in a worse position than at present. McCarl's office, it was intimated, could suspend payments of their salaries if these employes took their leaves.

Instead of taking this abrupt action, Williams said he would have his legal staff work out some method of reclassification which would place these workers within the leave law.

WPA officials, it was explained, are in sympathy with the plight of the 5,000 employes and feel that they should be classified along with other Federal workers who will benefit by the recent leave law.

McCarl ruled that since these workers are on project pay rolls they are not administrative employes. The contention of WPA is that their position on the pay roll is merely a technicality.

Lords to Debate British Foreign Policies Today

Scene of Criticism Shifts; Government Defeated on Education Bill.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 30.—Criticism of the British cabinet for varying individual declarations on foreign policy outside of Parliament shifts tomorrow to the House of Lords, where the government suffered a defeat tonight.

The reversal, of no significance in tomorrow's debate, came when an amendment to the education bill moved by the Archbishop of Canterbury was adopted, 31 to 29.

The amendment was opposed by the government through Earl de la Warr, parliamentary secretary for the board of education. It dealt with state grants of money to schools and the secretary argued the amendment went outside the limits of a compromise reached By religious groups and the government.

Rennell to Open Debate.

Debate on foreign policy will be opened tomorrow by Baron Rennell, Conservative, who will call attention to "some apparent lack of consistency in the utterances of ministers on questions of foreign affairs."

He will ask further, "How far such public utterances by members of the government other than Prime Minister Baldwin and Foreign Secretary Eden represent the collective opinion of the cabinet?"

An editorial barrage in opposition newspapers followed last night's debate in the House of Commons. Despite a bristling Labor attack, the government won a vote of confidence, 284 to 136.

The attack centered around a recent speech in Paris by Alfred Duff Cooper, secretary of war, in which he said "your frontier is our frontier" and opposition charges that Prime Minister Baldwin is "Little Boy Blue who is sound asleep."

Baldwin Is Absent.

Baldwin did not attend the debate as he was resting at his country estate at Chequers. Meeting many rumors that the government leader would resign, officials hastened to explain he was merely having a short rest after working at high pressure. They stated he would "definitely" return to London Thursday to keep an engagement at a dinner of the City of London Conservative Association and probably would be in the commons Friday.

The Evening Standard charged: "Britain is a ship on stormy seas without a chart."

Labeling the speech of Sir John Simon, home secretary, to the commons "merely another in a succession of ministerial utterances, each apparently belying the last and at whose combined purport the nation can only guess—and fear," the Isolationist Evening News concluded: "It would seem the national government has no foreign policy and never has had one."

Funds Will Be Pledged For Apple Ad Campaign

Winchester, Va., June 30.—Approximately 1,000,000 barrels of apples soon will be pledged for assessment to obtain funds to advertise fruit produced in the Shenandoah-Cumberland apple belt, is was announced here today.

Apple producers of Frederick and other northern Shenandoah Valley counties, when they met here, were informed that satisfactory progress is being made in raising the large advertising fund with orchardists in Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and southern Pennsylvania participating.

Kidnaper in Germany Doomed to Die by Ax

Bonn, Germany, June 30 (AP).—Realmleader Hitler's death decree for kidnapers was invoked today for the first time.

Hans Giese, 32, was condemned to be executed by the ax for kidnaping the 11-year-old son of a Bonn merchant whose name was not made public.

The boy was kidnaped June 14. Giese demanded a ransom equivalent to $700. Police caught him by trailing the messenger. The death decree was announced June 22, but made retroactive.

Driver Hangs Self On Porch of Home

George W. Speakes, 38, truck driver for a dairy company, hanged himself with a clothesline from the ceiling of the porch in the rear of his home, 3108 Monroe street northeast, yesterday.

Speakes' body was found by his wife, Mrs. Myrtle Speakes, and his two children, Paul, 16, and Peggy, 14, Taft Junior High School students, when they opened a back door shortly before 8 a. m.

Relatives of the dead man told police he had been despondent over ill health for several months. His truck was noticed in the garage, and it is thought the tragedy occurred when he left the house about 1 a. m. to begin his deliveries.

Union Charges Steel Concerns Firing Workers

Men Dismissed for Aid in Drive to Organize, Leader Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, June 30.—Charges by union leaders that steel workers are being discharged for participating in a drive to unionize the industry sounded today on the organization front.

Clinton S. Golden, regional director for Northeastern States, made the assertion, while organizers moved out to mill towns throughout the country.

Golden said the steel workers' organizing committee headquarters in Pittsburgh had received "widespread reports" that plant officials "have warned company union representatives to have nothing to do with our movement."

He added:

"That seems to substantiate the charge often made that representation plans and company unions are not collective bargaining agencies as contemplated by Federal law."

Charge Workers Fired.

He made a specific assertion the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation discharged workmen at its Aliquippa, Pa., plant for joining in the drive to enroll the industry's 450,000 employes in one big union. The company's officials declined to comment.

Golden is a former regional director for the National Labor Relations Board. Shortly before resigning to join the industrial organization drive, he lost a court battle with Jones & Laughlin about discharge of workers for union activities.

At the unionization headquarters possibilities were discussed of establishing subdistricts for the drive at strategic points in and near the Nation's steel center. Three big district headquarters already have been established, in Pittsburgh for the Northeastern States; Birmingham, Ala., and Chicago.

Closed Shop Is Goal.

While the organization campaign moved ahead, the American Iron and Steel Institute, declared in a published statement:

"There are many disturbing indications that the promoters of the campaign will employ coercion and intimidation of the employes in the industry and foment strikes.

"The objective of the campaign is the 'closed shop' which prohibits the employment of anyone not a union member. The steel industry will oppose any attempt to compel its employes to join a union or to pay tribute for the right to work."

One of the first of big mass meeting expected to be called in the organization drive is scheduled for Homestead Sunday. Philip Murray, of the steel workers' organization committee, said the meeting will commemorate the forty-fourth anniversary of the steel strike there.

U. S. Contract, Ship Bill Signed By President

Walsh-Healey Measure Establishes 'NRA' in Government Deals.

Sweeping his desk clean of all acts of the Seventy-fourth Congress, President Roosevelt yesterday signed the ship subsidy bill, substituting outright subsidies to ship operators for existing ocean mail contracts, and the Walsh-Healey bill, imposing rigid wage and hour conditions on Government contractors.

They were the last two major measures awaiting his signature when he returned to his offices here after a brief rest at Hyde Park. Other dozens of relatively minor measures were either signed or vetoed. When the ten-day legislative deadline is reached Thursday, no bills will die by the "pocket veto" route.

Widely modified by the House in the last days of Congress, the Walsh-Healey bill, originally intended as a limited projection of NRA codes, requires persons having contracts with the Government for the performance of public work, and for the supplying materials and equipment, to conform with specified labor standards.

Four Conditions Imposed.

The measure, which has been hailed in some quarters as so far reaching that it might affect 75 per cent of the country's business, and in others as merely a "glorified" Bacon-Davis act, imposes four outstanding conditions on persons contracting with the Government.

1. Standard for minimum wages set at the prevailing minimum wage for similar work in industries operating in the locality in which the contract is to be performed. The Secretary of Labor would determine the prevailing wage in advance of the contracts.

2. No person would be employed on these contracts for more than 8 hours a day or 40 hours a week.

3. No boy under 16 and no girl under 18 could be employed on the contracts.

4. So-called "kick-backs," under which persons employed on Government contracts turn part of their wages back to their employer by prearrangement, are outlawed.

These conditions would not apply to labor on certain standard products sold in the open market, but used on Government projects.

Expansion Is Goal.

The ship subsidy bill signed by the President is aimed at the expansion of the American merchant marine through direct Government subsidies, provides for a United States Maritime Commission of five members. The President said yesterday he has not yet decided whom he will appoint.

Designed to increase the amount of trade carried by American ships, and to increase the number of American ships for possible use in event of war, the Government, under the act, would pay up to 50 per cent of the cost of the vessels, while the operators as a rule would put up 25 per cent of the cost. The remaining 25 per cent could be loaned by the Government, on a 20-year basis, at 3½ per cent interest. The Government itself could build ships and charter them to responsible operators.

Determined on Cost.

The amount of subsidies to be paid for operating the ships would be determined after study of the relative costs of the American and foreign merchant marine. A $25,000 salary limitation is fixed for officials of subsidized concerns, and the Government would collect all profits in excess of 10 per cent on construction of a vessel with Federal aid.

Present ocean mail contracts would be cancelled before June 30, 1937. Awards by the maritime commission could be appealed both by the Government and contract holders to the Court of Claims.

The Copeland food and drug bill, which died with the Congress, will be reintroduced in revised form on the first day of the next session, Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, announced yesterday. He said the new measure would be administered entirely independent of the Department of Agriculture.

Acacia Will Open New Offices Today

The home office structure of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. will be open today for public inspection. An invitation to Washingtonians to make a conducted tour through the building was extended last night by William Montgomery, president.

The structure is at 51 Louisiana avenue facing the United States Capitol. In exterior design it conforms with the Federal buildings of the Capitol area.

Visitors will be guided by 40 young men and women employes. Sidney and his orchestra will provide music.

New Building Marks Notable Progress of Acacia Mutual Life

Edifice Harmonizes With Federal Scene

Follows Monumental Plan of Architecture of Government Structures; Designed for Efficiency, Strength and Stability.

More than a decade ago President William Montgomery visioned the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. occupying as its home office a magnificent building facing the United States Capitol and the more than 100 acres of park surrounding it. The completion of the first unit of the new home office building marks the realization of this vision.

This project, however, did not take definite form until Acacia sold its home office building at 101 Indiana avenue northwest to the United States Government in the summer of 1934, at which time a committee was appointed by the board of directors to select an architect with whose assistance they were to work out the design and plans for the erection of a new home office building.

Harmony Ordered.

For the guidance of the building committee the board of directors set up the requirements that the building be monumental in type, that it harmonize with Government buildings in the vicinity, that it express simplicity, strength and stability, thus typifying that for which the company stands and that it be economical to construct, economical in upkeep and efficient in operation. In pursuance of the action taken by the board of directors, the building committee considered the applications of 35 firms of architects who had applied for the commission of designing the new building.

After careful consideration and investigation of each applicant, the committee had personal interviews with the representatives of the six firms which gave the greatest promise of being able to design a building which would conform to the requirements set up by the board of directors. After interviewing these firms of architects, the building committee selected the firm of Shreve, Lamb & Harmon of New York, who designed the Empire State Building, Bankers Trust Building in New York and various other well-known structures as being the firm the committee felt was best qualified for the work.

Building Carefully Planned.

An inspection of many of the recently completed insurance buildings in this country was made by a committee composed of officers, members of the building committee and the architects, after which an exhaustive study was made into the existing and future requirements of the company. In the determination of the requirements of the building, the facilities of the previous home office were given careful consideration. It was decided that the first unit of the new building should not only provide ample floor space for immediate needs, but that provision should also be made for a reasonable expansion based upon the past growth of the company.

The building committee then instructed the architect to prepare preliminary plans, sketches, perspectives and estimates for a building which would meet the requirements of the company and conform to the standards set up by the board of directors. After an extended period, during which the architects worked out different designs, they finally, after consultation with the building committee, submitted designs, sketches and perspectives which were unanimously approved by the board of directors, upon which Shreve, Lamb & Harmon were instructed to proceed with the work and to complete all working drawings and specifications for the building.

31 Firms Bidding.

Shortly after the completion of the preliminary studies and the determination of the principal characteristics of the building and the development of the initial layout, the company decided to employ a contractor who could also co-operate with the architects and advise along construction lines. Thirty-one nationally known firms of contractors applied for the job. The building committee set up certain factors to be considered in the selection of a builder—ability, experience in constructing buildings of the type of that proposed, financial responsibility, organization set-up and equipment, estimated cost of construction, fee for services and time within which the building could be completed. A questionnaire was sent to a number of firms with the request that they answer same and later appear before the building committee and discuss the matter in detail.

The purpose of the questionnaire was to obtain more definite information concerning their qualifications. Subsequently representatives of each one of these firms appeared before the committee, discussed the information contained in their replies to the questionnaire and in addition gave further information in regard to the various additional questions which were presented to them.

Measured by the factors set by the building committee and after careful consideration of the whole matter, bearing in mind especially the factor of cost, the committee was unanimously of the opinion that the Turner Construction Co., of New York City, came nearest to complying with the standard set up. Accordingly, upon recommendation of the building committee the contract was awarded by the board of directors to that company on June 25, 1935.

Ground Broken Last July.

Ground was broken on July 2, 1935, when President Montgomery, donning engineer's overalls, operated the controls of the steam shovel. Building committee members, directors, officials and department heads participated in the exercises. The cornerstone was laid by President Montgomery on October 23, 1935. That the board made no mistake in the election of the builders is shown by the fact that building was completed and ready for occupancy on June 12, 1936, which was more than one month earlier than the builder had promised when awarded the contract. This was especially beneficial to the company, as it re-united the firm under one roof, thus ending the expense and inconvenience of being separated in four different locations. The company moved into the new building June 19 when all exterior grading, planting and outside work, except the carving of the sculptured griffins, had been completed.

The completed building, which will form the principal facade of a development occupying the entire square bounded by Louisiana avenue, New Jersey avenue, First and D streets northwest, stands in the most commanding position of any private building in Washington and has been so placed that the main entrance extending along the line of Louisiana avenue faces the Capitol of the United States.

Directly in front of the building is Capitol Park, with its fountain and reflecting pool, said to be among the most beautiful in the world, and further to the southwest can be seen the United States Botanical Gardens. Toward the southeast, a short distance away, stand the Senate Office Building, the new United States Supreme Court, the Library of Congress, the Folger Shakespearean Library and the two House Office buildings.

From the upper floors of the building can be seen the Lincoln Memorial, the Potomac River and, beyond, the tree-clad hills of Virginia, among which one can see the George Washington National Memorial, the City of Alexandria and within the borders of Arlington Cemetery—the shrine of so many heroic dead—the Unknown Soldier's Tomb, the Memorial Amphitheater and the former home of Robert E. Lee. In this location Acacia is assured that it will never have any depreciation in land value because the United States Capitol and other Government buildings will be the company's neighbors for all time to come.

The building has been constructed of granite and limestone. It measures approximately 300 feet long and contains six floors and a basement. On the interior from the entrance floor up the building has been designed without interior structural columns and with high ceilings, so that there may be the utmost freedom in planning departmental arrangements and at the same time giving unusual light and ventilation.

Terraced Front.

Along the front of the building above which the main facade rises, a terrace has been placed, giving the building a dignified setting when seen from the Union Station plaza or from the farther side of Capitol Park. This assures not only a more advantageous appearance from a distance, where the apparent height of the building would otherwise be reduced, but also provides a more impressive foreground and approach to the building, which is further emphasized by the broad flight of steps flanked on either side by sculptured griffins—the mythological symbols for guardianship of the treasure and of wisdom, watchfulness and invincibility.

The basement extends over the entire area and houses the principal pipe mains, utility feeders, heating plant, vacuum cleaning equipment, a part of the air-conditioning machinery and the security vault. The security vault is a complete

All Policyholders To Receive Copy Of This Edition

This special Acacia Section published today as a part of the regular edition of The Washington Post is being sent to all policyholders of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.

In these columns is unfolded an epic story of the realization of an ideal, culminating in the opening of a building dedicated to the service of tens of thousands of families.

Issued coincidentally with the opening of Acacia's magnificent new home office building at 51 Louisiana avenue northwest on a commanding site facing the United States Capitol, this section contains a wealth of interesting information, not only with respect to the building, but also concerning the history, growth and development of the company during the more than six decades of its existence.

It provides in handy form a record of Acacia's progress and the story of its public service since March 3, 1869, when the company was given its charter by Congress.

Acacia's Building Called Last Word In Modern Design

The following statement in connection with the opening of the new Acacia Building is made by President William Montgomery:

"This building conforms in architectural style to the great Federal buildings adjoining. Six stories in height, the building includes every modern feature for the expeditious handling of the company's business. It has been carefully planned for efficient and economical operation. From its impregnable vault to its completely equipped medical laboratory, from its spacious filing rooms to its soundproofed and air-conditioned offices, this building has been executed as the last word in modern business structures.

"The building has been designed so that while it is a complete unit in itself, additional units can be economically added as they are required through the growth of the company. It is planned that ultimately the building will cover the entire square.

"It is with very real pride and satisfaction that Acacia has taken possession of this magnificent building."

Acacia Charter Dates To Grant's Inaugural

Firm Has Weathered Many Storms Since Congress Sponsored It on March 3, 1869, When There Were but 40 States in Union.

It was in 1869 on March 3 that the Congress of the United States chartered the insurance society which was Acacia's beginning.

On March 4, that year, Ulysses S. Grant delivered his inaugural address as President. There were 40 States in the Union. The population of the country was 40,000,000. Railway service between the Atlantic and Pacific was about to be started. The invention of the air brake had just been announced. The electric lamp, the telephone, the phonograph, were innovations unknown but soon to come.

It was during such times as these that 22 men obtained from Congress a charter for the mutual relief association that today has flowered into the Acacia of 1936.

Members then paid $1.10 each upon the death of a brother member, and his beneficiary was entitled to get as many dollars as there were members in good standing on the books of the association. The 10 cents from each payment went to pay expenses.

A Room, Checkbook, $11,000.

Membership under this plan reached a high point in 1880, when there were 1,691 members, but then began to decline, until by 1892 there were only about 800 members. There was no money in the treasury to meet death claims, so the officers and directors were about ready to discontinue the association. It was a year later that an event took place which was the foundation reason for the growth of the local insurance society of 1893 to the Acacia of 1936. It was the election on December 26, 1893 of William Montgomery to the secretaryship of the association.

"At that time," to quote Mr. Montgomery, "the association was housed in a small room on the second floor of 419 Eleventh street northwest. The office furniture consisted of an iron safe, an unpainted school desk and a few chairs. There were no books and records except the minutes of the board of directors, a list of members and a memorandum on each stub in the checkbook showing the purpose for which that check was drawn."

Assets were about $11,000, represented by an equity in the Eleventh street property, insurance in force, about $500,000. Membership was about 700, each member paying $1.10 assessment upon each death. There was no age limit. No medical examination was required.

In 1894 the new secretary recommended to the board of directors the formation of a new class of members to pay on a more equitable basis. This was rejected, but in 1895 a plan of assessment, graded according to age, was adopted and medical examinations were first required. It was on March 4 that the first insurance salesman was appointed.

By 1896 membership had turned substantially upword, with a gain of 319 for the year, attributable to the new plan of operation.

One Clerk Hired.

By 1897 the business had so increased that a clerk was employed at a salary of $20 a month.

Between then and 1902 the expanding association was licensed to do business in Virginia, North Carolina and Pennsylvania, and its charter was amended to authorize the issuance of policies up to $2,000.

Changes then came swiftly. In rapid succession, Walter C. Wright was appointed actuary to analyze the business and make recommendations. Dr. J. B. Nichols was appointed as medical director, which position he holds to this day with Acacia. The discontinuance of the assessment plan and the establishment of the business on the legal reserve basis was urged by Montgomery, and in 1903 the charter was amended, requiring it to maintain legal reserves on all new insurance sold. It was the first fraternal organization to maintain legal reserves. That same year the first mortgage investment was made—a $1,500 loan secured on real estate at 1123 Tenth street northwest.

Bigger Quarters in 1904.

By 1904 it was necessary to move to larger quarters. Assets then were $12,942 and insurance in force, $1,639,000. Then came the writing of whole life, 20-payment life and 20-year endowment policies. Meantime, the charter had again been amended to permit the issuance of policies up to $5,000 on any one person.

By 1907 another move to larger quarters was necessary. Assets in the four years since 1903 had multiplied five times, to $124,912. Insurance in force had increased nearly $700,000 to $2,166,575.

President Montgomery Built Acacia to Present Position of Soundness

He Started With Firm As Its Only Employe

Managing Officer Came to U. S. From Ireland; Has Played an Outstanding Role in the Progress of the Company.

The story of Acacia is the story of William Montgomery, and the story of William Montgomery is the story of Acacia.

William Montgomery has been the managing officer of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. for more than 42 years. Truly unique has been the relationship of William Montgomery and Acacia throughout those four decades.

Sought Freedom.

In 1869, just four years after the close of the war between the States, William Montgomery was born on a farm in County Tyrone, North Ireland. In that same year, in Washington, D. C., the Congress of the United States chartered a small fraternal insurance society, known as the Masonic Mutual Relief Association.

Twenty-four years later, in 1893, William Montgomery was the sole employe of that society.

Like so many other stalwart and forward-looking young men of his time, William Montgomery came to America, seeking the freedom and the opportunity which this country offered in such abundant measure. He was ambitious, he was strong and tireless, and he had set for himself a goal from which his eyes have not wavered throughout a lifetime.

In Washington the insurance society which had been organized with such high hopes in 1869 had not moved forward as its sponsors had hoped. In early years it had served well its purpose of providing a limited death benefit to each member's widow in an amount sufficient to meet funeral expenses, but as time went on the shortcomings of the assessment system under which it operated became increasingly plain, and by 1893 the directors of the society were discouraged.

Offers Plan.

In the year 1892 William Montgomery was employed by the society to carry on the work of its secretary during the latter's illness. The following year the secretary, not having regained his health, resigned. It was at this time that the directors of the society became so discouraged and were about to dissolve the association. Upon hearing of this intention of the directors William Montgomery made a survey of the society's records and approached the directors with a proposal. Before closing up and relinquishing the Congressional charter, Montgomery urged, "let me see what I can do with the society." His earnestness and enthusiasm so impressed the directors that they appointed him secretary and authorized him to see what he could do to build up the society.

It may be noted here that the young man "did things." Instead of going out of business, the society stayed in business and showed immediate progress. The handful of members in 1893 has now grown to a total of 125,000 policyholders located in every State and throughout the world. Acacia's assets have grown from literally nothing to more than $62,500,000. From a few thousand of insurance in force in 1893, its total of protection to policyholders has grown to more than $355,000,000. The number of its employes has increased from 1 to more than 1,000.

The single room which housed the society in 1893 has expanded into the magnificent home office building just completed, which faces the United States Capitol. While in the beginning it confined its activities to Washington, Acacia now has branch offices in 60 principal cities throughout the land.

One Lifetime.

All this has been accomplished in one man's lifetime. Did William Montgomery visualize all this when, more than 40 years ago, he stood before the directors of that local insurance society and pleaded for an opportunity to "do something?" Mr. Montgomery himself perhaps would insist that he did not, and that Acacia has progressed far beyond his most ardent youthful hopes.

But the writer believes that he did, and that from the first this man saw what others did not see. Because in the best sense of the word, William Montgomery always has been an idealist, but an idealist who has had the rare faculty of maintaining an unshakable grasp upon realities. It is this merging of two great qualities that has enabled him to lead Acacia to its present place within the space of his own lifetime. No goal has been unattainable in his eyes. One need but set the goal and then apply oneself, determinedly, whole-heartedly, unselfishly to its accomplishment. William Montgomery had the vision to see, and the will to do. The results are an inspiration to others.

But the road was not easy. Picture this young man, still in his early twenties, far from his native shores, endeavoring to rebuild the weakened structure entrusted to him. The affairs of the association had been placed in his hands through the earnestness of his address, but the record is plain that few if any were sanguine of success. William Montgomery alone was convinced that with the application of sound principles, unremitting toil, and a refusal to be disheartened by setbacks, a new pathway could be cleared which would lead toward the ultimate goal.

He soon saw that the assessment method of insurance was wrong in principle, and year after year he kept insisting that the association should go on the legal reserve plan. Finally, in 1903, he won his point, and the charter was amended providing that the legal reserve should be maintained on every policy issued thereafter.

This was a revolutionary step at the time. In fact Acacia was the first fraternal society to take this step. William Montgomery and the directors of the association were ridiculed for attempting to build a life insurance company on the legal reserve basis with practically no assets and without capital stock or guarantee fund of any kind. Events have amply proved the wisdom of the course charted by William Montgomery.

Slowly through the years, on the solid foundation of legal reserve, William Montgomery built Acacia. Always the emphasis has been upon safe, low-cost protection and service to the policyholders.

To William Montgomery service has never been an abstraction. To him it has been something very real, and in a definite measure, sacred. It is refreshing and encouraging not only to know that there are such men but to see at first hand their constructive achievements. The Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., as built by William Montgomery, is a service institution. It is owned by the policyholders, and operated for their benefit. Acacia is the personal property of no one individual or group of individuals. It is owned by those it serves.

Civic-Minded.

The same spirit of pioneering which brought William Montgomery to these shores has continued to motivate him in the conduct of Acacia. An example has been cited in his insistence upon legal reserve in the face of almost universal criticism. That spirit has glowed forth upon countless occasions before and since.

For instance, Mr. Montgomery has declared that conservation is the greatest single problem facing the life insurance companies, and he was the first to judge an agent's ability, to gauge his worth, and arrange his compensation, not simply upon basis of the volume of insurance written, but upon the volume of insurance kept in force, and his capacity to serve the policyholders. He has repeated often his conclusion that "a lapsed policy is a loss to the policyholder, a loss to the company and a loss to the agent who wrote it."

In countless ways William Montgomery has blazed a trail in the field of life insurance. Always sound, always bearing in mind the safety and protection of those who have put their trust in Acacia, William Montgomery nevertheless has not been afraid to move forward ahead of the crowd.

He gives no snap judgments. He does not arrive at his decisions flashily. William Montgomery thinks deeply and carefully. His keen analytical mind grasps every element of a situation. He takes counsel with those in whose judgment, specialized knowledge and training he has confidence. Of the many factors he weighs, the one uppermost always is "Will it redound to the benefit of those we serve?"

Has Determination.

Once he has arrived at a decision, based upon matured consideration, William Montgomery holds to it with the same determination he displayed in his first address to the directors in 1893. But there is no flavor of stubbornness about his determination. If it can be shown that the decision should be modified or changed, he is quick to do so. But if he feels that the right path has been chosen, he is not easily swayed from the course he deems proper. And events of more than 40 years have proved beyond peradventure of a doubt that this phase of Mr. Montgomery's character has been of conclusive importance in the progress and development and stability of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.

The story of William Montgomery is not the ordinary "success" story which has for its motif the attainment of great material success for a single individual. Rather, it is the story of a man, who has found his greatest joy in building an institution, impregnable in its strength, which will continue to serve others for generations to come. Acacia belongs to its policyholders today because William Montgomery made it so. It will belong to those it serves in the future because that too is a part of his plan.

More than once William Montgomery was urged to convert the organization into a stock company, and the capital for that purpose was available. Had he agreed to the conversion, it would have made him a wealthy man. Wealth, however, was not his objective. He had the vision of a service institution and to prevent it from ever being capitalized he had the charter amended on September 22, 1922, providing ". . . That the company shall forever be conducted for the mutual benefit of its policyholders and their beneficiaries and not for profit." Therefore, he has no greater material interest in it than any one of its other policyholders.

Shows Foresight.

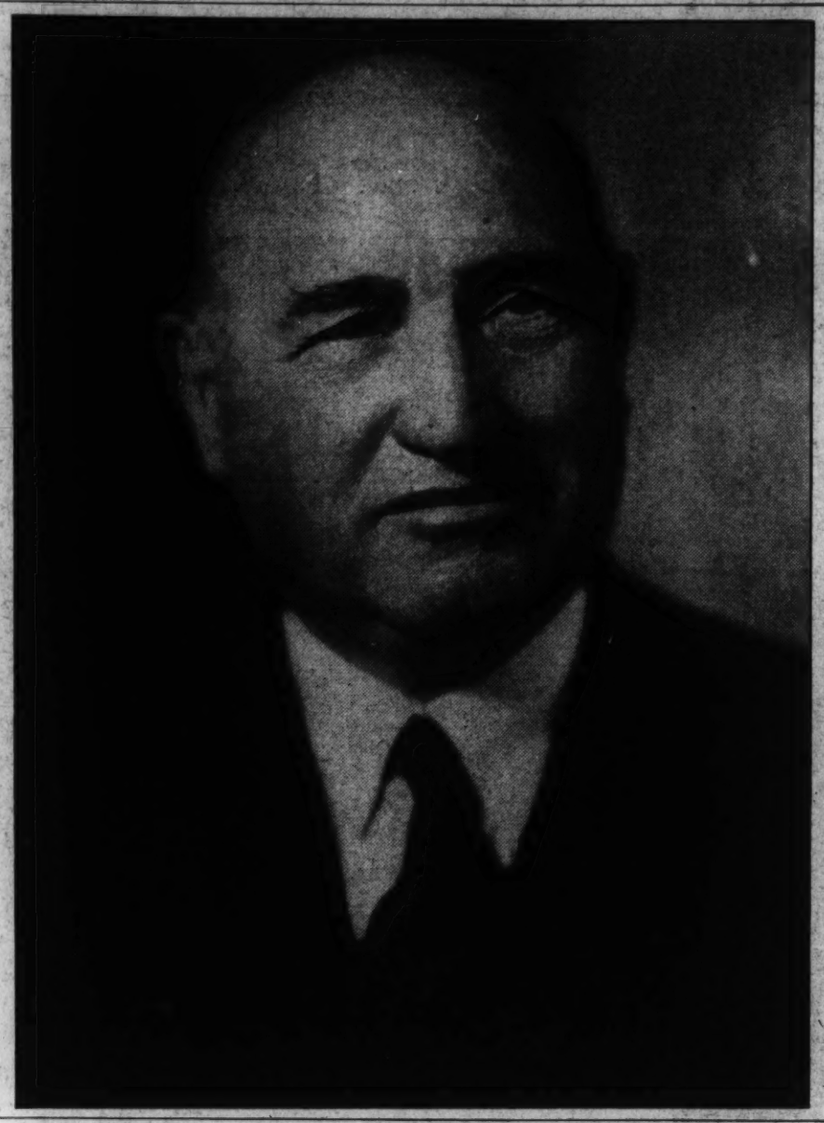
Characteristic of his foresight is the fact that William Montgomery has not permitted Acacia to become a one-man organization. He has recognized that the continued progress of any organization, of whatever nature, is dependent upon the continuity of effective and capable management. And so he has built up an experienced and highly capable executive staff, trained in the Acacia tradition. In all ways he has bulwarked Acacia against the future.

In the same way, step by step, he has broadened and strengthened the scope of Acacia's activities, all within the principles and precepts which he originally recognized to be inevitably correct. Thus the decades are marked by changes in structure which he has wrought. The first great departure was legal reserve; then came the change to a mutual old line company maintaining the legal reserve basis; in its next great change, Acacia made a substantial reduction in premium rates and became the first company to sell profit-sharing life insurance at non-participating rates; and still later the Congress of the United States granted another basic amendment to Acacia's charter, removing the fraternal restriction and thereby opened a broader field for service. These successive changes, and many others designed to assure the growth and progress of the company, have placed Acacia among the great mutual old line life insurance companies of America.

To this work, William Montgomery has devoted himself with an energy and concentration which seem almost superhuman. Nevertheless, he has still found time to interest himself in important civic and philanthropic projects and, to give freely of his time and vast experience to the many persons in private and official life who seek him out.

And so as Acacia marks another milestone in its progress, his associates welcome the opportunity to honor William Montgomery for his magnificent achievements. But to William Montgomery the greatest satisfaction comes as he has often remarked from the knowledge that the company has been so well built that it will last as long as we have a Government and will serve throughout the ages countless thousands of families well, faithfully and unselfishly.

H. S. H.



WILLIAM MONTGOMERY president of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., chairman of its executive, finance and building committees, and a member of the board of directors. For more than 42 years Mr. Montgomery has been the managing officer of the company.

UNDER MR. MONTGOMERY'S inspired leadership, Acacia has grown from a small local insurance "society" to one of the great old line life insurance companies of the country, with ownership vested in its policyholders and with branch offices in 60 principal cities.

Acacia Agents Club Members Hold to Highest Standard of Quality

Sales Record Picks Honor Unit's Heads

Unique Group Organized in 1934 at Coast Conference.

The William Montgomery Quality Club is an honor organization of Acacia agents. It has three qualifications for membership—production, persistency and service.

Each agent belonging to this organization carefully co-operates with his prospects and policyholders in analyzing their insurance needs, so that each policyholder will have the type of insurance best fitted to his requirements. When an Acacia policy is purchased and the policyholder's needs are properly met by it, that policyholder will treasure the ownership of his policy the more and hold fast to it. The insurance which he owns, therefore, stays in force and is "quality business."

"Never write an application if you do not feel sure it is quality business"—this is the guiding principle of the club.

The club was started early in 1934 when approximately 100 Acacia agents and managers attended its Pacific Coast regional convention. There they suggested the organization of this unique and original life insurance club, to be named in honor of President Montgomery, who has always emphasized the quality standard. The organization of this club met with instant acclaim by all of the agents and managers of the company throughout the country and the club was immediately expended to make all of the agents of the company eligible for membership.

When an agent achieves membership in the William Montgomery Quality Club he is not only the recipient of honor but he has the satisfaction of knowing that he has served his policyholders well and thus increased his own earnings. The day is here when permanency of income counts—a permanency which includes a constant opportunity to build a more prosperous future. This is what Acacia men are achieving as evidenced by their membership in the William Montgomery Quality Club.

The club officers each year are automatically selected on the basis of the greatest accomplishments in the writing of quality business in the previous year. The officers for 1936 are as follows: E. M. Fontany, West Virginia branch, president; S. R. Bowman, Oakland (Calif.), branch; C. Legters, Tampa (Fla.), branch; T. D. Harkelrode, Youngstown (Ohio), branch; C. L. Van Camp, West Virginia branch, vice presidents.

Members of the William Montgomery Quality Club will have a national get-together at the time of the Acacia Dedication Convention, August 12 to 14.

Acacia Firm Easily Survived Six Depressions

Chartered in 1869 in Hard Times After War, It Has Grown Steadily.

During the long history of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. it has passed successfully through many economic storms which swept the country.

Acacia was chartered and began business in 1869, just before the long, severe and disheartening depression of the 1870's, the aftermath of the war between the States.

Hard times in 1884 left the company undisturbed, and the same held true for the panics of 1893, 1907, 1920-21 and the recent depression.

Even in the very depths of the last depression, including the black month of March, 1933, there was no month when the company's ordinary income was not more than sufficient to pay all claims and demands of every kind upon it, including the extraordinary demands for policy loans, and leave money for investment.

As the United States once again pushes forward after a period of economic ill health, an analysis of the financial standing of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. shows that the company emerged from the depression stronger than ever, its financial structure unimpaired, its assets greater, the volume of insurance in force larger and the confidence of the public in it increasingly enhanced.

New Acacia Building Replete With Modern Improvements

Air Conditioning, Semi-Indirect Lighting and Soundproofing Worked Into Structure as Aids to Efficiency.

Three important modern improvements have been built into the new Acacia Building as aids to working efficiency. They are air conditioning, semi-indirect lighting and sound-proofing.

The air-conditioning equipment will keep the building at a comfortable temperature regardless of the weather out of doors. However, none of the "chilling" effect so noticeable in earlier air-cooling devices will prevail in the Acacia Building. Cooled air, thoroughly washed and cleaned of all impurities, will provide the structure with a climate which will enable the staff to work at peak efficiency and in thorough comfort throughtout the humid days of a Washington summer.

All of the lighting in the building is of the semi-indirect type—the latest and most approved method evolved by lighting engineers. Although by virtue of its location and the many windows in the building, artificial lighting will not often be needed during the day, when it is required it will be found to be both efficient and restful to the eyes. All disturbing glare is eliminated.

The entire building has been sounproofed by using sound-deadening materials to form the ceilings of all offices and working areas. Many tests have shown that noise is one of the greatest enemies of efficiency in any form of mental activity, and that the annual losses as a direct result of harsh extraneous noises are enormous. In the new Acacia Building all noise is reduced to a minimum through these materials being built in during construction as an integral part of the edifice.

Another interesting and worthwhile innovation in this building is the automatic messenger service equipment. This provides floor-to-floor transportation of papers and files by means of a conveyor system. Upon arrival at the designated floor, the papers then are distributed by messengers.

As an aid to effective building maintenance, vacuum outlets are located at strategic points on each floor, all of which outlets are connected with a central vacuum system in the basement of the building.

An Old Company.

Basic Principles Allow Protection At a Low Cost

There are important basic reasons why the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. is able to offer protection at such low cost. Able management, careful selection of risks, economical home office operation and sound investment policies all are contributing factors.

The management always has recognized that volume alone is not an accurate gauge of strength nor of capacity to serve economically and well. It has realized that only when insurance is sold directly by the agent of a company to a prospect is it possible to get results enabling the company to furnish its policyholders with sound protection at a rock-bottom cost. Acacia accepts no brokerage business, no reinsurance business, no group insurance and no other wholesale insurance of any character.

In every phase of the operation of the company the goal of the best possible insurance at the lowest possible cost commensurate with safety is kept uppermost in the mind not only of the management but of every employe.

Clearly, this is of vital importance to Acacia's thousands of policyholders, who are the actual owners of the company.

Insurance Provides A Sure Independence

Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, says:

"We may dream of independence, decide to set about its conquest and be determined to pursue it until it is won, and still end in the poorhouse, unless straight thinking and detailed planning are put into the venture. Economic independence is a safeguard of intellectual and spiritual independence."

Policyholders Control Acacia, Report Shows

Best's Life Insurance Reports, standard guide to America's life insurance companies, has the following to say about the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.:

"The company is purely mutual and is controlled by its policyholders. It is under able management.

"The most important factors in the financial position of a life insurance company are the condition of its assets and their relation (based upon reasonable valuations) to liabilities. Twenty per cent of the physical assets of the company consist of bonds which are of excellent quality, yielding 4 per cent in 1935. Mortgages total 52 per cent of the physical assets of the company and yielded 5.1 per cent in 1935. They are of good quality. The liquid position of the company is excellent.

"In operations a very important item is expenses, which are low; mortality is very favorable and lapses are low. Net cost to the policyholders has been very low.

"The company has long been managed in the interest of its policyholders. In our opinion it has considerable margins for contingencies.

"Upon the foregoing analysis of its present position we recommend this company."

Can Be Enlarged.

The new Acacia Building has been constructed so that additional units can be economically added as the company's needs increase.

Examiners Praise Acacia's Finances

Under the laws of the District of Columbia every life insurance company domiciled therein must be examined once every three years. The committee on examinations of the insurance commissioners' convention selects the States to make the examination.

Acacia received its last triennial examination in 1935. It took the examiners three months to complete their work, following which they submitted an exhaustive report.

"As a result of this examination the company was found to be in excellent financial condition, with the investments well diversified.

"The company is economically and efficiently managed. The reserves are ample to meet all statutory requirements and to provide against unforeseen contingencies as a result of fluctuation of securities.

Depression Revealed New Finance Needs

Acacia, Meeting Demands for Home Loans on Numerous Properties, Was Among Leaders in Making Rehabilitation Easy.

Amazingly complex are the operations and functions of a great life insurance organization. This fact is revealed graphically in a survey of the many departments of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. Each department has specialized duties and responsibilities. Co-ordinated by the executive staff, they go to make up Acacia.

Life insurance has become an integral and important part of the life of the Nation, however, and there are comparatively few people who have a clear understanding of how a large life insurance company functions. Nor do many realize the vast amount of detailed work which enters into such a company's operations.

Let us take a tour, then, through some of Acacia's departments.

Mortgage Loan Department.

The recent depression definitely showed the need for a revision in the old method of home financing. During this period new money for loans was not to be had. The life insurance companies, along with other lenders, temporarily discontinued their lending activities. The only financing of any importance which was done during this time was the renewing or extending of loans which matured. This in itself presented problems.

Real estate had depreciated greatly during the depression years. Consequently, when a loan came up for renewal and a reappraisal was made, it was found that the loan on the property is many cases was out of proportion to the then prevailing value of the real estate. To make an adjustment, which was plainly necessary, it became the policy of lenders to ask for substantial curtailments in the loans before they were renewed. This naturally caused inconvenience and embarrassment to many home owners. The situation showed there was a need for a different type of financing.

It was apparent that what the purchaser of a home needed was a loan which would assist him in paying for a home over a period of years. He needed a loan which did not need periodic renewals with the expenses incident thereto. A type of loan was needed which assured permanency; one that provided for regular payments on the principal, thus gradually retiring the entire indebtedness. To meet this demand, and to assist home buyers, Acacia originated and developed a long-term, low-cost monthly payment plan for mortgage loans.

$8 Per $1,000 Plan.

The first plan offered by Acacia is known as the "$8 per $1,000 Plan." Under it, principal and interest are repaid in installments of $8 per month per $1,000 borrowed. The interest charged each month is based on the unpaid principal at that time. These monthly payments when made over a period of 15 years and six months not only take care of the interest on the loan but also pay off the principal. The interest rate is low, and by using this plan the home owner pays off the obligation in small monthly installments like rent. The plan was first offered to home owners in the District of Columbia and nearby Maryland and Virginia, and met with an immediate response. Later it was extended to other States.

The operation of this plan was so successful that Acacia's finance committee decided that upon certain types of property it would be possible to offer even more liberal terms. Consequently, the company developed the $6.90 per $1,000 and $6.15 per $1,000 monthly payment plans. The former provides for the payment of the loan in a period of 20 years. The latter is a 25-year loan. The desirability and liberality of these plans have resulted in a steadily continuing demand for them among home owners throughout the country.

Treasurer's Department.

As a further indication of the attractiveness of this type of plan, it is noteworthy that many of the other lending organizations soon followed Acacia's lead and offered similar long-term monthly payment loans to the borrowing public. This plan has become universally popular, and the old-time "straight loan" rapidly is being superseded.

To assist those who apply to Acacia for loans and to service the existing loans a staff of mortgage loan experts is maintained.

The work of the treasurer's department is confined principally to financial transactions affecting cash and investment securities, together with the custody and safekeeping of securities and documents evidencing the company's assets. Some idea of the magnitude of the company's operations is indicated by the fact that during 1935 approximately $15,000,000 was received by the company, and more than 63,000 checks were issued to policyholders and others throughout the United States.

The treasurer's department under the direction of the finance committee supervises all investments in bonds and stocks. During the past year more than $4,500,000 was invested in bonds and more than $3,600,000 was received from bonds sold or matured. This department also has in its custody notes evidencing loans to policyholders secured by the reserves on their policies, these loans having an asset value of more than $17,000,000. The department has custody of more than $22,000,000 in notes secured by deeds of trust or mortgages on real estate, and bonds and stocks having a market value in excess of $10,000,000.

Field Department.

Recognizing that the public judges a company largely by its field men, with whom it comes in contact most frequently and intimately, great care is exercised in the selection of agents so that they may be truly representative of Acacia's spirit and ideals. Every Acacia agent makes his contract directly with the company and is directly responsible to it. Acacia has found that this plan best protects the interests of all concerned, namely, the policyholder, the company, and the agent. Salesmen in the life insurance business often are referred to as men "on the firing line." Like actual soldiers, it is necessary for them to be served and assisted by a secondary field organization in the home office. Acacia affords splendid co-operation to its field organization through the home office field department.

Acacia's guiding principle has been quality, not quantity. Acacia realizes that quality business can be written only by quality men. Its field organization is judged, therefore, not by the amount of business sold but by the volume of business that remains on the company's books.

Acacia field men constantly bear in mind President Montgomery's statement that "a lapsed policy is a loss to the policyholder, a loss to the company, and a loss to the agent who wrote it."

Actuarial Department.

Among the most interesting of departments is the actuarial. The actuarial department of a life insurance company has been likened to the compass of a ship. It is the duty of the actuary to gather and compile for effective utilization by the management data needed to indicate the company's position with respect to its contractual and statutory liabilities, to show in detail the effect upon the financial progress and condition of the company of management plans previously adopted, and, in the light of known or likely conditions, to chart the probable future course of the company's business if proposed or existing management policies are pursued. Add to these the important tasks of computing adequate premiums and of equitably distributing earnings to policyholders, and it is plain that the duties of the actuary are essentially dynamic and require the assistance of a trained staff.

Policyholders' Department.

A policyholder paying a visit to the new Acacia building will have at his disposal a staff of experts in the policyholders' service department to give him competent counsel. If a personal call cannot be made, a letter from the insured receives prompt and careful attention.

The functions performed by this department are wide and varied. Among the most important of these is changing the beneficiary designations of policies in accordance with policyholders' requests. Another function of the department is to make changes in policies in various ways to meet new requirements of the policyholders.

The department was established with the thought foremost that Acacia is a policyholders' company and, as such, every possible service should be accorded to the policyholder.

Claim Department.

The important function of paying claims is handled by Acacia's claim department, which is organized to assume this great responsibility with a high degree of efficiency.

During the past five years, Acacia has paid death claims totaling approximately $11,500,000. During each year of this period the payments have increased substantially, and during 1935 claim payments aggregated $2,700,000.

The service rendered by the company in settling claims is exceptional. For example, every regular claim is paid within 24 hours following the receipt of satisfactory proof of death. In addition, a representative of the company assists the beneficiary in the preparation of the claim papers, making it unnecessary for claimants to go to the expense of employing counsel.

This serivce is well illustrated in the case of a policyholder who died while visiting Washington. The widow, who lived in the West, immediately boarded a train for the National Capital. Upon her arrival she was surprised to find an Acacia representative at the station with a check for the full proceeds of her husband's policies. While she was en route to Washington the company learned of the policyholder's death, had the necessary claim papers signed and was able to pay the claim upon the beneficiary's arrival.

It is noteworthy that a large percentage of the claim payments is left with the company under deferred settlement agreements, which provide for the payment of the proceeds in installments or as an educational benefit for the children. Some of these settlement agreements are made with the insured while others are completed with the beneficiary following the insured's death. During 1935, approximately $700,000 of the total claims payable was left with the company under various settlement plans. The legal department supervises the drawing of these settlement agreements and administers the funds left in trust with the company.

This excellent service offers a safe investment for the beneficiary and provides installment payments of interest and principal to meet the beneficiary's needs. Interest is guaranteed on the funds left with the company at the rate of 3½ per cent per annum, and throughout the depression years the interest actually paid always exceeded the guaranteed rate. Installment payments now are being made to beneficiaries to the extent of approximately $250,000 annually.

One of the most important departments of a life insurance company is the underwriting and medical department, which is charged with the responsibility of exercising careful selection of the applicants for insurance so as to obtain a favorable mortality experience and a good persistency record.

The basis for underwriting is the mortality table which shows the expected number of persons that will die each year out of a large group of risks of similar type. Which policyholders will furnish claims each year is not known, but the number of deaths which ordinarily will occur can be anticipated with a very considerable degree of accuracy. So long as the number of claims made each year does not exceed the number expected, the mortality is favorable.

There are a number of factors that enter into the consideration of an application for life insurance, and certain standards have been set up for each factor. The chief factors are occupation, personal history, family history, physical condition, build, habits, morals and finances. All of these factors must be carefully considered by the underwriter in arriving at his decision with respect to the acceptability of each applicant for insurance.

Policy Department.

The great majority of applicants are found to be acceptable for insurance without question. A small proportion, usually around 5 per cent, present conditions which necessitate outright rejection. In some cases impairments are present, such as overweight or underweight, poor family history and hazardous or unhealthy occupations, on account of which the subsequent average duration of life cannot be expected to be as long as the standard or average.

In each case an estimate is made of the probable expectancy, or longevity of the applicant, and a corresponding increase of the premium charge is calculated to cover the extra mortality expected. The evaluation of risks and calculation of the proper premiums in this way is grounded on the vast combined experience of life insurance companies in general with such cases, so that the financial results obtained are satisfactory to the company and fair and just to all policyholders.

Indicative of the activity in this department is the fact that the number of applications for insurance handled monthly ranges from 1,200 to 1,700, covering a monthly issuance of insurance that has reached as high as $10,000,000.

Several thousand physicians throughout the country who make examinations for Acacia are under the active supervision of the medical director of the company. A laboratory is conducted at the home office for making special examinations.

The policy department consists of two divisions, namely, the application section and the policy issue section.

The application section receives all applications for new insurance as well as all other papers essential for the selection of the risk. Upon receipt of the papers, various routine reviews are made by clerks especially trained for checking and verifying the information furnished by the applicant. Additional attention is necessary where the application is received from one who already is a policyholder.

In such instances the new and old files must be combined before presenting the case to the medical and underwriting department. The primary function of the application section is to see that all necessary papers are on hand before the case is referred to the medical and underwriting department for final decision. Because Acacia desires to give applicants protection as quickly as possible, the company endeavors to pass on the application within the shortest period consistent with accurate work, and, if approved, to issue the policy without delay. More than 16,000 applications were handled by this section last year.

When the medical and underwriting department has approved the issuance of the policy, the file then

Impressive Ceremony Marks Opening of Acacia's Building

President Montgomery Receives Key From Architect's Representative as 400 Employes of Insurance Firm Look On.

A simple but deeply impressive ceremony marked the taking over by the Acacia Mutual Iife Insurance Co. of its magnificent new home office building on the morning of June 22.

In the presence of more than 400 employes President William Montgomery received the key of the building from W. W. Reynolds, representing the architect, who, in turn, had received it from L. S. Homer, representing the builder.

A highlight of the occasion was the presentation to President Montgomery of a token indicative of the esteem and appreciation of the employes. The presentation was made on behalf of the employes by Gladys Speakman, and drew from President Montgomery a heartfelt response.

In his introduction, Samuel E. Mooers, secretary of Acacia, paid high tribute to the vision, energy, and ceaseless devotion of President Montgomery, who for more than 42 years has been the company's directing head.

In response, President Montgomery lauded the work of the architect, the builder, the building and staff committees, and the personnel of Acacia, all of whom he said "have contributed so largely to the accomplishment of the goal we had set for ourselves."

"This building," President Montgomery declared, "is the attainment of an ideal. Its site, facing the United States Capitol and the Supreme Court Building, is truly inspirational. We must remember at all times that this building does not belong to you or me—it belongs to the policyholders of Acacia. The only way we can well and wisely and profitably use it is in rendering the very best possible service we can give to them.

"Let us appreciate, let us be grateful and thankful for this wonderful building which stands as a monument to Acacia and its ideals. Let us do another thing. Let us thank Almighty God for His guidance and His direction in putting into the minds and hearts of the people who have built this company, the directors who have guided its affairs, and those who have worked with it, the wisdom to contrive, the strength to support and the courage to carry through the ideals and principles that have gone into the making of the company. We have a trust here, a very sacred trust. Let us always be faithful to it."

WE WERE PLEASED

Pictures Tell Story of Acacia's Forward Strides Through the Years

penses. It was the first company to adopt that plan.

In 1909, on account of savings which the management of the association had been able to effect, an unusual action was taken—a dividend was paid to each member equal to 10 per cent of the annual premium on his insurance.

By 1911 larger quarters again were required, and Acacia had to move. In the four years since its last move both assets and insurance in force had doubled to $250,853 and $4,152,075, respectively.

There was no stopping such progress. The following year the association held its first agency convention, attended by 15 agents. The outbreak of the World War and its preliminary depressive effect did not change the upward trend. By 1917 Acacia was ready to own its first home office, at 1621 H street northwest. In the previous six years assets had increased five times, to $1,359,859; likewise insurance in force had increased five times, to $19,809,512.

United States participation in the World War did not stop Acacia progress, nor did the influenza epidemic of 1918. The business grew and prospered. In 1919, as a well-earned reward for ability proved, Mr. Montgomery was elected president.

In 1920 it was necessary to build an addition to the home office. In 1921 Acacia, having outgrown its enlarged quarters, moved to the Homer Building. Since its last move in 1917, assets had more than tripled, to $4,532,698; insurance in force had increased five times, to $101,222,295.

The following year the charter again was amended by Congress, making Acacia an old line company, just 19 years after the legal reserve basis had been established for its policies. This same amendment made it possible for Acacia to issue policies for any amount.

Pioneers New Principles.

In 1926 Acacia pioneered again and a new principle was adopted. Rates were reduced on new business and yet dividends continued to be paid. Thus policyholders received profit-sharing life insurance at non-participating rates. The success of this change in plan is mirrored in the continued rapid growth of the company.

As new quarters were required, Acacia began to build on its site at 101 Indiana avenue. In 1928 it moved to its new home, with a record, during the seven years since the previous move, of an asset increase of more than six times the 1921 figure—to $27,945,661, and an insurance in force increase of $200,000,000 to $300,925,984.

In 1929 and the years that followed were to see stark depression upon the land. Yet even this did not stop the march of Acacia progress. This steady march has always been marked by deep thinking, the establishment of right principles and steadfast practice of those principles. So, in 1932, Acacia's charter was again liberalized to extend the company's low rates and benefits to all who are physically, morally and otherwise acceptable.

Following the sale of its 101 Indiana avenue home office property to the Government in 1934, Acacia occupied temporary quarters while building its new structure at New Jersey and Louisiana avenues, facing the Capitol.

As Acacia moves into its new home, its assets are in excess of $62,500,000—more than double those of 1928, and its insurance in force amounts to well over a third of a billion dollars—$355,387,071—more than $50,000,000 increase over 1928, when the last main move was made.

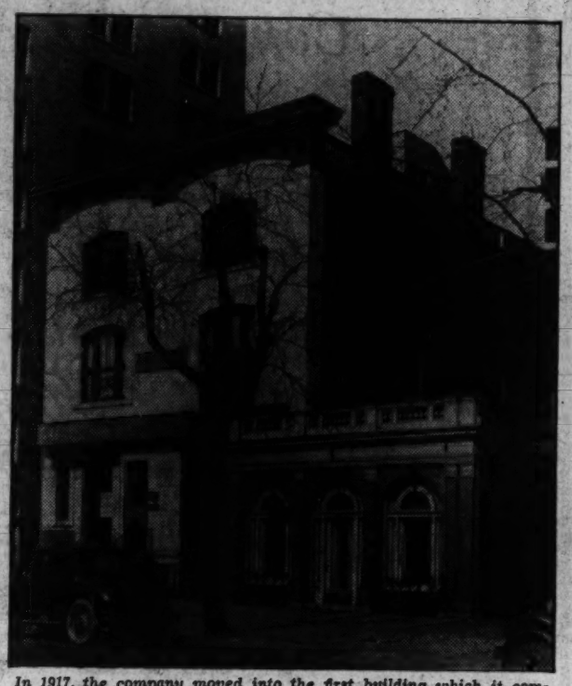
Since the establishment of the legal reserve basis it has returned more than $10,000,000 to policyholders in dividends; it has paid more than $16,000,000 in endowments and cash values to living policyholders; it has paid more than $23,000,000 to beneficiaries.

Wagner on Insurance.

Here is what Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, has to say about life insurance:

"Life insurance is a valuable asset, an asset that you should conserve.

"It is your most certain reserve, to which you can turn for assistance."



In 1917, the company moved into the first building which it completely owned and occupied, at 1621 H street.

Milestones of Acacia's Progress

Year	Assets	Insurance In Force
1893	$11,000	$500,000
1904	12,942	1,639,000
1907	124,912	2,166,575
1911	250,853	4,152,075
1917	1,359,859	19,809,512
1921	4,532,698	101,222,295
1928	27,943,661	300,925,984
AND NOW—as of May 31
1936	62,515,138	355,387,071

In 1921, Acacia moved into one vast floor of the Homer Building at 1621 H street.

Acacia Building Put Up Without Loss of Life

It is noteworthy that all of the work on the new home office building of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. was performed without the loss of a single life or even a serious accident. More than 900 men were employed on the job by the builder and 60 sub-contractors.

"All who contributed took a keen interest in the whole progress of the enterprise," Acacia officials state, "and now at its completion we are confident that they all have a personal pride in the resulting achievement in craftsmanship and beauty."

Floodlights of Acacia Add Beauty to Plaza

New nocturnal beauty is added to the Capitol Plaza area in Washington by the floodlighting of the new home office building of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.

The floodlighting is accomplished by means of thirty 1,000 watt projectors, each having a beam candle power "punch" of 78,600 candles. This means that a total beam candle power of 2,358,000 candles is directed over the front of the building.

Aphorisms

Every day thousands of persons say "No" to life insurance for the last time.

The man who saves with Acacia makes his own luck.

Money from Acacia is a thing you can buy on the installment plan that your widow will never be asked to finish paying for.

Wouldn't you rather have your family inherit your home than your mortgage?

Own Acacia insurance not because you are going to die but because you are going to live!

Every year the young man waits he buys less insurance for the same money.

Will your "retirement vacation" be with or without pay?

Acacia Mutual Life Not Operated for Gain

The Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. is "not operated for profit" but for the mutual benefit of its policyholders and their beneficiaries.

That stipulation is made in section 2 of the charter, issued to the company by the Congress of the United States.

That section declares that Acacia "shall forever be conducted for the mutual benefit of its policyholders and their beneficiaries, and not for profit."

Life Insurance Views Of Elbert Hubbard

Discussing life insurance, Elbert Hubbard said:

"The chief value of life insurance seems to be that it gives the man insured an increased capacity for meeting the natural and inevitable trials, difficulties, and obstacles of life.

"We fight the cussedness of inanimate things, the stupidity and inappreciation of the public—also, we fight our own limitations. But to meet these things with faith and fortitude and know in advance that you are victor—this is to live.

"That is the big thing at last—to live. And all that which helps us to live is good.

"The man who lives rightly will die gracefully when his time comes. And he'll not die a hundred deaths before."

New Home Office Includes Complete Modern Euipment

Every facility conducive to the comfort, convenience and efficiency of its employes has been built into the new home office building of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Having in mind the health and comfort of its workers, the service to its policyholders and the economical and efficient dispatch of the company's extensive and detailed business, Acaci has overlooked nothing in its new building which is offered by modern science for the furtherance of these ends.

Thus, the new building includes a complete air-conditioning system; the most efficient lighting facilities, sound-proof construction, an automatic inter-floor conveyor system, modern laboratory equipment and many other features.

The management is confident that in the present structure the company is able to render even more efficient service to its policyholders, mortgage loan clients and all others who have dealings with the company.

Acacia Everywhere Is a 'Good Citizen'

Financing Home Ownership Through Low Cost.

Acacia is a "good citizen" of every community in which it functions.

Not only does Acacia contribute in economic strength and growth by the protection it gives, by the funds it disburses to policyholders, beneficiaries, and business firms, and by mortgage loans, but the staff of the company everywhere is identified with progressive and worth-while civic enterprises.

In Community Chest campaigns and in numerous other movements designed for the public welfare, Acacia men and women contribute freely of their time, talents and resources.

The Acacian, like Acacia, is a "good citizen."

Firm's New Vault In the Basement Is Complete Unit

The security vault, located in the basement of the new Acacia Building, is a complete unit entirely independent of the rest of the building, and embodies all of the latest developments in vault construction.

Admittance to the vault area is by means of a private electric elevator, and the coupon room is protected by a heavy steel door glazed with bullet proof glass. The vault itself is further protected by a complete central station electrical alarm system.

Lapsed Policies Represent Loss To All Parties

Company, Policyholders and Agent All Losers.

"Do not lapse your policy in any other old line company to take one in Acacia. Do not lapse your policy in Acacia to take one in any other old line company. You lose in either case."

With this statement by President William Montgomery, the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. years ago set as its objective the best conservation record of any life insurance company in the United States.

Year after year, sometimes in the face of unusual difficulties, such as the depression, Acacia has established new high records in the vital field of conservation.

President Montgomery long ago saw that the lapsed policy represents a loss to the policyholder, a loss to the company and a loss to the agent who wrote it. The lapsed policy is the personification of economic waste, President Montgomery reiterated, and emphasized that Acacia would devote increasing attention to eradicating this evil.

The passing years have brought widespread recognition of the correctness of President Montgomery's view.

By reducing the rate of lapsation, thus keeping more policies in force, Acacia has aided many beneficiaries—wives, mothers, children and other dependents—who otherwise would have been left without the protection which life insurance gives.

Acacia Trains Its Employes

Special Courses Offered to Fit Workers for Higher Positions.

Every opportunity is given to the employes of Acacia to learn about their company and about the life insurance business.

Several classes are conducted each year under the direction of instructors employed by the company. The study courses are sponsored by the Life Office Management Association Institute and ordinarily require about three years for completion. In addition to both elementary and advanced studies in life insurance, the courses cover the principles and practices of Acacia.

There are 13 examinations in the Institute course. For satisfactorily passing the first four examinations, the student receives a diploma for completing the study of the principles of life insurance. For satisfactorily passing the next six examinations the student is entitled to receive the degree of Associate in the Institute. A further award of a fellowship degree is granted upon passing the three advanced examinations on more technical subjects in life insurance and the preparation of a thesis on some particular phase of the business.

Acacia employes have wholeheartedly and enthusiastically cooperated in making this educational work a decided success. During the past year five classes were conducted, in which 75 employes were enrolled. Prior to the 1936 examinations there were 20 employes, who had completed the first course and received their diplomas. One employe has successfully completed the first ten examinations and received the associate degree. These courses were not organized until 1932 and because of the intensive study required there has not yet been sufficient time for any of the employes to win the fellowship award. Sixty-two employes of the company took a total of 155 examinations in May, 1936. The result of these examinations have not yet been announced by the Institute.

Acacia Constructive Force in U. S. Economic Life

1,000 on Its Payroll In 150 Communities

Company Has 125,000 Policyholders in Every State; Loans Help Promote Construction of Homes; $6,000,000 Paid Out in 1935.

The Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. is a national organization, and as such is a constructive factor of outstanding importance in the economic life of the Nation as a whole. With its home office in Washington and through its branch offices, mortgage loan correspondents, and representatives in numerous cities Acacia contributes materially to the well-being of countless communities and individuals throughout the country.

For example, Acacia employs more than 1,000 persons in more than 150 communities, and in all of these communities the company and its representatives purchase a substantial volume of goods and services.

Acacia's more than 125,000 policyholders may be found in every State in the Union.

Through the long term low interest monthly payment mortgage loan plan, which Acacia originated and developed, it has assisted thousands of persons to buy or construct homes and has thus aided materially in stimulating home ownership and further economic progress.

Through its purchases of bonds Acacia has helped to finance public utility, railroad and industrial enterprises; all of which contribute to the well-being of the Nation.

During 1935 Acacia paid out more than $6,000,000 to living policyholders and beneficiaries. It is noteworthy that of this total the greater proportion was paid to living policyholders in the form of endowments, dividends, disability claims, and similar payments. In addition it has loaned to its policyholders to help them in time of need more than $16,000,000. In many cases these loans were made at a time when no other source of funds was available to these policyholders.

Survey Shows 5 of 100 Men Independent at 65

Life insurance not only affords protection to beneficiaries, but provides a comfortable old age for the policyholder himself. Life insurance is the most economical and the most efficient form of thrift ever devised.

The Old Age Security Commission of New York State has found that at age 65 five out of every 100 men have independent incomes; 28 keep on working, and 67 must be supported by others.

The average of those who must continue to work, or who must be supported by others, could be materially reduced by wider use of the easy form of thrift provided by insurance.

Acacia Has Library.

A completely equipped library is one of the interesting features of the new Acacia building. The library includes hundreds of volumes on the various phases of life insurance. There books are available for use by all Acacia employes.

Interior of New Building Reveals Careful Planning for Efficiency

unit entirely independent of the rest of the building, and embodies all of the latest developments in vault construction. Admittance to the vault area is by means of a private elevator, and the coupon room is protected by a heavy steel door glazed with bullet-proof glass. The vault itself is further protected by a complete central electrical alarm system.

Above the sixth floor is a spacious penthouse accommodating the elevator machinery and the rest of the air-conditioning equipment.

The first floor provides space for the mail and file departments, duplicating department, the purchasing agent's office, the building superintendent's office and the supply department.

On the second floor, which is the main entrance floor, the central sector is set aside for the entrance lobby, which rises two stories. The area west of the lobby accommodates the investment department; to the east of the lobby are the cashier's, policyholders' service, treasurer's and claim departments.

On the third floor, surrounding the upper portion of the entrance lobby, is a mezzanine. To the west are the phone switchboard room, the library and the District of Columbia sales agency. To the east are located the field, advertising and agency accounting departments.

Club Given Spacious Rooms.

In addition, spacious rooms have been set aside on this floor for the Acacia Club. This club is an unique feature originated by President Montgomery eight years ago. It was established and is maintained for the service and benefit of policyholders of the company visiting Washington. Here they find lounge rooms, writing facilities, a parcel checking service and many other facilities conducive to the comfort of the visitor, including shower baths. The club secretary is in charge of the room and either he or an assistant is available at all times to help each visitor to make hotel, train or plane reservations, to arrange for sight seeing trips around the Capital or nearby Maryland and Virginia, and to furnish such information as the visitor may desire. Every Acacia policy holder is entitled to membership in the club and is invited to make use of its facilities without any obligation or charge. In the eight years the Acacia Club has been in existence thousands of policy holders from all over the world have visited the club-rooms and have availed themselves of these services.

On the fourth floor are the offices of the medical director and his assistants, a modern and completely equipped laboratory, the medical examination rooms, the policy underwriting department, the stenographic pool and the photostat department.

The fifth floor accommodates the actuarial, the reinstatement and premium accounting departments. Emergency rooms are also located on this floor, in which employes may obtain first aid and treatment for minor illness. A nurse is on duty at all times.

The sixth floor is devoted largely to executive offices, including the board of directors rooms and offices of the president, vice president and general counsel, secretary, general comptroller and branch auditor. Space is also provided on floor for the legal, general comptroller's and secretary's departments.

Materials Carefully Chosen.

Materials of construction throughout received most careful consideration by the building committee, the architects and the builder, in order to insure permanence and low maintenance cost without undue expenditure. It was the aim of the company in its selection of material and the form of design to consider only fitness for service and purpose, all forms of extravagance being avoided, but, on the other hand, no detail of the work or design has suffered from those economies which frequently are realized only in the initial cost.

The building has been made as nearly fireproof as modern building science can devise. All exterior window and door frames, interior window and door frames, doors, trim and departmental subdivisions are either steel or bronze, except where on the executive floor natural wood paneling has been used.

The entrance lobby, as the central point, has received a richer treatment, both in materials and design, than any other part of the building. The lobby floor as well as the floor of the elevator lobby adjoining is of Virginia greenstone, with borders of Belgian black marble. In the center is a medallion composed of Belgian black marble, Cardiff green and Virginia greenstone, separated by bronze joint strips.

The wall surfaces of these spaces are finished with rellante and St. Genevieve marbles, while on the floor of the balcony (on the third floor overlooking the entrance lobby) and the elevator lobby adjoining, Lunelle rose marble, with a border of Virginia greenstone, has been used. Rellante marble was used for the four fluted columns extending from the floor of the main entrance lobby to the ceiling of the third floor, these columns weighing approximately 11 tons apiece.

The elevator lobbies on all other floors have walls of Botticino marble with base of Verde antique and floors of Tennessee marble with Cardiff green marble border. Tennessee marble has also been used on the sixth floor reception lobby. The stair treads throughout are of Virginia greenstone.

Working Areas Dignified.

A great deal of study has been given to working conditions and to insure the utmost efficiency as well as comfort, the entire building above the basement has been air-conditioned. This system furnishes fresh air delivered at the ceiling of all rooms. The air is washed, conditioned and dehumidified, insuring a pure supply. In addition, all ceilings have been acoustically treated to deaden sound. Large windows fitted with venetian blinds admit ample daylight. Some 1,200 fixtures provide semi-indirect lighting. A circulating system of cool drinking water has also been installed, with drinking fountains at convenient points. An underfloor electrical duct system for both high and low tension wires was provided to give outlets wherever needed throughout the floor areas. There are several low-tension service systems throughout the building providing for telephone service, watchman's service, program bell system, fire alarm, burglar alarm, electric clock system and other services of this nature. Intercommunicating telephones and automatic conveyor system for conveying files from one floor to another and a co-ordinating electric time system controlling all clocks were included in the installation.

The large open working areas are substantially but plainly treated. In those few instances where special treatment was appropriate, the design and materials, though rich, were kept in the proper sense of value.

The president's office has been treated both as to design and furnishings in keeping with the general character of the building. A fireplace finished in Famosa marble forms a focal feature of dignity and richness. The walls and floor are finished in teak, the severity of the acoustically treated ceiling being relieved by cross bands of plaster. Directly across the reception lobby is the board room, accessible through a waiting and cloak room. One is immediately impressed with the quiet dignity of this room. The walls and cornice are finished in French walnut, the ceiling being treated as in the president's office with acoustical tile with plaster cross banding. The three large windows have green and gold drapes which harmonize with the green chenille carpet. The fireplace, with facing of Rellante marble and wooden mantel, is located between the two doorways entering the reception lobby.

In utility spaces vitreous and glazed tiles have been used for floors and walls. In order to insure the utmost sanitary conditions, all facilities have been kept free from the floor, all being wall hung.

In planning the air conditioning, the run of ducts and location of air supply and re-circulating registers have been studied to permit the utmost flexibility in departmental layouts. A system of low pressure heating has also been installed, automatically controlled by thermostats strategically located. All radiators have been concealed within the thickness of the exterior walls. Steam for heating is furnished by boilers having sufficient capacity to heat the next building unit when erected; while the chimney has been designed to serve the boilers necessary for the complete ultimate scheme.

The material used in the construction of the building gave employment to men in practically every State in the Union. The sources of the materials and the localities in which some of the main items were fabricated are as follows:

Granite—4,200 cubic feet. Quarried and cut at Concord, N. H.

Fabrication—Billet slabs at Sparrows Point Md.; balance of work at Bethlehem, Pa.

Belgian Black	Belgium	Alabama
Lunelle Rose	France	Alabama

The 60 subcontractors and over 900 men were employed on the job. All the work on the building was performed without the loss of a single life or even a serious accident.

The office of President William Montgomery is shown below. On the right, a typical scene in one of the many spacious working areas of the new building. The lower right hand picture shows board of directors room.

Some Pertinent Facts About Acacia Life Insurance Co.

Here in brief form are some pertinent facts about the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.:

Acacia mortality is lower than that of any of the 20 largest companies.

Acacia has had one directing head for more than 43 years—President William Montgomery.

Acacia's new home office building is erected on an historic site opposite the United States Capitol in Washington, D. C. The waters of ancient and storied Tiber Creek flow beneath the building.

The building has been designed so that, while it is a complete unit in itself, additional units can be economically added as they are needed by the growth of the company. It is planned that ultimately the building will cover the entire square.

Acacia's payments to policyholders and beneficiaries during the past ten years have totaled well over $45,000,000.

Acacia's insurance in force now stands at more than one-third of a billion dollars.

Acacia employs more than 1,000 people.

Employes Take Part in Many Sport Activities

Baseball, Basketball and Tennis Only Few of Their Interests.

Acacia employes take part in many recreational activities. Baseball, basketball and tennis teams have been formed and have played in leagues throughout the city. The baseball team has been especially successful, in that for two consecutive years Acacia has won the championship of its league.

These activities are supported and directed by the good fellowship committee, made up of representatives from the various departments in the home office, which has complete charge of Acacia's good fellowship fund. Every employe contributes a moderate sum each month to this fund and the company contributes an amount equal to the sum paid in by all the employes.

In addition to directing the athletic activities, the fund provides money for flowers, fruits, books and other gifts to those employes who are sick. It also gives financial aid, advances hospitalization costs, etc., where needed.

In the recreation hall the good fellowship fund has provided ping pong tables and the sport has become very popular.

Perhaps the activity which deserves the most praise is that of providing Christmas baskets for needy persons. Every year Acacia employes pack and distribute to needy Washingtonians 150 baskets of food.

Acacia Dedication Slated August 12

Formal dedication of the new home office building of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. will take place on the night of August 12, it is announced by President William Montgomery. Present on that occasion will be outstanding leaders in civic and national affairs, and persons prominent in business, financial and insurance circles. All sections of the country will be represented.

On August 10 and 11, a meeting of Acacia branch managers will be held in the new building, and on August 12, 13 and 14, there will be a convention of agents of the company who have qualified for attendance. All these managers and agents will be present at the dedication ceremonies.

is referred to the policy issue section. Trained clerks write up the policy, paying particular attention to see that the laws of the State in which the policyholder lives are complied with. All work must be done thoroughly and checked exhaustively before the policy is sent to the agent for delivery to the policyholder. When the policy has been issued the application and all other papers of value are arranged properly in a file folder and sent to the general file department.

Premium Accounting Department.

The premium accounting department is responsible for the maintenance of all individual Acacia policyholders' accounts. Every transaction involving any policyholder's account must be recorded in this department. Information concerning the exact status of any policy must be available immediately to any of the company's other departments which may require such information in serving the policyholder. Approximately 70,000 premium notices and receipts are prepared and sent out by this department each month in connection with premiums due from policyholders.

Cashier's Department.

The cashier's department comes into more frequent and personal contact with Acacia's Washington policyholders, members of their families and home owners than does any other department of the company. As many as 3,000 payments are received across the counter in the course of a month. However, a majority of payments are received by mail, and it is not unusual for the department to clear more than 12,500 remittances in a month.

In addition to its functions as a local collection office in Washington, the cashier's department also operates as a financial clearing house for all other cash income received by the company, including that deposited and reported daily by the branch offices and other official representatives of Acacia.

Comptroller's Department.

The general comptroller's department is the central accounting office for Acacia. The accounting activities performed in all other departments of the company are supervised, co-ordinated, and audited by the general comptroller's department.

Acacia files an annual report of the years' business in the District of Columbia and in 47 States and the Panama Canal Zone, in all of which it is licensed to do business.

The form and content of these reports are in accordance with rules and regulations issued by the superintendents of insurance, and each report is in such detail that it requires a volume of 56 pages, each sheet a foot wide and nearly two feet long, to list all the information. These reports are prepared under the supervision of the general comptroller.

The general comptroller's office also is responsible for the preparation of all tax returns required by the Federal Government, the States and the municipalities.

Accounting Department.

The functions of the agency accounting department are related closely to and co-ordinated with the activities of the field department, already mentioned, for it is essential that the men who secure the business of the company be compensated promptly and properly.

This department is responsible for the calculation of all compensation to supervisors, managers and agents, and the financial and insurance accounting involving the field organization of the company. A considerable portion of the work of the department necessarily is statistical and analytical, in helping the field department to get vital facts about production, conservation, manpower, and the amount of money expended, and to judge values in proportion to expenditures.

Branch Auditor's Department.

The branch auditor's department is charged with making periodical examinations and audits of all branch offices. In addition the branch office salaries, rents, incidental expenses, and equipment purchases are handled by the branch auditor's office. It is also this department's function to see that the equipment and fittings of each branch office are conducive to efficient work.

Secretary's Office.

The secretary is the custodian of all the records of the company. Additional duties of his office relate to the following subjects; namely, personnel, office procedures, emergency room, library, life insurance classes, building maintenance, and telephone service.

The objective of the secretary's office always is greater efficiency and economy in the execution of the work of the home office. Every economy effected directly benefits every policyholder by helping to create a larger return of savings, with a resultant lowering of the net cost of insurance.

Advertising Department.

Acacia is "dedicated to service," and this purposeful creed is kept constantly in mind in the preparation of its printed matter. Whether directed to its policyholders and prospective policyholders, or to its agents and managers, Acacia's advertising strives to give information clearly, accurately, and interestingly.

In the annual report to policyholders, for instance, President Montgomery takes his readers behind the scenes and explains briefly, but fully the work of the year in the interest of Acacia's owners, its policyholders. In the company's descriptive circulars, booklets, and newspaper advertising the same method is employed.

For four years, the last three of them consecutive, Acacia has been awarded a place as one of the 50 direct mail advertising leaders in the United States and Canada. Acacia is the only life insurance company to have received this award four times.

Acacia Club.

The unique Acacia Club, with a membership of more than 80,000, is made up of Acacia policyholders who live outside of Washington. The clubrooms are comfortably furnished, and the club itself gives many services which are much appreciated by the visiting member. Here he can have his hotel or tourist home reservation made; sightseeing trips arranged; railroad, airplane, or steamship accommodations made; and touring information and other services rendered. Mail, telegrams, and phone calls can be routed to the club.

Quotations From Presidents Stress Need for Insurance

Roosevelt, Coolidge, Wilson, Taft and T. R. All Applauded System of Guarantees Against Adversities of Human Life.

Presidents of the United States have been outspoken in their praise of life insurance, emphasizing its many advantages to the individual and to the welfare and well-being of the Nation as a while. Following are pertinent excerpts from statements on life insurance made by Presidents.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt:

"Life insurance should be considered not as an extreme, but as savings. It should be the first factor in any program of investment. It should be the last to be let go. In hard times, it is especially important, and we should make every effort to keep our old life insurance in force.

"No matter who he may be or how he may be related to organized society, every normal individual has had thrust upon him certain social obligations. Certain expectations on the part of his fellows have been formulated in advance of his entry; and all thrift is, in the final analysis, an effort to meet those expectations and fulfill those social obligations.

"Life insurance enables him to do that to the fullest and with the greatest of ease and certainty.

Medium of Saving.

"Insurance offers men and women an opportunity to pool the financial effects of chance misfortunes, and is also a good medium of saving and investment. The wide distribution of insurance in this country is an invaluable factor in our daily life, and is, I believe, one of the finest results of our national development."

Calvin Coolidge:

"Insurance is the modern method by which men make the uncertain certain, and the unequal equal. It is the means by which success is almost guaranteed. It is part charity and part business, but all common sense. Through its operation the strong contribute to the support of the weak, and the weak secure, not by favor, but by right, duly purchased and paid for, the support of the strong. Every insurance policy is a declaration of independence, a charter of economic freedom. He who holds one has overcome adversity."

Provision for Others.

Woodrow Wilson:

"If a man does not provide for his children; if he does not provide for all those dependent upon him, and if he has not that vision of conditions to come, and that care for the days that have not yet dawned, which we sum up in the whole idea of thrift and saving, then he has not turned his eyes to any adequate conception of human life. We are in this world to provide not for ourselves, but for others, and that is the basis of economy."

William Howard Taft:

"Life insurance is a wonderful aid, especially to those who are dependent upon salaries and professional incomes. It is the only way by which we can make our lives happy in the thought that we are putting by something so that those who are near to us may live on after us and not feel pinched or subjected to poverty when the bread-winner is gone."

Theodore Roosevelt:

"Life insurance increases the stability of the business world, raises its moral tone and puts a premium upon those habits of thrift and saving which are so essential to the welfare of the people as a body."

Charles G. Dawes, former Vice President:

"In my experience as a banker hardly a month has passed when I have not had brought to my attention numerous instances where men left estates in such debt that the savings of a lifetime would have been wiped out had it not been for reliable insurance that those men were wise enough to hold."

Insurance Profession Offers Promising Career

'Best-Paid Hard Work' Has Future

Income Is Favorable to That of Doctor or Lawyer.

Acacia Plan Assures 'Social Security' to All Agents.

Life insurance offers an opportunity for a career for young and intelligent men which is particularly welcome these days. Fresh from school and hard put to find a means of earning a livelihood, thousands are finding not only immediate employment with a good income, but also a foundation on which to build a career in life insurance selling. They are engaging in a business where the compensation increases with the years and in which it is possible to build up an attractive income retirement fund for later life.

In such times as these, the career of life insurance selling comes like a long-sought answer to the problem which faces many persons. There is a dignity today about the profession of life underwriting that has been won by the ability of life insurance to meet all the tests of the depression years and to come through with honor and high praise.

The increasing dependence of buyers of life insurance upon the counsel which they may obtain from qualified representatives of the business; the increased opportunities for study and advancement in the field of life insurance and the allied fields of finance, economics and law, have gone together to raise the status of life insurance selling to that of a profession.

"Best Paid Hard Work."

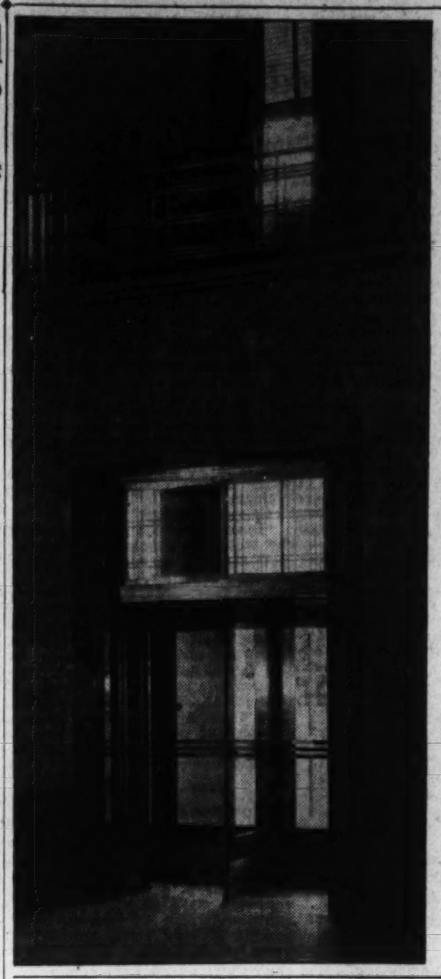
Life insurance selling has long been known as "the best paid hard work." Commissions on sales and continued compensation for service rendered to policyholders already sold make it possible for the person entering this business to earn an income that will compare favorably with the income of a person who, after years of preparation, enters the practice of law, medicine, or dentistry.

The rapidity with which this income can be built to respectable proportions adds to its attractiveness. The commissions or "fees" earned by the life underwriter are collectable—guaranteed and paid by the employer company. There is not the loss in collections that faces every professional man. There is, too, the satisfying realization that the life underwriter fixes his own compensation by the extent to which he invests intelligent service in the business. It is only necessary to compare this opportunity with that of the salaried man, whose worth must always be determined by someone else, to appreciate the advantage of compensation in the business of life insurance.

Happily, Acacia has introduced the idea of "social security" into its contract for life underwriters or agents. The "service commissions" paid for service rendered policyholders increase as each agent increases his number of clients and the amount of insurance placed in force through his efforts. There is no limit to the number of years these "service commissions" will be paid, for Acacia was among the first to recognize the value of continuous trained service on the part of its underwriters.

Under Acacia's plan, substantial bonuses may be earned semiannually by the extra service rendered the company and its policyholders in the careful selection of the policyholders and attention to their life insurance needs.

In the later years, the Acacia life underwriter finds fulfillment of his dreams. At 60 and again at 65 his contract requirements are so adjusted that extra time is available to him for relaxation and enjoyment without loss of compensation. Should he fail to reach these later years, the contract provides life insurance for his dependents.



Acacia's front doorway, seen from the interior of the lobby with part of the gallery and one of the upper row of windows, from which the Capitol's dome is visible.

Acacia's Duties Are Intrusted To Committees

Directors, Staff Members Comprise Personnel of Important Groups.

Important duties in connection with the work of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. are entrusted to committees, the members of which bring to their tasks highly specialized knowledge.

Some of these committees are composed of members of the board of directors and others are made up of staff members. All, however, play important roles in the operation of the company and in insuring efficient, economical and forward-looking service to the policyholders and to the company as a whole.

Two important committees, provided by Acacia's by-laws, are the executive and finance committees.

General Supervision.

It is the function of the executive committee to exercise general supervision over the company's business and over all expenditures and over the settlement of all claims, and, during the interim of the meetings of the board of directors to exercise the powers and duties of the board.

The finance committee, subject to the regulations prescribed by the board of directors, has supervision of the company's investments. It passes upon the purchase and sale of bonds and other securities, gives approval or disapproval to applications for mortgage loans, and acts in a general way on all questions of investment.

In addition to the committees named, there are other operating committees of the company. One of the important committees of this type is the advisory committee, composed of officers and department heads of the company. The duty of this committee is to consider questions affecting the general policies of the company and to submit recommendations thereon to the executive committee. Additional operating committees are the underwriting, mortgage loan and personnel committees, each of which functions in connection with a particular phase of the business of the company.

All committees of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. function under the general direction of the board of directors.
